Mrs. Hermie Hodges spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. MisKelley.

Several from here attended the singing at Mars Hill Sunday afternoon and enjoyed it very much.

Mr. Wesley Veasey, Mr. and Mrs Lloyd Veasey and son, Jack Edward, and Jean Veasey of Birmingham spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Veasey.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Gibson spent Sunday with Mr and Mrs. M. J. Davenport.

Mrs. Sam Smitherman and children, Alice Faye and Gerald, of Randolph, were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Gibson.

We were glad to have Wesley and Lloyd Veasey at church Sunday to help in the singing.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Davnport visited the Armstrongs and Pools Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodie Rasberry spent the week end in Birmingham.—Mrs. D. E. Moore.

JACKSON

All bids on the Jackson Chapel property were rejected. It is understood that the church was the highest bidder, but for what reason it was rejected, we do not know. So all who contributed to this fund, please meet at Jackson Chapel next Sunday at 10 o'clock and see what to do about it.

The Superintendent said we could go ahead and use the property until further notice. So, remember the date, and be sure to come the first Sunday in October.

Last Sunday the church met and called their pastor for the coming year, and also elected delegates to the Association. Rev. Clyde Davis was elected as our pastor. Come and hear him.

Preaching day will be announced later. The Young People's Class is doing nicely; one was saved at their meeting Sunday night.

Remember the Sunday School at 10 o'clock each Sunday. Everyone come and bring the family.

ARCHERS CHAPEL

The regular preaching service will be held this Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Plans will be made for some special services in the near future.

No wants too small or great that a Want Ad will not solve.

Demand for passenger car tires has increased so rapidly since the lifting of gasoline rationing that it will be many months before motorists get all the new tires they need, OPA District Director Irby A. Jones, announced this week in Montgomery.

He said that unfilled applications for passenger car tires are about all time high, while inventories are at an all-time low the country over.

It is expected that the backlog of approved but unfilled applications may total one million for the country by the end of September.

"These are all applications that have been approved, but local boards can't issue certificates for their purchase because passenger tire quotas have been exhausted," he said.

Can We Stop Helping Now?

Beginning October 9th, Alabama War Chest, in association with the National War Fund, will make its fourth and last appeal to the people of our county. Funds raised in this final drive will finance the work of 19 war service agencies to complete or until January 1, 1947.

Some in our county are now asking: "This is all fine work. But now the war is over, why should we support these philanthropies? Why give this year to the Alabama War Chest?

The answer to this question boils down to the hard fact that there's still a big job to be done. The War Chest agencies that serve "our own and our Allies" can't stop helping now. The USO, which gets more than half the total War Chest Fund can't stop its clubs and camp shows in occupation areas, in hospitals and training camps at home. And those agencies which help Allied peoples who have fought with us for victory cannot desert them suddenly in their time of greatest need. True, the war is over—but the peace is not yet won. There can be no real peace in our lifetime—as long as hunger, sickness and fear stalk the world. In total victory we can all rejoice. But we cannot forget so soon those who fought for us and those who fought with us.

That's why this final Alabama War Chest drive is imperatively necessary. That's why we can't stop helping now.

Oversea Vets Urged Join Local Post V. F. W.

If you are an overseas veteran who served in the military, naval or marine corps in any foreign wars there are ten reasons why you should join the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S.:

1. Because it offers many opportunities for practical patriotic service to the nation. The V.F.W. is primarily dedicated to the principle that seeks to honor the dead by helping the living. The care and welfare of America's disabled veterans, their dependents, and the dependents of America's deceased veterans is the first objective of the V.F.W. program.

2. Because there is no substitute for the comradeship that exists among the overseas veterans. The emblem is a mark of distinction for the soldier, sailor and marine who has served in time of war, ashore or afloat in actual danger zones beyond the continental limits of the United States.

3. Because it is the only veterans organization that gives you the exclusive companionship of men who speak the language of overseas veterans. No other veterans organization has the V.F.W.'s basic qualification-campaign medal service.

4. Because it gives you a chance to help your less fortunate comrades. Every V.F.W. post maintains separate funds to be used exclusively for relief purposes in emergency among veterans and their families in distress. No worthy member of the V.F.W. needs to seek public charity as long as his post is in a position to be of help. The V.F.W. will always take care of its own without humiliation or embarrassment to those it assists.

5. Because your dependents may some day need the help and advice of an unselfish organized veterans agency. The V.F.W. is the only veteran fraternity that maintains a National Home for the orphans of deceased members.

6. Because the veteran welfare objective of the V.F.W. promise security insurance against the hazards of the future years. The V.F.W. is the first nationally recognized veterans organization to sponsor Congressional enactment of a general disability pension of disabled veterans of all wars.

7. Because the Cross of the Malta is the symbol of your personal investment in the preservation of the American form of Government and the American way of life. The V.F.W believes that every American citizen owes undivided allegience to the Stars and Stripes.

8. Because it is non-partisan. The V.F.W. believes that loyalty of America demands the sacrifice of personal prejudice — that true patriotism must never be tainted by political bias.

9. Because you may need the aid of an expert on matters pertaining to hospitalization, pensions or compensation. The V.F.W. National Rehabilitation Service at Washington, D.C., is prepared to serve the nation's disabled veterans and prosecute their government claims without fear or favor and without charge.

10. Because the V.F.W. needs eligible veterans in order to maintain its strength as a national organization which speaks for America's overseas veterans before local, state and national public officials and law-making bodies, and to preserve the benefits already created in behalf of America's disabled veterans, their dependents and the widows and orphans of deceased veterans.

You may affiliate with the Chilton County Post 3193 in Clanton, Ala. Take your discharge with you and see one of the officers of the post if you are eligible and attend the meetings at the City Hall on each fourth Monday nights.

MT. PLEASANT P.-T. A. WILL MEET WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17TH

The Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School Parent-Teachers Association will have a special meeting next Wednesday night, October 17th, at 7:30 o'clock.

We will elect new officers at this meeting. Also Miss McKee will have a picture show for us.

The school bus will pick up everyone who wishes to come at designated parts.

Each and every patron of this community has a cordial invitation.—Mrs. W. M. Blalock, Pres.

CONDUCTED BY REV. G. G. WILLIAMS

Mr. William T. Tracy, age 67, died at Thorsby, Ala., at 3:45 Monday. Funeral services were held Thursday at 10:00 a.m. at the Baptist Church; interment in Thorsby Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife; three sons—Earl of Selma, Pat of Chattanooga, Tenn., Fred of Tallassee, Ala.; three daughters—Mrs. Leonard Fowler of Childersburg, Mrs. Vesta Barnum of Wildarado, Texas, Mrs. Clyde Pendergrass of Hixson, Tenn.; one brother, Allen Tracy, of Clanton; 13 grandchildren, three great grandchildren.

BEST SEED POTATOES SELECTED AT HARVEST

Farmers can improve both the yield and quality of their sweet potatoes by selecting seed at digging time.

"It is a very simple operation and will pay big for the time and effort put on it," says Lyle Brown, API extension horticulturist.

Someone who understands what is to be selected should follow the plan as the potato rows are turned over and the potatoes from high-producing hills of good color and shape should be saved for seed, he advises.

Hills with three or four good potatoes are considered satisfactory, but, of course, the best should be the goal of the selector. These are put in separate crates and stored so they can be kept free of disease.

Sweet potatoes, particularly of the Porto Rico variety, have a tendency to "run out" or produce types not true to the original plants. If no selection is practiced this will eventually mean that the crop will be of undesirable shapes, sizes and color. On the other hand, the best can always be improved by selection of seed.

One bushel of selected seed will furnish plants for about a quarter of an acre and vine cuttings from that will set one to two acres from which the main seed crop can come the next year. It pays to grow the seed crop from the very best No. 1 marketable potatoes.

WALKER APPOINTED SERVICE COMMISSIONER CHILTON COUNTY

Horton Walker, who served from 1941 to 1944, of which two years and seven months was overseas, in the U. S. Army in Foreign Service, has been appointed to succeed G. C. Walker as County Service Commissioner under the Department of Veterans Affairs in Chilton County. He has opened offices upstairs over the City Grill and states that he is ready to lend aid to any veteran needing his services.

PREACHING AT JACKSON CHAPEL

Next Saturday night there will be preaching by our pastor, Rev. Clyde Davis. At this time we understand Mr. Lorenza Sanders and Mr. Joe Jackson have some matters to discuss with the church. If so, a special conference will be called for that purpose.

Our regular preaching days will be every first and third Saturday, Sunday and Sunday nights of each month. Our Young People's Class is doing nicely. Sunday School each Sunday at 10 o'clock.

The church has decided to put the church funds in the bank for the time being until we see further. Anyone prefering their part, just write Mrs. Velma Easterling, Clanton Route 5 the Church Clerk, and she will write you a check for your part. If not, as soon as we can get some understanding, we will proceed to travel. So your money is good—don't worry.

Remember, you are welcome. Come bring the family.—C. J. Moates.

Mr. Martin P. Johnson, age 82, died at Jemison, Ala., October 3rd, at 11:15 a.m. Funeral services will be held at Mars Hill Thursday at 2:00 p.m., conducted by Rev. Homer Carroll; interment in Mars Hill Cemetery.

He is survived by two sons, Hughey Lee of Birmingham, Eugene W. Amory, Miss.; one daughter, Mrs. Sueid Smith, Jemison; one sister, Mrs. Bee Goddard, Jemison Route 1; one half sister, Mrs. Rose Dominy, Birmingham; four grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Spigener Funeral Home will be in charge.

STUDY CLUB HOLDS FALL MEETING

The first Fall meeting of the Study Club was held last Friday at the home of Mrs. Hugh Jones. A lovely arrangement of flowers in the Club colors of green and white were used in the living and dining rooms.

Reading of the Club collect opened a half hour business session, presided over by Mrs. J. P. Hayes, retiring president. All committees outlined splendid projects for the coming season.

Before the program Mrs. J. P. Hayes, President, and Mrs. Joe Mullins, Secretary, were presented dainty corsages in tones of red, white and blue, by the program directors.

As a memorial to our late Commander-In-Chief and boys who gave their lives to make the San Francisco Conference possible. The prayer offered by Rev. John K. Cartwright of Washington, D. C., in Constitution Hall, was read by Mrs. Joe Mullins. Congratulations were then extended to soldiers, sailors and marines, who won the victory. In this tribute, Eleanor Warr was "The Goddess of Liberty" as "The Star-Spangled Banner" was sung.

Mrs. Omar Reynolds gave the setting for the San Francisco Conference. Mrs. Hugh Jones, "The San Francisco Conference. Plans and Ideals."

"The United Nations Charter," Mrs. John Mullins.

Manifest was the careful preparation of these excellent papers by the program directors, Mesdames Hugh Jones and John Mullins.

A lovely plate further carrying out the patriotic theme was served by the hostess to twenty-five members and guests.

State Capitol News

Montgomery, Ala. — Attention of small employers was called this week by W. Emmett Brooks, Director of the State Department of Labor, to a recent order of the War Labor Board which removes employers of eight or less persons from the exemption which they have heretofore enjoyed with respect to raising and lowering wages without approval of the WLB.

Under the recent order, he pointed out, wages paid by employers of eight or less cannot be raised without approval of the board unless the increase involves no addition to selling prices. By the same rule, wages cannot be lowered under any circumstances without the approval of the board.

The general penalty which has been applicable all along to employers of more than eight persons now applies in all cases. This penalty is that the employer is not allowed to make any deduction of any part of the employee's salary as a business expense in his income tax return where wages are either raised or lowered in violation of the Wage Freeze Order.

Tax collections by the State Department of Revenue for the fiscal year 1944-45, which ended September 30th, reached the record total of $52,290,111. This was an increase of $3,886,363 over the preceding year, when collections totalled $48,430,747. Largest increases were sales tax, up $2,257,512, and gasoline tax, which showed increas of $1,474,954.

Gov. Chauncey Sparks has appointed A. M. McDowell of Eufaula as associate judge of the Court of Appeals, to fill vacancy created by death of Judge James Rice. Judge McDowell served as legal adviser to Gov. Sparks during the early part of his administration, and is a former State senator from Barbour County. He is a member of a family long prominent in the public life of the State.

Several petitions for authority to engage in motor freight operations were recently denied by the Alabama Public Service Commission. Petitions turned down included: Mercer Express Inc., seeking to operate between Birmingham and Florence, and between Birmingham and Huntsville with Guntersville and Russellville as off-route points. Red Ball Freight Lines, Inc., seeking to establish route from Birmingham to Athens, Scottsboro, Fort Payne, Gadsden and back to Birmingham. R. K. Sandlin who sought authority to operate between Birmingham and Montgomery, and also as a carrier of household goods between points in Alabama over irregular routes.

Despite rumors to the contrary, the fat situation is still difficult. It is unlikely that any appreciable supply of oils will be received from the areas surrendered by the Japanese for some time to come.

Salvaged fats, so important in war, are most important also in the reconversion program. Therefore, the fat salvage program will be continued for some time yet.

The increase in the quarterly quota of fats and oils for production of civilian supplies of soap, is due to military cut-backs and releases of government stock piles.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Chart Economic Reform for Japs; Back Vets' Rights to Old Jobs; U.S. Acts to Settle Oil Strike

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Out on strike of elevator operators' union in New York, girls picket Empire State building. As a result of walkout, thousands of workers were forced to toil up flights of staircases to reach offices.

JAPAN:
Economic Checkup

To Gen. Douglas MacArthur went the task of supervising the economic reformation of Japan as a part of the U. S. program to destroy Nippon's war-making potential and promote widespread opportunity in a nation formerly dominated by four great business houses.

Hirohito Not a Pauper

As MacArthur bent to the task, the prospects rose that the personal fortune of Emperor Hirohito would be divulged, revealing him as one of the world's wealthiest persons. Though the Mikado's assets are known to only a select few, the imperial family maintains a four-story concrete building complete with staff on the palace grounds to keep its accounts.

Indicative of the vastness of Hirohito's holdings, the emperor possesses stock in every Japanese enterprise, since a bloc of shares are allotted to the emperor by a corporation upon organizing. Of the 300,000 shares of the Bank of Japan, Hirohito reputedly owns 140,000.

Besides the Mikado, the great business houses of Mitsubishi, Sumitomo, Yasuda and Mitsui possess the greatest holdings in Japanese enterprise, with their share estimated at over half the total.

Under the U. S. program, steps will be favored for the dissolution of these politically influential institutions with their grip over banking, industry and commerce. Policies will be pushed for a wider distribution of income and ownership of productive and sales facilities, and encouragement given for the development of democratic labor and agricultural organizations.

In stripping Japan of its war-making potential, the U. S. will prohibit the operation of industries adaptable to war production. As in the case of Germany, manufacture of aircraft is to be prohibited and shipping is to be limited to immediate trade needs. U. S. authorities also will supervise Japanese industrial research.

As MacArthur's staff undertook an accounting of Japanese assets as the first step in the implementation of economic reform, the general ordered Premier Higashi-Kuni's government to institute immediate wage and price controls and ration commodities to head off extreme privation among the country's 80,000,000 people.

With Japanese experts figuring it would take Nippon from two to five years to get back on its feet, they proposed that the U. S. sell the country 250 million pounds of cotton within the next year in addition to 60 million pounds of wool; 3 million tons of rice; 2 million tons of salt; 500 thousand tons of sugar; 3 million barrels of oil, and 3 million tons of steel.

FOOD:
To Curb Output

Declaring commodity production goals should reflect consumer demand rather than maximum ability for output, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson indicated that the government's 1946 farm program may call for smaller harvests in view of decreased military and civilian needs.

In making his views known in a conference with farm bureau representatives in Washington, D. C., Anderson also raised the possibility of imposing marketing quotas to restrict the heavy output of certain crops.

At the same time, Secretary Anderson joined President Truman in assuring the farm bureau men that the government would back its commitment to support commodity prices at not less than 90 per cent of parity for two years after the official end of the war.

VETS:
Job Rights

Clarifying the rehiring provision of the selective service act, draft officials declared that a returning veteran has an absolute right to his former position, or one of like status, even if it means the discharge of a worker with higher seniority.

At the same time, the officials stated that no veteran would be required to take union membership in regaining his old position, since the law makes no provision for such conditions as a basis for his re-employment.

In handing down its ruling on vet job rights, draft officials directly clashed with the unions, which have stood for the rehiring of soldiers on a seniority basis, but opposed their re-employment in preference to others with longer working records at affected plants.

In further lowering the point score for overseas duty, the army revealed that enlisted men whose credits or age, as of September 2, 1945, equal or exceed 36, or who are 37 years old or 34 years old with more than one year of service, will be exempt. Also exempt are male officers with 48 points; army doctors and dentists with 45 points or 40 years of age; veterinary and medical administrative officers with 30 points or 35 years of age; dietitians and physical therapy aides with 18 points or 30 years of age, and nurses with 12 points or 30 years of age.

LABOR:
Fuel Threat

Secretary Lewis Schwellenbach's new streamlined labor department received its first real test as federal conciliators moved to bring about settlement of the CIO oil workers' demands for a 30 per cent wage increase before a growing strike threat imperiled the nation's fuel supply.

Early negotiations were snagged by the union's demand that discussions be held on an industry-wide basis and the companies' equal insistence that agreements be effected by individual refineries. In asking a 30 per cent wage increase, the oil workers reflected the general CIO aim of maintaining wartime "take-home" pay by bringing 40-hour-per-week wages up to the total of the former 52-hour week.

In other labor trouble, 60,000 northwest AFL lumber workers struck to press demands for a $1.10 hourly minimum compared with the present scale ranging upward from 70 cents, while 15,000 AFL elevator operators and building service employees paralyzed service in over 2,000 New York skyscrapers by walking out in protest of a War Labor board grant of $28.05 for a 44 hour week instead of the $30.15 asked for 40 hours.

Push Fight on Polio

In the mounting drive against polio, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis allotted the unprecedented total of $4,157,814.15 for research, education and the treatment in the year ending last May 31.

As yet no preventive or cure for polio has been found, although it is generally recognized as an infectious, communicable disease caused by a virus.

LETTERMEN:

A survey by the American College Publicity association shows that only 4 per cent of college letter men were turned down as physically unfit for military service, thus debunking the impression of a high rate of rejections among athletes.

According to the survey, only 358 students out of a total of 9,635 letter men in 119 colleges and universities in 1941 were found unfit for service.

GERMANY:
Occupation Progresses

Following close on General MacArthur's announcement that no more than 200,000 troops would be needed within the next year to occupy Japan, it was revealed that U. S. authorities hoped to trim the post-war force in Germany to less than 400,000 by next spring and reduce it to skeletonal dimensions within a few years.

Disclosure of occupation plans for the shattered Reich coincided with reports that the co-operative attitude of the defeated Germans will permit the early election of local governmental officials with balloting on a county and state level following.

Meanwhile, the army revealed that it was training hand-picked German prisoners of war to aid in the administration and policing of occupied territory. Selected after careful screening, the PWs are taught American and German history, the English language and military government, and also are being acclimated to democratic surroundings.

BIG FIVE:
No Results

Failing of settlement of one important problem, the Big Five council of foreign ministers meeting in London to map postwar Europe moved for adjournment, with possibilities that the creation of peace treaties with former axis satellites may be directly negotiated between the U. S., Britain and Russia.

The magnitude of the task of reconciling the conflicting interests of the Allied powers in the European theater was reflected in the difficulty of disposing of pre-war Italian colonies and strategic islands of the Mediterranean; reshaping the Italian-Yugoslav border; drawing up peace treaties for the Russian dominated Balkans, and internationalization of the vital waterways.

While the foreign ministers of the Big Five were scheduled to reassemble in November to receive the recommendations of their deputies on settlement of the thorny issues, Russian opposition to French and Chinese participation in the deliberations raised the possibility that direct negotiations between Washington, D. C., London and Moscow may be established as an alternative.

U. S. Gets New Auto

The most colorful mass productionist of World War II, Henry Kaiser announced arrangements for his entrance into the low-priced automobile field in league with the Graham - Paige interests at the sprawling Willow Run plant originally set up for manufacture of B-24s.

To effect the greatest efficiency and economy, Graham - Paige will also produce its medium-priced car and line of tractors, farm implements and rototiller along with the new vehicle at Willow Run. Joseph W. Frazer, president of Graham-Paige, will act in the same official capacity in the new company to be called the Kaiser-Frazer corporation, and Graham - Paige will share in a 250,000 purchase of stock valued at $5,000,000 in the new firm.

Indicative of the cost of establishing a modern mass-production automobile factory, Kaiser-Frazer will invest $15,000,000 to be received from total private and public stock sales as follows: $2,000,000 for machinery and equipment; $1,750,000 for tools, dies, jigs and fixtures; $1,500,000 prepaid expenses; $1,750,000 deferred charges, and $8,028,800 for general corporate purposes.

ATOMIC BOMB:
Future Use

While congress worked up steam over the future of the atomic bomb, Pres. Harry S. Truman disclosed that the lawmakers would be given full responsibility for the control of the devastating explosive.

Mr. Truman's decision to submit the issue to congress came as Representative Arends (Rep., Ill.) told the house that he had learned that an even more destructive missile than the one which razed Hiroshima had been developed. Calling upon the government to establish a scientific board to devise a defensive weapon against the atomic bomb, Arends said one such explosive could kill millions of city-dwellers.

Meanwhile, Senator Downey (Dem., Calif.) asked that the U. S. turn over the atomic bomb to the United Nations organization so that general possession would lessen the chances of its military development while at the same time encouraging further scientific research for an adaptation to peaceful usage.

Church Warning

Meanwhile the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America called upon the government "to state now its intention to place the new discovery under a world-wide authority as soon as all states will submit to effective controls," and to "press for such controls."

The statement also warned that unless international control can be achieved in the short period while the United States alone possesses atomic bombs, it may be difficult or impossible to achieve.

Wallace's Job Program Packs Political TNT

Reorganization of Commerce Department First Step Forward in Formulation of Full Employment Policy.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W. Washington, D. C.

The recent operating and organization program for the department of commerce created very little excitement in Washington or elsewhere when it was released. I think it made page 15 of the New York Times. The Times gave much more prominence recently to another document from the pen of Henry Agard Wallace—his new book, "Sixty Million Jobs," of which I shall speak later.

Congress may slumber on the reorganization report for yet a little, but when Washington wakes to the real significance of this 10-page, mimeographed document it will find between the lines much upon which to ponder. (Maybe that is why it was double-spaced.)

To me, this is a three-in-one instrument—just as its author, Henry Wallace, revealed himself as a three-in-one personality when I called on him just before the publication of his program, his first approach to the governmental limelight since the change in administration.

The report on what Mr. Wallace in his capacity as secretary of commerce hopes will mean the revitalizing and expanding of his department, envisions the metamorphosis of that somewhat turgid and impotent institution into a vigorous and human organization which will reach out and touch millions of individuals just as the government's most virile department, agriculture, does. Secretary Wallace said frankly at his press conference and also in more detail privately to me, that he thought that the department of commerce should do for the business man, big and little, what the department of agriculture does for the farmer, big and little. And it will, if he has his way.

Active Department Secretary's Goal

Wipe out of your mind, if you will, that one-time problem child of the New Deal, the agricultural adjustment administration. Now weigh the testimony of observers, including anti-Wallaceites, and I think you will learn that as secretary of agriculture, the author of "Sixty Million Jobs" did a good job in revitalizing his department.

How much it will cost to do as much for commerce, we couldn't get him to estimate, but he finally told us that it would be less than one-sixth of the cost of one day's war at V-E Day. By a series of calculations we arrived at the figure of 40 million dollars. Since the commerce department spent about 121 million dollars last year, Mr. Wallace's changes would make a total cost for his revitalized department of 161 million dollars.

Those who cry economy will shudder at that figure but they will hear this answer: If business, big and little, wants help similar to that which agriculture demands and gets it will cost something. The department of agriculture cost approximately 769 million dollars to run last year, and the farmers wouldn't want it to do less.

There will also be another explanation of the figures which will attempt to show that part of the expansion of the reorganized department is really contraction, and that brings us to the second integer of the three-in-one composition of Mr. Wallace's plan. The plan is more than a blueprint for changes in a single governmental institution. It is definitely a part of President Truman's reorganization plan which it is fair to assume would bring back under the commerce roof tree the horde of agencies and commissions which have to do with industry and business.

And now we come to part three of the tri-partible function of the Wallace program. It is by his own implication, a part of his recipe for full employment included in his book, "Sixty Million Jobs," and mention of that brings me to an examination of Mr. Wallace himself.

I said that like the program of reorganization for his department, Mr. Wallace seemed tripartitent to me. When I called upon him, he came down the great, cavernous room which Herbert Hoover planned for his successor and we sat in chairs about a little table that made a hospitable oasis in the midst of the desert vastness of high walls and lofty ceiling.

A Presidential Ghost Emerges

I had really come to see Henry Wallace, the author of "Sixty Million Jobs," which had just been reported a best seller in two New York stores. We discoursed at some length on that opus and gradually I found myself also talking to Henry Wallace, secretary of commerce, for, as I suggested earlier, many a strand from "Sixty Million Jobs" may be discovered in the warp and woof of the department reorganization plan.

As the conversation moved from book to report and back to book again, never getting far from the theme of full employment, I thought I could make out an ectoplasmic form arising from what had been up until then my two-part, author-secretary host. The third being, although not yet completely materialized, little by little became translucently visible to the naked eye. This party of the third part I thought I recognized as Henry Wallace, presidential candidate (1948 or at least 1952).

Perhaps I would not have believed my eyes if it had not been for a statement which a stout supporter of Mr. Wallace had made to me: "'Sixty Million Jobs' comes pretty near to being just about the best political platform the Democratic party can run on in the next election."

In one place, Author Wallace says: "There are a few, of course, who think that any government servant who uses the phrase 'full employment' is engaged in some deep dark plot. But they are the exceptions that prove the people's sanity and soundness as a whole."

Senator McClellan might be considered one of the exceptions from his remarks in the debate on the full employment bill. He said that the measure "says a great deal and actually means nothing except to create an erroneous impression in the minds of the people." He later described it as "soft soap."

'Sixty Million Jobs' Draws Commendations

Whatever the lawmakers think, the reviewers certainly are full of praise for Wallace's book. The New York Times calls it "a thoughtful and thought-provoking discussion of American political economy," and the Saturday Review of Literature, agreeing with the Times, adds that, "more than any recent work on economics or politics, it can serve as a moral testament and intellectual guide in the eventful, difficult days ahead."

The work appeared first in a business-letter-sheet size with paper cover; it followed in orthodox book form. Later the author hopes, he told me, that it will be printed in a cheap, pocket-size edition.

When Mr. Wallace said that I thought I caught his ectoplasmic triplet nodding emphatic approval while ghostly lips formed the words, "for every voter's pocket."

Much water will pass beneath the Potomac bridges between now and 1948 or 1952. We have with us at present a conservative congress and the political veterans say that no matter which way the wind may blow abroad, it is blowing to the right on Capitol hill and, they add hopefully, perhaps not too leftward at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue.

Secretary - author - candidate Wallace's full employment program requires much more legislation than the full employment bill. That is only the first step. The expansion and re-orientation of his and other departments will be required. Then there will be special taxation; there will be at least the blue-printing of public works; there will have to be a settled policy providing for foreign loans—the Bretton Woods program and other stimulants of world trade and tourist traffic.

If a too conservative congress did not grant the minimum legislative implementation, the "Sixty Million Jobs" plan could not be carried out. That, however, Mr. Wallace's supporters insist, will simply make 60 million people who want jobs, plus their families, vote for the man who believes they can be produced.

MRS. J. T. GREEN HAS BETTER SUCCESS WITH LESS EFFORT

HARRINGTON, DELAWARE.—Mrs. James T. Green is a Texan who moved to Delaware. While in the East she used some other brands of laundry starch, and then wrote this letter:

"When I was in Texas I became acquainted with Faultless Starch and liked it very much. I never used any starch like it. I have used many other brands, but I can have better success with less effort with Faultless Starch. I have my son's little suits to wash often and it is a great help to know that I can just dip them in cold starch and they will iron so nice and smooth."

Faultless Starch has been especially made for women who want to do beautiful starching and ironing—with as little work as possible. That's why Faultless Starch satisfies women like Mrs. James T. Green. It is truly a special kind of starch, made a special way.

PERFECT HOT OR COLD

Whether you want hot starch or cold starch, you can make perfect starch—WITHOUT COOKING. For cold starch you simply add cold water to the starch while you stir. For hot starch you simply cream the starch with a little cool water and add boiling water while stirring. Either hot or cold, it takes barely a minute to make perfect starch.

MAKES IRONING EASY

Another special feature about Faultless Starch is this—Faultless Starch contains ironing-aids that keep the iron from sticking. Your iron just slides along. No more fighting a "sticky" iron. You'll enjoy ironing over Faultless Starch, for beautiful ironing becomes a joy—not a job.

You might just as well enjoy Faultless Starch—just like so many thousands of other women do. Just ask your grocer for Faultless Starch today. Use it the very next time you wash. Save the work of cooking starch. Save the work of fighting a "sticky" iron. Do beautiful starching and ironing. Simply change to Faultless Starch.—Adv.

Good to Bake—That's Devil's Food Cake
(See Recipe Below)

Cake Tempters

Family hungry for cake? As a general rule, families take it easy on cakes during the spring and summer because there's a wealth of fruits and berries to solve the dessert problem. But, comes the first whiff of fall in the air, when the kitchen will stay cool enough even for baking, and there's the family on mother's heels begging for a cake.

Then, too, husbands and sons will soon be returning, and they will want a big taste of mother's good homemade cake. Be ready for the call when it comes, homemakers, with a brand new line-up of recipes that are bound to win the family.

We're still aware of the strategic situation in regard to sugar, so the following recipes don't go all-out for sugar. They're taste-tempting and delicious in spite of it all, and there's a grand variety from which to choose. Take your pick:

Bran Devil's Food Cake.
(Makes 16 cupcakes)
1¼ cups sifted cake flour
1¼ cups sugar
⅓ cup cocoa
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup shortening
½ cup whole bran
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs

Sift flour once, measure then sift again with sugar, cocoa, baking powder, soda and salt into mixing bowl. Add shortening and whole bran. Add about ⅔ of the milk, then vanilla; beat until perfectly smooth, about 100 strokes. Scrape bowl and spoon and mix well. Add remaining milk and beat until well blended. Add the well-beaten eggs. Fill greased muffin tins ⅔ full. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven about 25 or 30 minutes.

Do you like a cake served warm, in squares, with the tangy flavor of a citrus marmalade? This, then, is made-to-order:

Marmalade Tea Cake.
2 tablespoons melted butter or substitute
½ cup brown sugar
1½ cups corn flakes
1½ cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
¾ cup milk
¼ cup marmalade

Blend together butter, brown sugar and ½ cup corn flakes. Set this aside for the topping. Sift together flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Cut in shortening. Beat egg and add milk. Add to dry ingredients, stirring only until combined. Add remaining 1 cup of cornflakes. Turn into greased 8-inch square pan. Dot with marmalade, spooned on top of batter; sprinkle with mixture set aside for topping. Bake in a hot (400-degree) oven for 25 minutes. Serve warm, cut in squares.

Sour Cream Spice Cake.
¼ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
1 egg
¾ cup thick sour cream
1¾ cups sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves

Cream sugar and shortening, add egg and beat well. Add sour cream. Sift flour with baking soda, baking powder, salt, cloves and cinnamon. Add two tablespoons of the dry ingredients to the creamed mixture. Beat thoroughly. Add remaining dry ingredients to the first mixture, beating well. Pour into a well-greased and well-floured pan and bake in a pre-heated 350-degree oven for 30 minutes.

An unusual variation in cakes is to use gingerbread as an upside-down cake with an apple or orange topping. This saves both sugar and fussing as it is not necessary to make an icing for this type of cake:

Gingerbread Upside-Down Cake.
¾ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup molasses
1½ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ teaspoon ginger
½ cup sour milk
Bottom of pan:
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
½ cup light corn syrup
½ cup nuts
2 sliced apples or oranges

Cream sugar and shortening. Add egg, beat well. Add molasses, blend. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk to the creamed mixture. To prepare pan, melt butter and add corn syrup. Arrange fruit and nuts. Pour batter over fruit and bake for 35 minutes in a 375-degree oven. Turn cake out of pan immediately after removing from oven.

For those of you who like your whipped cream and can't get it, here is an excellent way of making it:

Whipped Cream.
1¼ teaspoons plain, unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold milk or water
1 cup well-chilled light cream

Soften gelatin in cold liquid. Set over hot water and stir until thoroughly dissolved. Pour cream into fairly deep, narrow bowl, making sure it is deep enough so cream covers at least ¾ of the beaters. Stir in softened gelatin gradually. Set bowl in a pan of ice and let stand 5 minutes, stirring around edges several times. Leaving bowl in ice and water, beat with rotary beater 5 minutes. Cream will be light and fluffy but will not stand stiff enough to peak. Let stand 1 or 2 minutes more in ice water, stirring gently. Cream will thicken and become stiff enough to peak. This may be sweetened and flavored to taste. It may be served immediately or kept in refrigerator or cold place until ready to serve. Texture improves on standing in refrigerator for ½ hour. Stir until smooth and serve.

Make Dishwashing Easier: Stunt fishy odors on dishes by washing them in soapy water to which some vinegar has been added. Rinse dishes in hot vinegar water, also.

Hot, soapy water is indicated for greasy dishes; cold water for egg, starchy and milky dishes.

Scrape dishes before starting to wash and have a strainer in the sink to collect all leftovers. It's much easier than scooping them up out of the water.

Stack dishes carefully before washing. It won't seem like you have so many, and there's less chance of their breaking.

China can be allowed to dry by itself on a dish rack, but glasses, silver and cutlery should be wiped immediately after washing.

Make sure you have plenty of good absorbent dish towels handy. Use paper toweling for hands to save cloth towels.

THE HOME FOSTERING CHRISTIAN IDEALS

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 6:4-9; Luke 2:51, 52; Ephesians 5:22, 25; 6:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.

"Juvenile delinquency" is an expression often heard in our day. It speaks of the awful way in which our boys and girls have gone astray spiritually and morally in recent years. Fortunately, we are beginning to realize that most of the blame falls on the parents. It is parental delinquency in the matter of proper rearing of the children which needs our earnest attention.

The home is the right place for the fostering of Christian principles of living, but all too often even Christian people have put that whole load on the Sunday school and church. They can help, but they cannot do the job which should be done in the home.

Home should be a place where:

I. God's Word Is Accepted (Deut. 6:4-9).

The Bible teaches us the truth about God and that is information of the highest value and usefulness in the home. He is our God, and He is one God. There is no other God, and at the same time this infinite and eternal One is very close to us—our God. How precious!

The acceptance of the truth concerning God draws forth our love toward Him. He is not like the heathen gods who cause only cringing fear. He loves us and we love Him, with all our might (v. 5).

This Word of God and the truth concerning Him should be the normal and natural subject of conversation in the home.

Any time, night or day, and anywhere, in the house or on the street, it should be as easy for a boy to talk to his father about God as to discuss his school work, or sports, or any other thing.

Let's make it a natural, normal, accepted thing that God and His Word are talked about in the home.

II. Growth Is Expected (Luke 2: 51, 52).

In the well-ordered home the child finds his place as Jesus did, as an obedient, well-mannered, co-operative member.

There, too, is the natural place for normal, well-balanced development. There must first be growth in wisdom. The mind and will must be in control, lest the physical get out of hand. The must develop, even as the body grows. Thus the growth of the body becomes not just an animal development, but one amenable to proper restraints, cultivated and poised for full usefulness.

But the home fails if it does not at the same time give the child a chance to grow "in favor with God and man." The boy Jesus continued to grow in gracious personality, with both God and man as the interested recipients of the fruits of His spiritual development.

Every home should be a Christian home and every Christian home should be a center of normal growth for children. This should give us cultured Christian men and women for the next generation.

III. Love Is Expressed (Eph. 5: 22, 25).

Love is not just a warm and tender feeling hidden away in the heart. It shows in the homely details of daily life in the home.

A Christian wife expresses her affection for her husband by giving him his God-appointed place as head of the house. There is a graceful and voluntary submission to God's plan for the home which makes for order and unity. Happy is the woman who seeks that place and lives in it! Her life will be blessed!

A Christian husband will learn to control that natural masculine tendency to dominate. He will study the gentle art of courtesy and kindly affection. He will love his wife as Christ loved the Church, and that means a willingness to both live and die for her.

Christianity really should show forth at its very best in the home but, alas, so often just the contrary is true! Let us get that thing straightened out and keep it right!

IV. Rights Are Respected (Eph. 61-4).

Mutual devotion between husband and wife, and mutual trust between parents and children—there we have the basis of a real God-honoring home.

We must give attention to the matter of a fair and full recognition of the rights of others. The parent who rides roughshod over the wills of his children need not profess to be a true follower of Christ. Likewise, children who are disobedient and insolent to their parents have no real testimony for Christ.

This business of being a Christian is real. It calls for right living everywhere, and that must begin at home. In the home the parent and child must both learn and live the high standards of Christ.

The Shape Of Things To Come

A wonderful new age of scientific magic is just around the corner.

It may be along any day now, depending only upon how soon the American people can get the wheels of peacetime industry rolling.

Stores will be getting new merchandise, and most of us will be in for a pleasant shock when we see the amazing and unusual new products that research has brought us.

Paper sheets and pillow-cases.

Packaging that will protect foodstuffs from mould.

Top quality sugar, also from wood.

Alcohol made from wood that isn't wood alcohol, but equal to the finest grain distilled product.

Rayon cord for tires that will outlast cars and trucks.

Furniture and flooring made out of laminated paper, having the tensile strength of aluminum.

Surprised at those items? Well—you'll be even more surprised to learn that they're all made of pulpwood—yes, pulpwood grown right around here.

Our community has a double stake in this age of magic. . . Not only do we stand to benefit from the jobs that pulpwood production affords, but also by cutting the top quality pulpwood so urgently needed, we can make these products available sooner.

What do you think of a Service Station operator who runs out of gasoline. That's like us getting our subscription to the Chilton County News expired. That happened to Ed Bowden the other morning about 8 block from his place of business in South Clanton. We didn't get to wait to watch him walk back to his gas pump for some more fuel—but that is exactly what he had to do.

Minnie and Charles Wade have come back home to Clanton to spend a vacation and rest a little. That's putting things in reverse, but that's the way it is. They spent the whole Summer in Florida building a Summer home down there on the Gulf. Now they're with us again taking things easy and getting over their Summer in Florida.

Jimmie Bell calls to tell us what was wrong with Judge Victor Heard the other day when he was standing on the Big Four Corner looking "sour as a Judge." Jimmie says it was because he was waiting on his wife. Now that is something that we know a lot about. We dare say we're just about the best waiter-oner in town. Practice makes perfect, you know.

We enjoyed a visit from Bobby Atchinson Monday night. Bobby is in the Navy now and has just finished "boot" at Great Lakes. When he returns this week it will be to a ship which, according to Bobby, is a chance to see the world. He's terribly enthused about his work and we hope that his chance to see distant lands isn't through a port hole.

We're sorry to hear that Loren Smith is sick at Central Alabama Hospital. Never having been sick a day in his life before, we imagine it is going pretty tough with him, having to lay in bed. Neither do we understand how Upchurch Drug Company is still operating. Without him — it just isn't Upchurches. Anyway, here's wishing you a quick recovery, Loren. Good Luck.

One of the students at CCHS tells that he has become as famous as Napoleon. He says he went down in history.

Went down to see Red Sherrod Sunday afternoon. He's doing better. After making daily trips to Birmingham for treatment for the past several weeks, he is staying home now and resting for a while. We don't suppose there is a man better known in Chilton County than Red. He has scores of friends who are wishing for him the best.

Mrs. Dock Wilkinson met us at Sunday School the other morning. While we were talking she remembered that she had wanted to run a classified ad about a piano that she wanted to sell. She gave us an idea what she wanted and Monday morning we put it into print. This week Mrs. Wilkinson came in and "scolded" us for not running her ad. She accused us of forgetting to run it, etc. We got an issue of last week's paper and showed her where it had been printed. She exclaimed, "My goodness, I looked in The Union-Banner for it." All of which made us very happy.

Billy Smith was in to see us Tuesday night. He's out of the Army now and going back into the newspaper business in South Carolina. Billy says its a long way from Alabama, but the proposition was too good to turn down. He was here visiting his mother, Mrs. Mamie C. Smith, and sister, Mrs. Flem Higgins.

At present, 6,464 locker plants are in active operation in 48 states. This is an increase of 1,182 between July 1944 and July 1945.

ISABELLA

There was a good crowd at Sunday School Sunday at Mulberry, but the crowd was small for B.T.U. The new director, Casey Cummings, is very anxious to have more for B.T.U. and some good programs.

The Sunday School Convention met Sunday afternoon at Mulberry with a good attendance. Bro. C. L. Wilkins, Superintendent of the Association, called the meeting to order by using the Sunday School Lesson as a devotional. Bros. Hand, Webb and Burks gave very inspiring talks on the work of the Sunday School and D.V.B.S. Six churches were represented.

The W.M.S. met at the church Wednesday night with 10 members present. The meeting was called to order by President, Mrs. R. W. Sturkey, opened by singing, "Bringing In The Sheaves." Devotional given by Mrs W. T. Tucker; minutes and reports were given. Old business transacted Plans were continued to adopt an orphan from Troy by W.M.S.

A program from the Commission was given by different members, with Mrs. W. T. Tucker in charge. Dismissed by prayer.

The Isabella P.-T. A. will meet in the auditorium Monday night, October 15th, at 7:00 p.m. Be sure to come as election of officers will be held.

Noah J. Williams is spending some time at home with his mother, Mrs. C. C. Williams. He has an honorable discharge from the U. S. Army, and plans to take up his work in Sylacauga he had before he went into Service.

Mrs. Bessie Conway is at home and is improving from her illness.

Miss Katrena Yielding, who is attending College at Auburn, spent the week end at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Yielding.

R. E. Manning and son, Lt. Ralph, Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla., are visiting Mrs. D. O. Manning this week.

CARELESSNESS CAUSES 90 PER CENT OF FIRES

With someone burning to death every 50 minutes; with 1,000 homes attacked by fire every day; and with 90 per cent of these fires being caused by carelessness, there is compelling reason to observe Fire Prevention Week, October 7-13, says C. E. Clapp, Extension forester.

Despite our wartime needs for lumber and labor last year, 200,000 forest fires laid waste to 30 million acres of forest lands, and some 7,000 persons perished in fires. Last year 3,500 members of farm families were burned to death in fires that destroyed 50 million dollars worth of farm property.

A little caution can prevent most of these fires. Principal causes of Southern woods fires are incendiarism, careless smoking, debris burning, railroading, camping and lumbering operations in that order. All agencies should exert their energies, Clapp says to eliminate this flaming destroyer.

With a Busy Hand!

NOW THAT the war is over, it's time to open the doors to the days ahead. They're going to be busy, exciting days.

For one thing, the Telephone Company plans the greatest expansion program in its history in Alabama — aimed at meeting the telephone needs of a great state.

It means providing telephones for all who have been waiting for them. This is one of our first jobs! A greatly expanded telephone program for our farmer friends is also in process. Expansion of long distance service is being scheduled too. It will include the installation of coaxial cables to handle more calls with speed and convenience for you, and provide more facilities for that exciting visual art — television. A mass of construction is to be done and a new service to motor vehicles is also in the offing.

Those are the high spots. They have been ideas on the drawing board. They will become realities as materials become obtainable. There will be the marshalling of prosperity's Three M's — Men, Money and Materials, the forces that brought Alabama and the Telephone Company to their present positions, that won them the friendship and confidence of the public.

This expansion program calls for the expenditure of millions of dollars in Alabama. And telephone people like the idea of putting money for expansion into Alabama, contributing to the general welfare and prosperity of the state, through its men and women, its wage-earners, its families, its communities.

Our optimism for the future is based on the record of the past. Alabama and the 3700 men and women of the Telephone Company have grown up together, and watched each other grow. Now, in the days ahead, the same friendly relationship will continue. The future beckons with a busy hand.

METHODIST WSCS

Monday, October 15th, beginning at ten o'clock, there will be held by the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church in the lovely home of Mrs. Sophia L. Jones, a Mission Study. Mrs. O. C. Lloyd, Chairman of Missionary Education, will be the leader.

The text to be used is, "These Moving Times," by Hermann N. Morse. The author has been Administrative Secretary of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church since 1914. He has made an extensive study of Home Missions and has written many books on the subject.

The topic of the book is, "The Church Among Uprooted Americans." These people are uprooted because of the demobilization of military and civilian workers and the process and reconversion of War Industries. The purpose of the study is to discover the church's present opportunity in Home Missions and to awaken the church and other agencies to a new sense of responsibility to these moving millions of people in America and to help supply right solutions through the nation and especially in our community.

Among those appearing on the program are Mesdames G. L. Wilkinson, Mason Jones, Joe Mullins, Omar Reynolds, J. S. Campbell, Jas. Q. Wade and D. P. Culp.

An interesting program of information and inspiration has been planned. A delightful day of fellowship and association is anticipated. Each woman is asked to bring a few sandwiches for the noon lunch.

BROWN - MURRAH

The marriage of Miss Betty Marie Brown, daughter of Mrs. Alpha Bentley Brown, and Mr. A. Wyndol Murrah, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Murrah, was solemnized at 7:00 p.m. Sunday, September 30, 1945, at the Congregational Church, in Thorsby, by Rev. C. C. Haun, who used the double ring ceremony.

Southern smilax and woodwardie fern decorated the chancel, against which stood floor standards of white gladioli and white chrysanthemums, alternating with white tapers in seven and fifteen branched candelabra.

Candles were lighted by Miss Peggy Murrah, sister of the groom, who wore a frock of blue net, and Miss Jane Barham, cousin of the bride, whose frock was of pink net.

Little Sandra and Sarah Elizabeth Mims scattered rose petals from pink satin baskets, and were dressed in floor length blue organdy. Little Rebecca Bentley and Bobbie Hagan carried the rings on white satin pillows, and were dressed in floor length white net.

Miss Willodean Minor, vocalist sang, "I Love You Truly," and "At Dawning," accompanied by Mrs. B V. Ray, Jr., organist, who also played the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. E. N. Bentley, the bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white duchess satin, made en train with fitted bodice, featuring a sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, which fell into points over the hands. The fingertip illusion veil was held to a coronet of satin and orange blossoms. She carried a French bouquet of tube roses and gardenias, which was centered with orchids.

Cpl. Joe B. Fain served as best man, and the ushers were: Ralph Parker, Jr., Ed Barham, Matthew Thomason, and Dr. Thomas A. Hayes.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Bentley. Centering the bride's lace-covered table was a tiered cake embossed with spun candy flowers and topped with a minature bride and groom. White tapers burned in crystal candelabra, and white carnation and roses were held in vases to complete the arrangement.

Following a wedding trip to Chicago, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Murrah will be at home in Thorsby until January 1, 1946, when they will enter Auburn. Mr. Murrah will continue his course in agriculture, which was interrupted by the war. Mrs. Murrah recently graduated from Thorsby Institute.

For travelling the bride wore a suit of black faille with cherry red accessories. Her corsage was of white orchids.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. T E. Barham, Jane Barham, Ed Barham, Mrs. Peggy Barham Sullivan, Mrs. Ralph E. Parker, Sr., Mr. Ralph E. Parker, Jr., Mrs. T. R. Bentley, Mrs. Evelyn Jones, Mr. Gilbreath, Miss Willodean Minor, and Mr. William J. Mims, all of Birmingham; Mr. A. V. Fair, of Bangor, Cpl. and Mrs. J. B. Fain, of Wetumpka, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John Dominey and Miss Virginia Dominey of Montgomery.

HUGH W. JENKINS ON WAY HOME

Cpl. Hugh W. Jenkins, who has been a prisoner of the Japs for the past three and a half years, has been liberated and is on his way home according to friends of the family who have heard from him recently. Mr Williams received this letter recently:

Manila, P. I., Sept. 19, 1945

Dear Mr. Williams and Family

Just a few lines to say, hello. Sorry I could not write any sooner, but I have been in the wrong place for three and a half years.

Hope you are all well. I will be home before very long. I am well and feeling good. Remember the old saying, "You Can't Kill A Jenkins" well, those Nips tried it, but I guess I had too much will power for them. There's not much I can write about. I will be seeing you soon.

Sincerely,

HUGH.

Cpl. Jenkins enlisted in September 1938, and was sent overseas in 1941. He was liberated September 9th, 1945.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Mind Your Own Business

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"She is running around with one of the town boys, and whatever she feels, he is deeply in love."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THESE are good days in which to mind your own business. For one reason, because everyone's business is going to be complicated and hard under postwar conditions. And for another, because interfering in other persons' affairs is a harmful, wasteful and often useless employment.

Here is a letter from a woman who feels that she very decidedly ought to be minding other persons' business, even while she gives me a distinct impression that her own isn't being too well managed.

"My position is a very painful one," writes Carolyn Miller, from a Texas town. "I live with my husband's mother, who is a dear. She is only 52, active and capable, and we manage the house easily between us. I have a baby six months old.

"The trouble is my twin sisters-in-law, whom I will call Joan and Jean. They are 20. Joan married to a captain of marines, and Jean engaged to his brother, who is in the air corps. This marriage and this engagement took place before I moved in here. My husband, Bert, has been away for almost a year.

'Not His Baby.'

"Joan, the married one, had a baby 10 months after her husband's departure for the south seas. She did not notify him of this baby's arrival until it was five weeks old, then a joyous cable was sent, 'fine little girl, both well.' His answer to this was so pathetically eager and happy that it made me sick, for in the family we all know that it is not his baby. Joan admits herself to a time of indiscretion, immediately after his departure, with one of his friends, since killed in the Pacific.

"The whole family expects me to be a party to this outrageous deception, of which I never would have heard, if I had not unexpectedly arrived here at the old home. My own instinct is to try to persuade Joan to write the truth to Art, and if she will not and her mother will not, to write him myself.

"Jean's case is, of course, less serious, but she is running around with one of the town boys, and whatever she feels, he is deeply in love. This seems to me terribly unfair to her absent fiance, but her mother will do nothing but look worried and say that time will settle all these problems. Personally I don't believe in leaving such matters to time; human beings have responsibilities, and our duties to our absent soldiers are surely the most sacred among them.

"My husband is now returning, honorably discharged, and we will move back to our own home, in a town some miles away. Naturally I have kept these troubles strictly to myself, for the honor of the family, but I really am in need of advice as to my correct course, having been brought up myself in the belief that honesty is always wisest in the end, however painful. Please help me."

Let Joan Tell Husband.

My dear Carolyn, my advice heads this article. Mind your own business. Button up your lip about Joan's affairs and Jean's affairs, and concentrate upon managing your home—fortunately in another town, and keeping your husband and baby happy.

You don't know—and you have no business to know — what the relationship is between Joan and Art. Perhaps she has written him the full truth already. Perhaps she is waiting until he is home again, and at work normally again, and in love with the little girl baby, to say to him; 'Art, I don't know what weakness or craziness came over me—I never loved Tom as I did you. I was lonesome, and he was going away—to his death, as it happened—and we were carried away. Can you forgive me, and love her for Tom's sake, too, because he gave everything that he had, gave life itself, to keep her world safe for her?'

Perhaps, if something like that happens, Art never need be disillusioned, Art's heart need never be broken; perhaps there will be other children, and the little oldest girl not the least dear.

But whatever happens, your putting your stiff, moralizing, clumsy hand into this affair can only ruin everything, and do you no good. Leave Joan alone and leave Jean alone — Jean isn't the only pretty young flirt who's amusing herself in the absence of her heart's true love. Jean will probably meet her sweetheart with inocent eyes and a royal welcome, and to all the world Joan's mistake will remain hidden, and Joan's daughter will have her honor and her place in the world untouched. In a word, Carolyn, mind your own business.

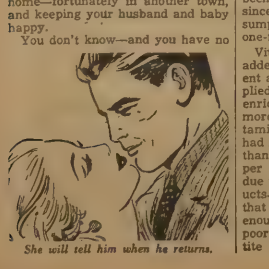
SILENCE IS BEST

It is often difficult to keep quiet when you happen to know some scandalous information. Many people persuade themselves that it is their duty to tell, because somebody is being deceived. They seldom stop to think that they may be making a bad situation worse.



The case discussed in today's article concerns two young wives whose husbands are still in service and out of the country. The girls are twins, young and pretty. Joan has given birth to a daughter — obviously out of wedlock. The other girl, Jean, is going around with one of the local men who is plainly in love with her. Carolyn, their sister-in-law, sees all this and feels she ought to write to the husbands and reveal the ugly facts.

Miss Norris admonishes Carolyn to keep out of these people's affairs. There is no good purpose to be served, she says, by telling the soldier-husbands now. Perhaps they will never need to know. In any case, it is the wives who should do the telling, and under more favorable circumstances than now exist.

Vitamin Intake Sufficient

You homemakers are concerned with the proper amounts of calcium and of riboflavin, known now as vitamin B-2. Calcium builds bones and teeth. Riboflavin promotes growth and is necessary to normal nutrition at all ages. B-2 vitamins are found in milk and milk products, among other foods. For folks have been drinking 25 per cent more milk since 1934, and increased their consumption of the B-2 vitamins about one-fifth.

Vitamin B-1 and niacin have been added. Iron is an important nutrient and it is usually fairly well supplied in average mixed diets and the enrichment program adds even more. The average quantity of vitamin B-1 that you and your family had last year was 33 per cent higher than in prewar years 1935-1939. Nine per cent of this B-1 increase was due to the enrichment of grain products. You homemakers have learned that if your family does not have enough B-1 it is apt to result in a poor physical condition, poor appetite and nervous disorders.

She will tell him when he returns.

Yank Rescue Team Cursed and Wined By Japs in Korea

Allied Mercy Crew Has Odd Experience With Foe At Air Field.

CHUNGKING, CHINA. — An Allied mercy crew which landed at Keijo, Korea, in the midst of 50,000 Japanese soldiers was alternately cursed, threatened, wined and entertained before it took off again with 500 gallons of Japanese gasoline, a member of the party said recently.

The mission of 22 Americans and Koreans landed at Keijo on a Saturday. The Japanese refused to allow them to see Allied prisoners of war but, rather than intern them, gave them the 500 gallons of gasoline to return.

OWI Correspondent Henry R. Lieberman, who accompanied the team, related the story.

The team was led by Lt. Col. Willis H. Bird of Landsdowne, Pa. As the transport settled down on the Japanese air strip, high ranking Japanese officers, including one identified as Lt. Gen. Yoshio Kotsuki, commander of the enemy forces in Korea, approached. He refused the request of the Americans to see Allied prisoners and also refused to give the names and nationalities of the prisoners.

Drinks, Songs—and Guns.

The mercy team and the crew of the plane put up for the night because the Japanese commandant was unable to get enough gasoline for the C-47 to leave immediately.

The Japanese meantime brought up two tanks and set up trench mortars around the plane. A 37 millimeter cannon covered the party.

During the night the Japanese entertained the Americans with beer, sake and Japanese songs.

Flight Officer Edward McGee of Durant, Okla., commenting on the scene said: "If someone had told me two weeks ago I'd be in a setup like this I would have turned him over to the loco weed."

Although the members of the team were armed with revolvers, tommy-guns and hand grenades just in case of trouble, Capt. Patrick Teel of New York City, who was with the first Ranger battalion at Anzio, said: "It'll take just five minutes to make us all dead ducks."

As the plane got within 500 miles of Keijo the radio operator, Lt. Meredith L. Price of Charleston, W. Va., attempted to establish contact with the Japanese.

"We are expecting you and we guarantee you safe conduct," the Japanese said.

When the plane landed, Maj. Gen. Junjiro Ihara, chief of staff for the Japanese forces in Korea, asked Col. Bird his mission.

Just Looking Around.

The American officer replied that he was in Korea "as the initial pre-Allied occupation representatiye to bring whatever help is needed by Allied prisoners of war and to make preliminary arrangements for future evacuation in accordance with the terms of the peace negotiations."

"Then you're not here to negotiate a surrender?" Ihara asked.

"No, our mission is purely humanitarian," Bird replied.

Ihara said that the prisoners were well and were being cared for, but that the party could not see them.

During supper that night the Japanese were quite convivial. After singing Japanese songs, one asked, "What is the American air force song?"

Led by Capt. John Wagoner of the air transport command, from Grand Island, Neb., the Americans let loose with the chorus of "Off we go into the wild blue yonder."

The Japanese beamed and beat time on the table with their fingers.

The next day the atmosphere became tense again. When Bird asked a Japanese officer to sign a note saying the mission had arrived but was refused permission to act, the major swore and made stinging references to "inferior persons."

Shortly afterward the guard around the plane was increased.

The gasoline finally was poured into the big ship and the Americans and Koreans took off on the return flight.

Two Marine Casualties Go AWOL—to Japan

WITH THE MARINES, YOKOSUKA. — Two marine casualties from Okinawa, who wanted to march into Tokyo so badly that they pushed aside a chance to go right home, came to Japan as stowaways and piled ashore with their old buddies.

INGRID BERGMAN'S finished 7½ million dollars' worth of films, all Academy Award material, that haven't been released as yet. Two years ago she did "Saratoga Trunk," with Gary Cooper, but Warners' had a lot of war pictures on hand, so "Saratoga Trunk" was held up, may be released in February. Then she did "Spellbound," which may be out soon. After that came "The Bells of St. Mary's," with Bing, due at Christmas time. Now she's making "Notorious." Then she'll make another USO tour through the Pacific area; after that she'll go abroad for "The Scarlet Lily," to be made in Palestine and Jerusalem—it's supposed to be the life story of Mary Magdalene.

Producer Edward Small, planning to make "The Life of Valentino," can't decide whether to hand the choice role to a star or an unknown. Unknowns have done all right in big parts—Cornel Wilde in "A Song to Remember," Robert Alda in "A Rhapsody in Blue," Jennifer Jones in "The Song of Bernadette." On the other hand, Paramount gambled ——to the tune of a million or so—on Isa Miranda, in "Hotel Imperial," and lost, as did Goldwyn with Anna Sten. Still, Small is inclined to take a chance on the man who'll play Valentino.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Veterans' Administration

Gen. Omar Bradley, new boss of the Veterans' administration succeeding General Hines, has moved with military dispatch in reorganizing the administration to provide better and more efficient service in behalf of the stream of veterans now being discharged from the services.

One of the most important changes made by General Bradley is a complete decentralization of all veterans facilities under the supervision of 13 branch offices. Obviously routine decisions can be made more promptly and more intelligently in a vast organization such as the Veterans' administration if they are not forced through a bottleneck in Washington.

Another change, one which had long been a subject for discussion, and ofttimes of criticism, was the medical service. The general now has separated and elevated the medical division to a higher status under command of Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley. Under this new arrangement, the new "surgeon general" will report direct to General Bradley.

The Veterans' administration is combing the government agencies and other channels for help and likely will emerge in the postwar era as one of the largest if not the largest governmental agency, handling as it will the affairs of some 12 million discharged veterans at one time or another. The administration has recently been the object of both congressional and private investigation as to conditions within the organization, conditions at Veterans' hospitals, treatment of patients, the tremendous shortage of physicians and nurses and other help and no doubt, it will be General Bradley's policy to eliminate immediately all situations which led to these investigations.

Questions and Answers

Q. I was discharged on February 24, 1943 by reason of "Sec. II, A.R. 615-360 and CDD." Will you explain the meaning of this. I will soon be 42 years of age. Is there any way I can volunteer for service in the occupational forces? — S., Rogersville, Tenn.

A. "This means that you were discharged under section 2 of the code governing discharge of veterans and "CDD" means a certificate of medical disability. In other words, you were discharged for a medical disability of some sort. The nature of your disability should be stated on your discharge. Yes, if you can pass the physical, the army is accepting volunteers for the occupational forces.

Q. How many points does a father of four children have who has been in service since last October 24 and across since July?—Mrs. R. B., Uhrichsville, Ohio.

A. The army point rationing system as of September 2 gives 1 point per month for time in service, 1 point per month for time overseas, 12 points for each child under 18 years with a maximum of three, and 5 points for each decoration or battle star. If your husband has no decorations or battle stars, he would have about 51 points. At this time 80 points are necessary for discharge, although the army has announced discharge for 70 points by October 1, 60 points by November 1 and elimination of the point system later in the winter.

Q. I am writing in regard to a soldier killed in Germany who made his insurance to a lady who raised him. After his death, his own mother came and claims she should get his insurance. Which one is entitled to the insurance?—Mrs. T. G., Water Valley, Miss.

A. If the soldier named the lady who raised him as beneficiary in his insurance, she is entitled to it and will get it notwithstanding the mother's claims.

Q.—My brother left high school recently to join the navy. Is my mother entitled to an allotment or allowance from the government if he allots the required $5? E. W., Rogersville, Tenn.

A.—Yes, providing your brother listed his mother as a dependent when he enlisted or was inducted into the service.

Q. If a member of the regular marine corps extends his enlistment while overseas and the extension has one more year before expiration, will he have to remain overseas until the expiration, if he has been overseas 20 months?—Mrs. W. D., West Memphis, Ark.

A. Not necessarily. The marine corps has set up a rotation for return to this country after 18 months service overseas. Extension of his enlistment would have no bearing upon the time he spent overseas. The chances are this marine will return soon for duty in the states.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Although the Germans manufactured and used synthetic rubber in volume long before America, a general superiority of the American synthetic rubber over the German product has been established by technologists.

To obtain enough rubber to make a tire for a low-priced car, two rubber trees must be tapped for a whole year.

Longer, more uniform tire life, constant goal of tire manufacturers, is now being achieved through use of a new type of synthetic rubber developed by B. F. Goodrich.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

When DeGaule first landed on the soil of the United States after World War II this is what he said, "We are looking to your nation to guide Europe to a better way of life." The eyes of the world are turned toward our nation, looking for us to extend a leadership to a better understanding of truth and justice. Never before have we had a better opportunity to shape the affairs of men and nations than right now. Shall we become more concerned about our material success, than we are about the uplift of the races? America is indeed the land of the free and the home of the brave, and it behooves us to stand on tiptoe and meet our opportunity. If we fail our brothers of other races and colors, we are no more worthy to live than Germany and Japan.

I read this in a great daily a few days ago. "An Irishman landed in Chicago forty years ago, and being penniless, he secured a job to drive a bread wagon at a few dollars a week. Today he retires from business, many times a millionaire." In the same paper I saw reference made to an Italian who came to New Jersey fifteen years ago with not enough cash to set up a boot-black shop, but was the owner of twenty apartment houses and was going into the real estate business that day. This is America. You can match these two stories from your own observation. The road to success comes down to where we are standing now, and we can go from the bottom to the top. We can salute our flag with pride and with loyalty. This is the U.S.A.

Hear this parable. A father had five children with him in his beautiful home and it came to pass one day that as he came home, he found that Phillip, his oldest son, had taken charge. He had put John into the attic, Mary had been ordered into the cellar, and the other three brothers and sisters had been pushed into closets, and Phillip moved about in the house as its master. On seeing this the father was angered and he ordered all of his true children to assemble. "Children," said he, "This is my house and each of you has a right to any portion or place in it, and you must share alike all of its liberty and comforts." In like manner God is our Father and this world belongs to Him, and all nations and peoples should share alike in the good things that God has for His children. Why push and shove about.

A young man had sought everywhere for a job and had failed. His countenance had fallen and his courage was gone. He decided to try one more time. On entering the office of a Christian man he asked for a job, but he was not needed. In dispair he turned to go when the man saw the deep gloom in his heart. "Stop, listen to me young man," said the Christian, "It is true that I do not need you, but when you fail at one place, leave it with a smile, and with a glad heart, go elsewhere and soon you will have a job." That was good medicine to the young man. He was refused at other places, but he would leave whistling and soon he had a job. Do not let, even a dozen disappointments get you down. If you do not first succeed, try again with a smile and a glad heart and you will win.

A man and his donkey came down the mountainside. While the donkey had a load on his back that was just all that he could carry, and the man was also loaded to the limit of his strength, yet, there was a difference in the spirit of the two. The sacks were filled with gold nuggets. To the mule the gold was nothing but a burden and he staggered and groaned under his load. To the man the nuggets of gold was wealth and he stepped sprily as he journed on. How do you relate yourself to the loads that you carry? Is that load that you carry a burden to you, or is it the source of wealth and service. If you love God, the loads of life will produce wealth of soul for you. Then carry on and murmur not. Refuse to be the donkey. Think of what will be yours when you live faithfully, cheerfully.

When peace was declared by Japan, a young man shouted, "Glory be. Now I will go out and get drunk." A Christian standing by said, "Young man, you had better go to church and pray." For a moment the jubilant soldier hung his head, and then he said, "Yes, and I will do that, and then I will go out and get drunk." On August 14th, 1945, God gave us victory over Japan, and as a nation we shouted, "Glory be." Now I will go out and get drunk." When God sees the wickedness of the human race, I am not surprised that He repented of having made man. As far as I am from being God, I too, become tremendously ashamed of the human race.

THE HUGHES RALLY

The fourth annual meeting was held at Poplar Springs September 30th in honor of the Rev. J. D. Hughes, who has been preaching the Gospel for nearly three score years. This was said to be the best meeting of its kind to be held thus far. There were nine ministers present, who took part in the service, together with others.

The opening song, "When I Can Read My Tile Clear," was rendered by the Chairman, Rev. W. O. Rich, which was followed by a welcome address by the pastor, Rev. N. E. Cook. The response was given by the Rev. M. Lockhart.

The devotional was given by the Rev. L. D. Hughes, the son of Rev. J. D. Hughes. Bro. Hughes read part of the 35th chapter of Genesis, and spoke very strikingly and impressively concerning God's promises to Jacob which certainly reaches right down into the age of which we live today and blesses those who trust Him for guidance.

Following the devotional, we were privileged to have a brief but interesting talk by the Rev. W. B. Dennis who was converted under the ministry of the elderly Hughes 42 years ago. The Rev. J. W. Dunlap from Coosa County who was impressed under a Gospel message of Rev. Hughes, 50 years ago at an association near Rockford, Ala., also made an interesting talk.

The Rev. J. D. Hughes brought a message at the 11:00 o'clock hour after reading a portion of the 15th Chapter of I Cor. His subject was: "The Grace of God."

The Rev. J. I. Bice brought a very inspiring message in the afternoon. His subject was: "The Christian's Refuge." He used as his text the first verse of the 46th chapter of Psalms, "God Is Our Refuge and Strength."

A bountiful dinner was spread at the noon hour which was certainly enjoyed by everyone present. The fine people of Poplar Springs are to be congratulated for the wonderful courtesy shown toward making this day a wonderful success.

Below is given the names of all the ministers present at the above service: Revs. J. D. Hughes, W. O. Rich, W. B. Dennis, J. W. Dunlap, N. E. Cook, M. Lockhart, L. D. Hughes, W. J. Heath and J. I. Bice

Mr. S. J. M. Webb also made an interesting talk on the Sunday School lesson for that day.

Rev. M. Lockhart brought a brief message on the subject of Faith following Bro. Hughes's message on "Grace."

A program committee was appointed consisting of the following brethren: Revs. N. E. Cook, W. O. Rich, M. Lockhart, J. D. Hughes and Mr. Reedie Patterson.

NEW TRACTOR SHOULD LAST FOR TEN YEARS

If properly cared for the tractor should last 10 years, reports J. B. Wilson, API extension agricultural engineer.

To insure this 10-year operation tractor should be stored properly by placing under good roof, draining fuel tanks, draining old oil and replacing with fresh oil, putting a few spoonfuls of oil in the cylinders and then turning over the engine a few times to see that the oil is protecting the cylinder wall. Drain the radiator and leave empty or refill with good anti-freeze mixture.

Tires, too, should be cleaned of any grease that may have gotten on them and a board should be placed under each tire to keep it off the ground or cement

YOUR WAR CHEST MAKES ITS LAST APPEAL TO YOU TO FINISH THE JOB

Beginning Tuesday, October 9th, the Alabama War Chest will make its last appeal --- its final call to you for "our own and our Allies."

Funds you give in this last appeal will make it possible for USO and the 18 other National War Fund agencies that have been serving members of our own armed forces and helping liberated peoples of our Allies --- finish their job.

These agencies that your gifts have helped maintain will face their biggest task these next six months --- months that have been rightly called "the most crucial period in human history." The job of these war agencies these next six months will be to keep up the moral of our armed forces overseas until our boys are mustered out, to brighten the days of wounded veterans in army hospitals, to aid the men of our Merchant Marine who are bringing our troops back home. Their job will also be to send food, clothing and medical supplies to the many million liberated peoples who face a winter of cold and hunger even worse than that of wartime.

Your War Chest --- which you helped to organize four years ago and which you have so splendidly supported during the war years --- makes this last appeal to you:

"Be generous in Victory! In gratitude to those who gave so much --- HELP FINISH THE JOB!"

Farm fires take a toll of 3,500 lives and destroy $90,000,000 in property, the Agricultural Extension Service reports, urging Alabama farm people to take steps to remove fire hazards from their farms during Fire Prevention Week October 7-13.

For the first time in four years, the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers will hold a meeting in New Orleans next February 6, 7 and 8. Agricultural workers of southern states are being invited to send representatives.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens, affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

NOW 4 & 2 POINTS FOR USED FATS

Help Increase Supplies of Soap and Other Peacetime Products By Saving More Used Fats

Industrial fats far short of last year! We are almost down to the bottom of the barrel. The nation's industrial fat supply is millions of pounds less than it was in 1944. We need fully as much as last year to help make the soaps and other civilian goods you want and need so badly. So...

If you want more soap and soap flakes... if you're dreaming of nylons, sheets, cotton fabrics and want them to hurry back to the store counter... you can help by saving those used kitchen fats as you never saved before! Save every drop, every day!

These fats are vitally necessary to help speed greater supplies of soaps and other things — like new cars, electric washers, refrigerators and tires. Industry must have these fats... to help get to you more quickly the peacetime products you want.

So skim and scrape just as you did so faithfully before V-J Day. To prove how important it is, your government has increased the point bonus. So please help! Keep on saving used fats! If you can't find a store that accepts used fats, call Home Demonstration or County Agent.

SCREW WORMS ARE PLAYING HAVOC ON ALA. FARMS

"During the fly season, the herd should be seen every day and any animals having wounds should be placed in a small lot or pasture where they can be watched and receive necessary treatment," he advises.

Since the screw worm fly lays its eggs in wounds, Dr. McAdory advises that operations, such as dehorning, castration, shearing and docking be postponed until cool weather. If they must be made, the wound should be smeared with pine tar and carefully watched for screw worm infestation.

An excellent treatment for screw worm infested wound has been developed by the United States Department of Agriculture. This remedy is known as Formula M. S. 62 and contains benzol, the best material for killing the worms in wounds, and diphenylamine, a powdered chemical best for protecting against infestation. Treatment should be frequently repeated and drainage maintained, until the wound is healed. If this preparation is not available, benzol and tar oil may be used.

All carcasses of animals that die should be burned. A large proportion of infested animals that are not treated die. Infested sheep often hide themselves under bushes and die.

Animals purchased through stockyards or from other states, should be examined for wounds and screw worm infestation and should not be allowed to mingle with home stock until they have been proved to be free from screw worms.

OCTOBER BEST TIME TO KILL PEACH TREE BORER

Unless treated, peach and plum trees are injured or may be killed by peach tree borers, reports W. A. Ruffin, API extension entomologist, in advising that "trees should be treated in Alabama during the month of October."

The cost of tree for treatment is about two cents. Paradichlorobenzene or Ethylene Dichloride Emulsion should be used.

In the northern half Alabama, trees should be treated during the first 15 days in October. In the northern half of the state, treatment should be applied the latter half of the month.

The borer is a white worm that feeds near the surface of the ground on the trunk and large roots of the trees. Its presence may be discovered by the presence of gum coming out of the tree at the ground surface.

In order to properly treat trees for the borer, all weeds, stones and trash should be moved away from the trunk of trees. Leave the ground as near level and smooth as possible. Paradichlorobenzene and Ethylene Dichloride Emulsion will injure the trees unless applied properly. The materials should be used according to directions which should be found on the container. Either of these materials should be on sale at the local farmers exchange, seed store and drug store.

For additional information on how to treat peach and plum trees for the control of borers, see your county agent.

HOW PRODUCE HIGH QUALITY PEANUT HAY

High quality peanut hay that will bring fair prices can be produced by farmers giving close attention to a few points, reports J. A. Beaty, marketing specialist of the Alabama Extension Service. He lists these:

1. Stack peanuts when free from dew to prevent molding.
2. When bailing hay, save as many leaves as possible, even though they may not be attached to the stems.

"NO MORE TROUBLE WITH CONSTIPATION!"

Says Long-Time Sufferer Who Tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

If you, too, are disappointed with pills and purgatives, be sure to read this unsolicited letter:

"For several years I was afflicted with common constipation. I tried various remedies, but got only temporary relief. Several months ago, I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN each morning, drinking water freely through the day. I have since never had the slightest trouble with constipation. My gratitude to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN." Mr. H. M. Riley, 11 E. Division Street, Chicago, Ill.

Do you want to be free of harsh laxatives for the rest of your life? You may be, if your constipation is due to lack of bulk in the diet! Just eat a dish of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN and drink plenty of water every day! If not satisfied, send the empty carton to Kellogg's of Battle Creek. Double the money you paid for it will be paid to you.

ALL-BRAN is not a purgative. It is a delicious cereal made from the vital outer layers of wheat. It's one of nature's most effective sources of gentle-acting bulk, which helps support normal laxation!

Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's today. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's of Battle Creek and Omaha.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, married Elizabeth after her first husband, Arthur Kittredge, had been reported killed in World War I. Elizabeth had been orphaned when a baby and raised by her aunt and uncle in Tulsa, where she met and married Arthur. Shortly after their marriage, Arthur enlisted, and soon afterwards was reported killed. Elizabeth moved to Los Angeles, where she met and married Spratt. Arthur had not been killed, but disfigured and left almost helpless. Dr. Jacoby worked over him and managed to save him. Under the name of Kessler, Arthur landed in Los Angeles in Spratt's office.

CHAPTER XI

He shivered with a cold gust of hate whenever he remembered how the Nazis had hounded that great man to his death for no crime but the unforgivable iniquity of having been born a Jew, and of being so rock-bound in his own goodness that he was incapable of accepting the evil of mankind until it had crushed him beyond escape. There had been little he could do in his love for Jacoby's memory, nothing but get to the United States while there was still time to save Jacoby's child.

His grief and rage at what had happened to his friend, and his terror lest he not be able to bring Jacoby's little girl to safety, had been so great that not until he was on the westbound steamer did he realize that when he got to America he was probably going to see Elizabeth. He knew her husband's name was Spratt Herlong and that he was employed by Vertex Studio, and in his own luggage was a contract signed in the Paris office of Vertex. He would be virtually sure to meet Herlong some day, and it might follow as a matter of course that he would meet Elizabeth. He went into his cabin and looked at himself a long time in the glass, as he was doing now. If there was a chance of her knowing him he would break his contract and make a living as a translator, a clerk, anything that would provide little Margaret with three meals a day without destroying Elizabeth's peace of mind.

But a long scrutiny satisfied him that there was no chance of it. In no sense, except the memory of her behind all that had happened since that explosion at Chateau-Thierry, could he believe he had any trace of the Arthur Kittredge she had known. He was Erich Kessler, dear friend of the late Dr. Gustav Jacoby, author of books based on case histories of Dr. Jacoby's patients, and the change in his personality was as thorough as the change in his name. No man who had endured what he had endured in body and spirit could have much left in common with a happy, arrogant youth who did not know what it was to want anything he could not get.

He looked thoughtfully at his image in the glass. Crippled as he was, his appearance was not repulsive. One could see that in spite of his uncertain legs he had been meant for a tall man, and since his torso had to carry his weight the muscles there were powerfully developed. The effect was inevitably one-sided, since his left sleeve had been empty so long, but his right arm was like that of an athlete, and the hand which for twenty years had supported him upon a cane, was strong enough to break a china cup between the thumb and fingers. His face had no visible trace of the wound there except a scar that went upward from beneath his beard in a thin curving line. His hair was still thick, gray like steel; his beard was heavy too, and darker. He had let it grow with no thought of disguise, but to cover the scars that all Jacoby's careful skin-grafting had not been able to eliminate. Now he was glad he had it and was so used to it, for in spite of having seen thousands of Hitler's pictures most Americans still thought of Germans as being professors in dark beards.

She would not know him, but he would know her, as readily as he had known the picture standing on Spratt Herlong's desk. To be sure, he had been looking for it, but he would have recognized it anyway as Elizabeth. She had changed in those years, of course, but her alteration had been nothing more than the well-ordered development from youth into the maturity that could have been foreseen by anyone who had been as intimately acquainted with her as he had. Elizabeth had always known what she wanted out of life, because she was so eminently fit to have it. Physically and spiritually, she had wanted love, marriage, children, a home in which she would be no petted darling, but a versatile and devoted creator. From the beginning she had instinctively known herself capable of bringing all this into being, and so she had looked forward to it with the eagerness of those who have no doubt of their destiny. When he met Spratt, and saw the pictures of Elizabeth in Spratt's office, he felt that the change time had made in her appearance had been no more than the change one observes in the achievement of something of which one has seen the beginning. Now that he could think of her without the pain of the earlier years, he was glad he had been wise enough to step aside so that she could have it.

He saw the pictures last week, on the first day he went into Spratt's office. Spratt had been talking for some time about the script, and if Kessler's attention had wandered it was no matter, since he was going to read the script tomorrow anyway. When Spratt had finished, and he himself had risen to leave, he glanced at the photograph on the desk, saying with the casualness born of years of self-command, "Your wife, Mr. Herlong?"

Spratt said, "Why yes," taking up the picture and handing it to Kessler with the proud smile of a man showing his friend a treasure. "But that's not very good of her—at least, I never did think those formal portraits were as good as candid shots, too smooth and pressed-out, if you get what I mean."

"Yes, I understand and agree with you." Kessler was looking at her face. "But this is very charming."

"Oh yes, so it is, but this one on the wall looks more like her. Over here by the door. Those are the children with her."

Kessler followed Spratt and looked at the picture on the wall.

"But this is very charming."

"Yes, yes," he said with involuntary eagerness, "that, I am sure, is more like her."

For it was like her, he knew that without having seen the original in so long. The picture had been taken somewhere outdoors, perhaps on a ranch.

Today, alone in his office, he let his memory go back to the days when he had realized he had to do this because he loved Elizabeth too much to do anything else. The first days after the battle were nothing but confusion, fever and pain. He was in a place where there were a lot of other men on other cots, and women with pale harassed faces trying to take care of them, but he could not understand anything that was being said or anything that was done. He was strapped up in bandages that were far from clean, and among the people around him was a man gaunt as an ascetic, who came over now and then and did various horrible things to him. He did not know then that in those closing days of the war in Germany there was not cloth enough for fresh bandages or soap enough to wash those that had been used, or drugs to relieve suffering, or that his attendants had white faces and shaky hands because they were not getting enough to eat. Even when he began to discover this he did not care, because by that time he had begun to discover also the extent of the damage these Germans had done to him. He had no doubt that he was going to die, and the only wish he was strong enough to make was that he might die quickly and get it over.

Babbling in the only language he knew, he begged the gaunt cruel man to let him alone. At first the doctor seemed to be paying no attention, but one day his patient observed that he was talking, and after several repetitions the ungainly syllables acquired meaning. The doctor was saying, "Forgive me that I hurt you."

His accent was so thick as to be almost unintelligible, but the fact that he had any English at all gave a flash of hope to the mangled object on the cot. Any effort was torture, but if this fool of a doctor could be made to understand that a dying man wanted nothing more than to be left in peace, it was worth the effort. His own words were muffled because of the bandage on his chin, but he managed to get them out.

"Listen to me. I am not one of your countrymen—you know that, don't you? My name is Arthur Kittredge. I am an American. Your enemy—don't you get that? I am going to die anyway. Why don't you just let me do it?"

The doctor said something. Arthur did not understand it until it had been repeated several times, and when he finally caught the words they were not worth the trouble of listening, for all the doctor said was, "Quiet. You be quiet."

Arthur tried again, desperate with pain and weakness. "Do me a kindness. Give me something to finish it, won't you?—Please listen—I'm talking as plain as I can! Finish it. That's not much to ask, is it?"

Again the doctor said, "Quiet."

"If you don't care about doing a kindness to me, do it for somebody who can get up again—one of your own men. Why should you let me fill up a bed when German soldiers are lying on the floor? Or waste food on me when you haven't enough for your own? Don't keep me—"

His words ended in a gasp of pain. But he still looked at the doctor, too weak to say any more but conscious enough to plead with his eyes. Whether or not the doctor had understood all his words, he had grasped enough to know what Arthur wanted. He shook his head. "No," he said. "No." Exhausted as he was, Arthur could see him groping for more words. Mustering all his strength, Arthur managed to say again,

"I am going to die anyway."

"No, no. You are not going to die."

He spoke with a grim resolution that seemed to typify all Arthur had ever heard about the coldness of Germans and their inability to understand any reason why they might not always be right. Arthur was not able to form any more words, but he looked at the doctor with eyes that Jacoby told him later conveyed all his rage and disbelief. Arthur knew he was going to die and he wanted it over. But Jacoby's thin face had no yielding in it. Jacoby left him then, but he came back later, and this time his bony hand brought up a German-English dictionary out of his frayed pocket. Even with this aid, his English was so poor that he could convey nothing but a repetition of his refusal. Alone in his prison of pain, Arthur thought, "At home they'd shoot a dog that had been smashed by a truck. But this can't last much longer. It can't. If I hadn't been so healthy it would be over by now. But have these people no mercy at all? I'd shoot the most heartless German under heaven before I'd let him die a death like this."

He was glad Elizabeth could not see him. She would never know anything about this lingering torment. They would simply tell her he was dead and she would think it had been quick and clean. "He never knew what hit him," they would say to her, and at least it would be easier for her than if she had to know how long it had taken him to die. And of course he did have one thing to be thankful for—if that shell had to hit him, he could be glad it had done its work. He would be dead and done with, and would not have to go back to her a half-human caricature of what used to be her husband. Though that wretch of a German doctor refused to shorten this last phase, though he might be beast enough to enjoy seeing one of his enemies get what was coming to him, even he could not indefinitely prolong it.

But at last Arthur discovered, with a revulsion that he could not have expressed if he had known the whole dictionary by heart, that this was exactly what the doctor meant to do to him.

Jacoby had been trying to talk to him for some days. Arthur had ceased trying to understand him. He had about given up trying to do the only thing that interested him, which was to refuse nourishment and get it over that way, for they fed him through a tube and he was too weak to resist. He hated the sight of the doctor with his gaunt face and thin cruel hands. But though he could not resist him, he did not have to listen to the man's awkward manipulations of the English language and try to make sense out of them.

However, the creature persisted, talking to him with many references to his dictionary. Unable to pronounce Arthur's name, he called him Kitt. He kept telling him something, in a low, insistent voice. He kept at it so long that at last one day the words he had been hearing arranged themselves in Arthur's mind and became an orderly sequence.

Stripped of its grotesqueries and repetitions, what Arthur understood went like this:

"You are not going to die, Kitt. You will be alive a long time. Not as you were. But you have your eyes, your hearing, the jaw will heal and there will be a hand. I think you will be able to sit upright. Walking I cannot promise, but I will try. It will be long and hard. But work with me, Kitt, and I will work with you. Do you understand me? You are not going to die."

Arthur made an inarticulate noise. He looked at the doctor's steely blue eyes. They were fixed on him with a determination that made Arthur feel that this fellow was regarding him not as a man but as the subject of an inhuman experiment. Instead of letting him go, Jacoby was going to keep him conscious for years to come, simply to prove that he could do it.

JACKSON CHAPEL

We, the undersigned citizens of the Jackson Chapel community, are calling a meeting at the school building for Saturday night, October 13th, at 8:00 p.m.

The Jackson Chapel School was established around 1906 and continued until a few years ago when it was consolidated with the Mt. Pleasant School. Prior to the consolidation the property was deeded to the State in order to get State aid for the school.

The Jackson Chapel Community has always manifested a spirit of welcome to all.

The place has been used for religious, social and educational purposes. The property has an established cemetery and should be preserved.

Since the building and property is no longer used for school purposes the Board of Education saw fit, as prescribed by law, to make sale of said property. Bids for this property was submitted to and rejected by the Board of Education.

We do not question the right of the Board's rejection of all bids turned in because we feel that the Board's purpose is to be fair to the entire community and do whatever is best for the community.

This property will be disposed of by the Board of Education at some future date, and the spirit of cooperation manifested by this community will to a large extent determine their course of action.

We ask that the people of this community to attend this meeting for the purpose of discussing ways and means of securing and utilizing this property for the best interest of the community.

Community cooperation is an obligation as well as a privilege, so let us all heed duty's call to do our part:

J. H. Jackson, W. K. Traywick, W. L. Sanders, Ervin Baker, James Baker, Mrs. Charlie Bell, W. H. Sharp, D. M. Crowson, A. W. Jones, W. C. Muncher, J. T. Burnett, E. A. Shirley, Elijah Sanders, J. O. CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1945 — NUMBER 42

LOCAL WELFARE DIRECTOR SAYS BUDGET TO BE DRASTICALLY REDUCED FOR NEXT YEAR

Chilton County's public welfare budget has been reduced drastically because of the loss of monies conditioned upon the ratification of the Income Tax Amendment, Miss Mollye Megginson, County Director of Public Welfare, said today, in releasing a statement as to revised budget figures for the 1945-46 fiscal year, which begins this month.

Only $2,479.32 in new local money is available to the Department for the ensuing year, the Director said, instead of the $15,495.72 that would have been received had the amendment been adopted. This means a similar loss in matching State and Federal funds, or a reduction in the total budget from $153,455.53 to $104,713.82.

Unemployable aged, blind and handicapped citizens of the county, as well as its dependent children, will be the ones critically affected by this cut in the budget, Miss Megginson said, pointing out that this month's Old Age Assistance payments would average approximately $15.00 per family instead of the $20.00 anticipated under the larger budget, and that other payments would remain the same general level paid in Septembr.

In stressing the needs of these disadvantaged people, Miss Megginson said, that grants for those receiving provided for only fifty per cent of their barest needs. She also cited the fact that at the end of September there were 32 families in the county in dire need who were receiving no assistance from the Department because of inadequate funds, while 30 families had applied for aid and were in process of investigation. At least 80 per cent of these applications will be from families eligible for help, the Director said.

The new budget will enable us to help those already known to be eligible, Miss Megginson said, and no new families can be assisted unless aid to some now receiving is discontinued. "In view of the discontinuance of dependents allowances to many families of servicemen and terminations of war jobs for many who are old or partially disabled, and for many women, it is feared that unmet need will mount as winter approaches," Miss Megginson concluded.

MRS. T. W. BRYAN PASSES AT SELMA

Mrs. T. W. Bryan, age 73, died Monday afternoon in a Selma Hospital. She had been in bad health for several months. Mrs. Bryan leaves to mourn her passing, besides her husband, two sisters and two brothers. The brothers are Mr. C. A. Crosby of Selma, and Mr. H. A. Crosby of Evansville, Ind. The sisters are Mrs. Lucy Edwards, and Mrs. S. I. Woodruff, both of Nashville, Tenn

Funeral services were held in Selma Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock with the Rev. O. C. Lloyd officiating. Pallbearers were: Mr. C. Fenn Jones, Reedie Taylor, J. C. Pattillo, J. B. Atkinson and Omar Reynolds.

MRS. NICEE KNOX

Mrs. Nicee Knox, age 95, of Clanton Route 5, died Thursday, the 11th day of October, at 9:30 p.m. Funeral was held at 3:00 p.m., Friday from Mt. Springs Church, conducted by the Rev. Wiley Davis; interment was in the church cemetery.

She is survived by her nephews and nieces.

Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

Chilton County Schools Show Large Increase This Year

At the end of the first school month, which ended October 5th, 472 children were enrolled in the white schools of Chilton County. This was an increase of 258 over the first month of last year. There were 378 more children in average daily attendance than the same period last year. The Chilton County High School had an average daily attendance of 95 per cent which was the highest in the county. Union Grove was the second highest with an average of 93.97 percent.

Almost every school showed some increase in average daily attendance. Vermont, Popwell, Pinedale, Jemison Isabella and Collins Chapel showed an increase which deserves special mention. Jemison has enrolled 816 children, which is the largest for the county.

THE HOME MAKERS CLASS WILL MEET FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19TH

The Home Makers Class of the Clanton Baptist Church will meet Friday, October 19th, at three o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway.

All members are urged to attend.

Y.W.A. REPORT

The Y.W.A. met with Mrs. John Griffin Monday, October 15th. This meeting almost had a hundred percent attendance, as only three members were absent—18 present.

The subject of the program was "The Future's Broadening Way."

For the next three meetings the Y.W.A. is going to study the book, "Give Ye," for their Mission Study Course. The W.M.U. has studied this book and has recommended it for the Y.W.A. It must be a very interesting book, so let's make these three meetings a hundred percent in attendance.

The next meeting will be Monday, October 29th, at 7:00 p.m. in the basement of the Baptist Church.—Mrs. Johnson, Reporter.

Thieves Loot Residence On Rt. 1

An unknown party entered the home of Clarence Baker, on Route One, late Monday afternoon and looted the place of several valuable articles. A checkup showed a shotgun, several boxes of shells, a suitcase containing some of their little boy's clothes, besides other things missing. Seventy-five dollar worth of War Bonds were also taken.

According to the Sheriff's Office Wednesday morning, no arrests have been made.

DRIVERS GET EXTRA TIME TO PURCHASE THEIR 1946 LICENSES

November 15th is the expiration date for 1944-45 Alabama drivers licenses. The second extension of time was granted today by Chief Van B. Gilbert, director of the Department of Public Safety.

The new expiration date was planned to coincide with the deadline for purchases of 1946 Alabama automobile license plates. Since both drivers licenses and automobile tags are now obtainable, the motorist may make both purchases at once.

November 15 is the final extension deadline. After that date, 1944-45 drivers licenses will expire.

Capt. J. F. Brawner of the department's drivers license division explained that the expiration date had been extended for the convenience of motorists as well as to facilitate the issuing of driver's licenses. The offices of Probate Judge and drivers license headquarters in Montgomery have had difficulty handling the large number of applications received.

The drivers license division of the Department of Public Safety does not receive any applications direct. All drivers license applications must be made in the offices of Probate Judges or in the office of the License Commissioner in Jefferson or Mobile County.

The application is sent, together with the motorist's expiring 1944-45 license, by the Probate Judge to headquarters in Montgomery. A new license is mailed to the applicant from that office.

The original expiration date, September 30th, was extended first to October 30th and then to November 15. The Department of Public Safety urges all motoriste to take advantage of the extended period and renew their drivers license promptly.

HON. PETE JARMAN WILL SPEAK AT THE A.A.U.W. OCTOBER 25TH

At 7 o'clock p.m. on Thursday, October 25th, the Hon. Pete Jarman will speak to the Chilton County Branch of the A.A.U.W. at their open meeting at the City Hall in Clanton.

The Clanton Pilot Club, The Music Appreciation Club and the Kiwanis Club have been invited to be guests of the A.A.U.W.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 3193 will hold the next meeting on Monday night, October 22nd, at the City Hall, at 7:00 o'clock.

Past Department Commander, who is now Department Adjutant-Quartermaster, will be here to take in all new members.

Veterans who are eligible are requested to have their dues, receipt and be at this meeting or bring discharge.

WSCS MEETS WITH MRS. SOPHIA JONES

The W.S.C.S. of the Clanton Methodist Church held a spend-the-day meeting with Mrs. Sophia Jones on Monday of this week. The meeting was well attended.

The book, "These Moving Times," was reviewed. Besides Mrs. O. C Lloyd, who was leader, Mrs. Delos Culp, Mrs. Dock Wilkinson, and Mrs. Macy Jones had parts on the program.

After a delightful luncheon, all enjoyed a social hour.

The afternoon program was presented by interesting talks from Mrs. Omar Reynolds, Mrs. Joe Campbell, and Mrs. Belle Wade. Miss Camp, Bible teacher, was guest speaker for the afternoon and added much to the program. Her talk was enjoyed by all.

STORIES ABOUT ALABAMA

An interesting and informative booklet comes from President Arthur F. Harman of Alabama College at Montevallo called "Alabama Woman's Page." It is a collection of radio talks from Montevallo prepared by Helen Parrish of the speech department. The talks are all on historic Alabama subjects and contain information that is important for every Alabamian to know.

Most of us do not know enough about our State history. The little that many people do know on the subject is wrong and distorted because we have depended so much upon tradition and unwritten stories for our information. No state in the Union is richer in romance, adventure, stirring action, beautiful sentiment than is Alabama. Our children ought to be familiarized with these stories from their earliest years. Helen Parrish's radio scripts recounting some of the best known history stories in attractive form undoubtedly helped when heard over the radio and they should help still further now that they have been assembled in book form for permanent preservation.

Pete Jarman, the Sixth District of Alabama's able Congressman, presided over the House when that body passed the first tax reduction bill in 16 years on October 11th.

Mr. Jarman's efficient and alert manner in handling the parliamentary procedure, it was said by many ranking members, contributed greatly toward the speedy passage of this important legislation.

This bill was designed to aid both individuals and businesses in the difficult period of transition from war to peace. To accomplish this it was thought necessary to reduce the wartime tax rates to provide incentive for business to expand and to increase consumer purchasing power. Therefore, it provided a reduction in individual income taxes, in corporate taxes and in certain excise taxes. It also provided for the repeal of the tax on the use of motor vehicles, effective July 1, 1946.

MUSIC APPRECIATION CLUB

The Music Appreciation Club was entertained in the home of Mrs. J. C. Jones on October 9th. The reception rooms were tastefully decorated in dahlias and chrysanthemums.

The meeting was opened with the Federation Hymn, followed by the Club Collect. The roll was called and the minutes read.

Mrs. Joe Alexander, State President of the Alabama Federation of Music Clubs, gave the program for the afternoon. Mrs. Raymond Mims was her accompanist and the following program was rendered:

Caro Mio Ben — Dearest Believe—Giordoru.

Strede La Vampa — Verdi.

Moon Behind the Cottonwood — Cadman.

Boat Song — Harriet Ware.

Big Brown Bear — Mana Zucca.

Mrs. Alexander then gave a talk with the subject, "Meeting Today's Challenge Musically."

The hostess then invited the members and guests into the dining room where a delightful tea was served.

TIME CHANGES FOR FOOTBALL GAMES

CCHS P.-T. A. Holds First Fall Meeting

A number of fathers, as well as mothers, attended the first meeting of the Chilton County High School P.-T. A., in the school gymnasium, last Tuesday evening, October 9th. After the invocation by the Rev. Roswell Owens, Mrs. J. E. Gowan, President, gave the keynote of this year's P.-T. A. Instead of raising funds, the object of this year's program is to help CCHS pupils to have recreational funds for both mind and spirit. The President suggested that these funds could best be furnished by books, music and art.

Mrs. Joe Mullins was appointed program chairman; Miss Elizabeth Barton, parliamentarian, and Miss Myrtle Wesson was asked to take the count of parents present for each grade

Mr. Patterson Hicks, Principal, welcomed all parents to P.-T. A. and to the school itself. He stressed the fact that the school is a public institution and it is the duty as well as the privilege of the parents to visit the school and learn of their children's progress there. He explained the high school elective system and CCHS requirements for graduation.

Within the next twelve months Mr. Hicks hopes to see construction begin on two additions to the school: A Community Auditorium with a projection booth and a wing of class rooms with adequate study hall space.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Edna G. Kinney and members of the Home Economics classes served refreshments to parents and teachers in the Home Economics Building.

On October 31st, the P.-T. A. will sponsor a Hallowe'en Party in the school gymnasium at 7 o'clock. Miss Elizabeth Barton will be in charge of the arrangements for the party.—Sarah G. Palmer, Reporter.

MR. NEWTON C. COOPER

Mr. Newton C. Cooper, age 63, died at his residence on Verbena Route 1, at 9:45 Tuesday night

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 11 o'clock at the Shady Grove Church; interment in the adjoining cemetery

He is survived by one step-son, Maurice Wright, of Birmingham, and one step-daughter, Mrs. Mae Poole, also of Birmingham.

License Need For Explosives Suspended

Effective immediately, the Department of the Interior, through the Bureau of Mines, has granted a general license to the manufacture, distribution, and users of non-military explosives. This General license, published in the Federal Register of October [illegible], suspends the issuing of individual licenses such as you have done in the past three and a half years. Although relieving persons covered by the [illegible] from securing up-to-date licenses, it does not relieve them of other duties and responsibilities under the Act.

303.8 General License No. 8 pertaining to explosives and ingredients. A general license is hereby granted under the Federal Explosives Act of December 26th, 1941, (55 tat. 853), as amended, to any person as defined in the act and regulations, who is not otherwise prohibited by law or by regulation or by proclamation of the War Department, the Attorney General, or any other Federal agency from doing so, to manufacture, distribute, possess, purchase, accept, receive, acquire, store, sell, issue, or otherwise dispose of and use explosives and ingredient., as defined in the act and the regulations.

STUNT NIGHT

A new feature will be started at Jemisen High School Auditorium on Friday night, October 19th, 1945, at 7:30, when the Senior III class will sponsor a "Stunt Night" between the various home rooms in the high school. Each class will present a timed stunt, and the Judges will pick the best stunts and award prizes. Each stunt will create many laughs, so come prepared to [illegible]

The admission will be 25c for children and adults.

Settlement of Oil Workers' Pay May Set Reconversion Pattern; Ease Curbs on Consumer Credit

Released by Western Newspaper Union

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Their guns taken away, Jap naval shore patrolmen walk streets with wooden staves to maintain order among disarmed sailors in Tokyo.

LABOR:

U. S. Acts

Acting energetically, Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach took the all-important oil workers' wage dispute virtually in his own hands by transferring negotiations to Washington, D. C., in an effort to effect a settlement that was expected to set a pattern for the reconversion period.

With the Oil Workers' union demand for a 30 per cent wage increase embodying the program of other powerful CIO organizations, and with the oil companies' offer of a 15 per cent boost representing the usual compromise, final disposition of the case would go far toward determining the amount of "take-home" pay for employees during the ensuing months.

Schwellenbach's decision to shift the parley to Washington, D. C., from Chicago, Ill., followed upon an early deadlock in the bargaining over the union's insistence that the dispute be settled on an industry-wide basis and the companies' stand that contracts should be signed by individual plants.

Meanwhile, over 1,500,000 persons were affected by the strike of AFL elevator operators and building service employees in New York, with business losses running over $1,000,000 a day and production of winter and summer garments virtually stopped. Balking at a war labor board award of $28.05 for a 44 hour week, the union asked $30.15 for a 40 hour week.

JAPAN:

Historic Precedent

September 27, 1945, went down in history as the red-letter day on which a Japanese emperor, unbending himself in defeat, made a personal call upon a victorious U. S. commander to break all precedent.

God to his people, small, wiry Hirohito, in formal morning clothes and high silk top hat, was very much man to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who, steeped in occupational duties, met him in informal military attire and without a tie.

Motoring to the American embassy in Tokyo for the visit, Hirohito made his call just as MacArthur set about shaping plans for the re-education of the Japanese people and stripping Nippon of all its war-making potentialities by an economic reformation.

In recasting the Japanese mind, MacArthur chose to pursue the present policy of working through native personnel. Japanese press, radio, movies, government information bureaus, schools and various social groups would be used as mediums for the dissemination of democratic principles and ideals for world co-operation.

In Japan's economic reformation, the U. S. will strive for the eradication of all potential war industry, confining the Nipponese merely to civilian production. At the same time, efforts will be made to break up the business monopoly of the four great houses of Mitsibushi, Mitsui, Yusada, and Sumitomo, and promote widespread ownership and trade. Organization of labor and agricultural organizations also will be encouraged.

Meanwhile, Japanese economic experts called for a resumption of trade with the U. S. to speed Nippon's postwar recovery and stave off impending privation. In return for American cotton, wool, salt, oil, iron, sugar and leather the Japanese proposed exports of silk, gold, porcelain ware and lacquer goods.

TIRES:

Demand Mounts

While the production of new automobile tires is making fair progress, prospects for the elimination of tire rationing in the near future are not promising, according to the National Automobile Dealers association.

Although the tire industry is planning on the production of approximately 12 million tires between October and the end of the year, some will be reserved for new cars.

CREDIT:

Ease Controls

In a move hit by OPA because of inflationary possibilities, but rapped by finance companies because of its restricted scope, the government removed all credit controls over building renovation and eased regulations on loans for services or non-essential purchases.

Remaining unchanged in view of popular demand and limited supply was the 12 month credit repayment for washing machines, vacuum cleaners, bed linen, mattresses, boats, watches, cameras, automobiles, pianos and furniture.

Though OPA resisted the restricted easing of credit regulations for fear of a scaling of prices upward in face of heavy buying, certain financing groups declared that continuing restrictions placed low income classes at a disadvantage and price control and rationing assured market stabilization.

ARGENTINA:

Buck Change

Problem center of South America, Argentina was under another state of siege as the government of Pres. Edelmiro Farrell, controlled by Col. Juan Peron, rounded up economic, political and labor leaders following an ill-fated attempt to overthrow the present regime.

Colonel Peron

In extending military rule and suspending constitutional guarantees of speech, press and assembly, the government declared that it was forced to move to stem "a growing campaign aimed at alteration of the (existing) order and conducted by the oligarchy (powerful interests) . . ." Liberty would be restored when the various groups would know how to use it, Farrell added.

The abortive revolutionary attempt by two top Argentine generals followed close upon the heels of widespread demonstrations of democratic elements against the pro-military Farrell-Peron regime, maintaining the present economic and social setup in the face of persistent demands for its liberalization.

JOBLESS BENEFITS:

Shelve Bill

Declaring that the current wave of strikes has confused the question of whether a real need exists for the lengthening of unemployment compensation payments up to 26 weeks, the powerful house ways and means committee held up a senate bill providing federal aid for extension of benefits.

By its action, the house group dealt a body blow to President Truman's program for jobless aid, since the senate in passing a modified bill previously had refused to boost unemployment compensation up to a maximum of $25 weekly. The senate measure would have permitted the federal government to advance sufficient sums to the states to spread jobless payments over 26 weeks.

House committee rejection of the bill stirred labor's wrath, AFL Pres. William Green accusing the congressmen of "callous disregard of human needs," and CIO Chieftain Philip Murray calling upon the CIO and its Political Action committee for an all-out drive to "secure reversal of this shameful act."

ARMY SEEKS MISSING

Army "search teams" are combing the battlefields of Europe and the Pacific for personnel now listed as missing.

Consisting of five soldiers, one of whom speaks the language of the locality, search teams are assigned a certain area of approximately one and one-half square miles. Information on missing personnel is consolidated to speed investigation

OIL:

U. S.-British Pact

Virtual monopolists in oil, the U. S. and Britain came to an understanding for the orderly development of petroleum trade in the postwar world in a pact fashioned in London by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and British officials and subject to senate ratification.

Removing vigorous opposition to any control over domestic production as envisaged in a previous agreement later repudiated by the U. S., the new pact only provides for advisory regulation of American and British operations overseas. Both countries have extensive oil holdings in foreign lands, notably in the middle east, where deposits are reportedly as great as in the U. S.

In drawing up the agreement, Ickes and British Fuel Administrator Shinwell provided for mutual respect of all concessions and rights obtained by either country, and also pledged non-interference with operations.

MEAT:

More Available

Because of the seasonal increase in the marketings of range fed cattle, OPA removed point requirements for lower grades of beef, veal and lamb through most of October, and also made hamburger, lamb and veal patties, short ribs and brisket of beef, breast and flank of lamb and shank of veal ration-free.

In addition, points were lifted from such low-grade meat products as sausage, frankfurters, luncheon variety and canned meats.

In contrast, however, the continued tight supply of hogs and finished cattle necessitated the retention of current point values on pork cuts, bacon and other cured meats, and choice selections of beef, veal and lamb. Though fats and oils were kept on the rationing list, point removal on cheaper meat will furnish additional stamps for these items.

Henry II Takes Over

To husky, 28-year-old Henry Ford II, who in college displayed more of a penchant for sociology than engineering, went the presidency of the huge Ford Motor company, following the retirement of his famed grandfather from active service with the firm.

Upon assuming his post, Henry the II declared his ambition was to return Ford to leadership in sales again, the company having trailed Chevrolet throughout most of the decade preceding the war. On his toes, young Ford had shown the new 1946 model last July, only two days after government authorization for resuming civilian production, and the firm was well off to postwar output when impeded by strikes.

Retiring at 62 after having resumed the presidency of his famed company in June of 1943 upon the death of his son, Edsel, Ford declared that he would devote most of his energies to his outside interests, chief of which have been utilization of farm products in industry.

EUROPE:

Occupation Problem

In war or in peace, old General Patton, with a mind of his own continued to make news, the latest ocasion being his clash with General Eisenhower over the use of competent former Nazi civil servants for a restoration of German economy to head off threatened chaos this winter.

Besides being asked for an immediate report on the number of former Nazis still holding office in 3rd army territory, Patton also was directed to give Eisenhower a personal accounting of his control over the Bavarian region. For a hard peace, Eisenhower favors a ruthless denazification of Germany's political, educational and economic life, and an early establishment of a Reich living standard no higher than surrounding countries'

Though the first to be called on the carpet, Patton's attitude is known to be shared by other U. S. officers seeking to avert starvation, frost suffering and epidemics this winter in the shattered nation.

FAR EAST:

Native Uprising

Even as Chinese and British forces took over Indo-China, native Annamites rose in rebellion at the prospect of a return of French rule, terrorizing the European population of the state, which normally exports much rice, rubber, high-grade coal, spices and tin.

Frenchmen were the principal targets of native wrath, since many, under protection of Chinese and British guns, have displaced Annamites holding public offices preliminary to re-establishment of French colonial rule.

Strangely enough, the Japanese, who promised Indo-Chinese independence during their military occupation of the country and still remain in force prior to their complete demobilization, have been called upon to help assist undermanned Allied units re-establish peace.

GOOD NEIGHBOR:

Aids Health

Remote, disease-plagued regions of the Amazon systems of Peru and Bolivia have been equipped by modern health measures to progress in human welfare.

The menace of malaria and other tropical diseases has been considerably lessened in the two countries by inauguration of hospitals and medical services by the U. S. and South American nations through the Institute of Inter-American affairs.

Playful Pet or Killer? Experts Study Zoo Bear

Summer Appears to Change Nature of the Beast Into Dangerous Animal.

CHICAGO.—What is it about summertime that turns the friendly bear into a growling killer is perplexing the minds of zoo officials here, says the Herald American.

They were trying to probe into the "personality" of the beast to see whether it was fundamentally a fun-loving pet or a dangerous animal.

A big, lumbering clown of the animal kingdom, a Tibetan bear, has proved that in the hot weather it is more treacherous than a snake, more ferocious than a tiger, and not to be trusted even by the keeper who has fed and kept it for many years.

In its cage at Lincoln Park zoo it went berserk, mangling and chewing the arms of a veteran attendant, Anton Rauch, 59, who had entered the cage to clean it. Rauch later died in the hospital.

Rauch's screams attracted Park Policeman John Lanning, who entered the barred enclosure armed with a sawed-off shotgun. The big bear dropped the limp form of Rauch and lunged for the policeman only to be felled by three shots. Both Rauch's arms had been chewed and the right one had been torn into shreds.

No Difficulty Before.

In 30 years at the zoo, Rauch had never had the slightest difficulty with the animals, and had come to trust many of the inmates of the bear cages, which Rauch had helped build himself.

Rauch's experience emphasizes that the bear is even more of a potential killer than the tiger or lion. It also serves as a warning that the summer season, which means increased attendance at zoos and circuses, is always a bad time to let down the bars of safety when it comes to dealing with them.

In a search through newspaper files of several years, it was found that the increased excitement of crowds seems to irritate the big animals and change their normal desire for fun into a mad fury of murder.

It was on July 17, 1944, when Catherine Searles, 25, a New York socialite and daughter of a wealthy zinc manufacturer, went to see the bears at Central Park zoo following a night club party.

According to the police, Miss Searles climbed over a three-foot guard rail and waved a handkerchief through the steel bars of a cage. The beast grabbed her arm and gnawed it from finger tips to elbow.

Bear Breaks Loose.

It was on August 5, some years ago, when a ferocious grizzly broke from a steel-barred cage in Highland Park zoo in Pittsburgh and spread terror through the adjoining residential district, before being shot and killed.

She attacked Zoo Superintendent Arnold Schaummann on sight. Schaumman, armed with a shotgun, shot the beast as it roared at him, dropping the animal eight feet away.

In almost exactly similar circumstances as the Lincoln Park mauling, Thomas Earl, 56, keeper at Cleveland's Brookside zoo, was ripped to death on July 8, 1932.

Earl, unarmed, went into the bearpen with a breakfast of raw meat, bread and carrots for "Sunshine," a 900-pound beast named for his usually even temper.

The animal rose up suddenly, encircled Earl's shoulders with one paw and began clawing at him with the other.

Other workers failed to drive the beast off by poking at him with rakes, and it finally took 10 rifle shots to kill him. Earl was dead.

Turtle Has Neck Trouble; Operation Yields Cyst

There was danger that the big green reptile at San Francisco's Steinhart aquarium would become but a hollow shell, for every time he stuck his neck out he got a lump in it and couldn't eat.

He shriveled up between decks to a scant 58 pounds, so Dr. Wilbert Chapman, curator of fishes for the California Academy of Sciences, ordered an operation.

A few swift incisions, a tied artery and the whole thing was over in 15 minutes. Napoleon showed signs of immediate recovery.

The tonsillectomy, not the turtle, was mock. The "surgeons" got credit for a cyst.

Private Soldier Wins Pass and a Promotion

SHEPPARD FIELD, TEXAS. — Pfc. Robert L. Hall, Memphis, Tenn., was booked for a three-day pass —and wound up with a promotion.

It all happened because the private was tempted by the suggestion of a three-day pass for ideas in a conservation program while stationed at Craig field, Selma, Ala. Hall submitted a device for prevention of battery acid overflow.

Now a letter has arrived from Washington headquarters granting authority to promote the aviation student to corporal.

$1,920 Is Found in Home Laundry Chute

KANSAS CITY. — A laundry chute loosed a shower of $20, $50 and $100 bills along with the soiled clothes when Mrs. Cleota Atwood pulled open the chute outlet in her basement. The money —$1,920 of it—had disappeared from a strongbox belonging to a guest of the Atwoods. Now everyone is a lot happier.

Society Wakes Up; Wrong Is Righted

Debt to Cripple to Be Paid; Builds Him Home.

ST. LOUIS.—Theodore Harris, 43-year-old cripple who has been living in an abandoned double-decker bus, soon will move into a dream house of his own—complete with shrubbery and a vine-covered fence.

Harris' plight came to the public attention recently when he was charged with violating the zoning ordinance. Alderman Vernon G. Riehl, who served as provisional city judge in the cripple's case, dismissed the charge and said:

"Society owes you an apology for singling you out and bringing you into court on a charge when there is so much wrong in the world."

Society is going to add action to kind words.

Twenty sympathetic St. Louisans are banding together to help in the house-raising. They have bought a lot on which the home is to be built. It will be held in trust for Harris, and later it will be turned over to a charitable institution.

Doors, windows, roofing material and paint will be donated by firms dealing in such commodities.

The cripple, who makes a meager living repairing clocks and old-fashioned music boxes, said he had acquired a gift of 240 feet of wooden handrails from the old excursion steamer Capital, now being scrapped.

"I'm going to make a fence out of that," he said, "with vines."

There will be a special ramp into the house to facilitate Harris' entrance on his motor-propelled three-wheeled car.

The move in his behalf, he said, was started by three persons who appeared as character witnesses in his case.

"I've already got a name for my home," Harris said. "I'm going to call it 'The Little Ranch House on the Hill.'"

Physician's Trust Fund Helps 12,519 Students

MARSHALL, MO. — The quinine pills of Dr. John Sappington, pioneer Missouri physician, have helped 12,519 Saline county boys and girls get an education at a total cost of $211,803, the annual report of the Sappington school fund discloses.

The fund dates back to 1857 when Dr. Sappington, one of the state's first physicians, set up a $20,000 trust, the income from which was to be used in giving common school education to deserving, needy children. This was before public schools had been established.

The proud and whimsical "Old Doc" was the first to use quinine extensively for malaria and made a fortune selling the drug to malaria sufferers of the Missouri and Mississippi valleys.

With the advent of public school systems, proceeds of the fund were directed toward aiding boys and girls of high school and college ages, with a big share of the money going to the latter group. Beneficiaries of the fund are required to maintain good scholastic standing.

The original $20,000 has earned nearly $300,000. The fund has a current balance of $82,500.

Selling Restrictions On Domestic Wool Relax

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The government recently lifted restrictions on the sale of domestic wool which made the Commodity Credit corporation the sole legal buyer.

Growers may sell to any one, but under present conditions little wool is expected to go to any one except the CCC. The agency is committed to buy all wool offered it at ceiling prices until June 30, 1946. The ceiling is about 2 per cent above the price of foreign wools readily available to manufacturers.

The department of agriculture is considering a proposal to cut the price of government-owned domestic wool to levels competitive with foreign wools.

Hear Better in Noisy Spot With Plugged Ears

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. — If you have difficulty hearing an ordinary conversation above the din of a machine shop or a busy street corner, try putting your fingers in your ears.

Dr. Edwin G. Boring, Harvard university psychologist, said that when noise is extremely loud, the ear loses its ability to discriminate differences in sound such as the tone of a voice.

When the mass of the sound is blocked out, the ear can distinguish voice tones and other sounds above the loud noise, he said.

Cold Rinse Removes Milky Film From Utensils

An advance rinse in clear, cold water will save time and trouble in washing dishes and glasses. Calcium and protein — two of the important food values in milk—cause difficulties in dish washing. Most housewives know how hard it is to wash glasses, pitchers and other milk containers clean. The reason is that calcium forms an insoluble curd with the soap in the dish water which affects not only the looks but also the sanitation of the container. Bacteria and other organisms may be held under this film The protein in the milk also makes cleaning difficult, because the heat of the dish water hardens or coagulates it, making a film that is difficult to wash off the surface.

Milk on clothes, dish cloths, table cloths and towels may leave a stubborn stain after washing. A cloth used to take up spilled milk may come out of the wash tub permanently stiff. The effect of the soap on calcium and heat on protein show up.

If milky dishes and fabrics are rinsed with clear cold water before coming in contact with warm soapy water, much of the calcium and protein will be carried away so that the washing may be done satisfactorily.

Cows Need Rest

Every cow needs a rest period of six to eight weeks if she is to produce the most milk during her next milking period.

Bacteria Threat

An improperly cleaned milking machine may add millions of bacteria to the fresh milk that passes through the machine.

Heating Efficiency

To get the utmost efficiency out of the fuel that is burned, the flues of steam heating boilers should be externally and internally clean. Just as it would be more difficult to boil water in a teakettle with grease in it, so the presence of grease, oil, or other solids and foreign matter in boiler water makes it more difficult to get up steam. The effect is to increase fuel consumption. The internal cleaning of boiler flues, as well as the entire inside of the boiler, is done by the use of a good boiler cleaning compound.

MRS. LYLE BRAGONIER IS TELLING HER FRIENDS

BLOOMINGTON, ILLINOIS.—Mrs. Lyle Bragonier certainly is pleased with Faultless Starch. Here is what she wrote in a letter:

"I surely am very much satisfied with Faultless Starch. It tops any make of starch. I'm through with all other starches. Make mine Faultless every time. I surely will tell my friends about this wonderful starch."

Are you that well satisfied with the starch you are now using? If you are not, why not try Faultless Starch right away and see for yourself why Mrs. Bragonier and so many thousands of other women enjoy this special kind of starch.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR

Here are some of the special advantages of Faultless Starch. Look for them when you try your first box.

You'll discover that Faultless Starch saves several minutes of time when it's time to make hot starch. The reason is—you don't have to cook it. You just cream Faultless Starch with a little cool water and add boiling water while stirring, that's all. No cooking needed.

MAKES IRONING EASY

In addition, you will find that Faultless Starch makes your ironing smooth, easy, beautiful. The reason is—Faultless Starch contains ironing-aids that keep the iron from sticking. No more fighting a "sticky" iron. Ironing becomes a joy—not a job.

WON'T BLOW OR FREEZE OUT

Another advantage is that Faultless Starch won't blow out or freeze out on the line. No more starching everything over again.

No wonder people like Mrs. Bragonier say, "It tops any make of starch. I surely will tell my friends about this wonderful starch."

You can enjoy Faultless Starch, too. Just ask your grocer for "Faultless Starch." He has it. Use it next wash day, sure, and save time and work from now on. —Adv.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Garden Gifts

Now that we once more have peace all over the world, we all ought to start our good neighbor policy right at home. Lots of little friendly gestures that mean so much have been forgotten during the war, but they should be reinstated.

Something that all of us with a garden can do is to share with a neighbor. There are probably lots of things that you yourself cannot use that would be welcomed by a neighbor. Send a basket of garden vegetables or fruit, all dressed up with fancy wrappings and ribbon, and see what a friend you can make. Incidentally, include a lemon or two to make it handy for the homemaker to season either fruit or vegetables.

Another gift that will be welcome is a set of your favorite recipes, with or without a basket of garden produce. Every woman has a few choice dishes which her friends have asked for, and it makes for more friendliness to be generous with the instructions.

Here are some brief suggestions which I'd like to pass on to you, particularly for vegetables:

If you find yourself short of salad dressings for a tossed salad, sprinkle 2 or 3 tablespoons of oil on the individual salad then squeeze lemon juice generously over this, salt to taste and toss the salad lightly.

To make a good, old-fashioned cole slaw, add the following amounts to 2½ cups of shredded cabbage: ¾ teaspoon salt, 1½ tablespoons sugar, 6 tablespoons coffee cream, and 3 tablespoons of lemon juice.

In making pickled beets, cook the beets first, then slice and cover with equal parts of lemon juice and water. Add sugar to taste, and slices of sweet onion, if desired.

Now that fall has come, we can start turning our attention to heartier foods again. Cabbage is a good vegetable to use because it is coming in season:

Stuffed Cabbage.
(Serves 5 to 6)

3 tablespoons uncooked rice
1 pound ground beef
1 egg well-beaten
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
8 medium to large cabbage leaves
2½ cups canned tomatoes
1 tablespoon flour
4 tablespoons sour cream
½ teaspoon salt

Cook rice in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and rinse. Mix rice, ground meat, egg, onion, salt and pepper. Steam cabbage leaves in ½ cup water for 10 minutes. Fill leaves with meat mixture (½ cup to each leaf), fold leaf over meat and fasten with a toothpick. Arrange in saucepan, add tomatoes, bring to a boil, then simmer gently for 1½ hours. Mix flour, sour cream and ½ teaspoon salt to a paste; remove cabbage balls to a dish and stir sour cream and flour mixture into tomatoes. Bring to a boil quickly and pour over cabbage rolls and serve.

A favorite pie for fall, and incidentally a nice recipe to tuck into one of those gift baskets, is one for this unusual Green Tomato Mincemeat Pie. It's spicy and fragrant, bound to please:

Green Tomato Mincemeat Pie.
1 peck of green tomatoes
1 quart sliced apples, fresh or dried
1 pound seedless raisins
Salt
1 pound suet, chopped
Cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves
2½ pounds brown sugar
3 lemons
Water

Wash tomatoes. Cut in small pieces. Sprinkle with salt. Let stand overnight. Drain. Add sufficient water to prevent sticking. Cook 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Add lemon juice, grated rind and white of 1 lemon, cut in small pieces. Add apples, suet, raisins and sugar. Add spices to taste and a few grains of salt. Simmer slowly, stirring frequently, until tomatoes and apples are tender and flavors are blended. Pack in freshly sterilized jar and seal. Line a 9-inch pie pan with pastry and fill with 2½ cups of the tomato mincemeat mixture. Cover top with pastry, flute edges and bake in a 425-degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes.

Two vegetables which we miss during the other seasons are ready to take their bows now. You will like both green tomatoes and eggplant prepared in this fashion:

Stuffed Eggplant.
(Serves 6)

1 eggplant
½ teaspoon pepper
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons cracker crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons milk
½ cup grated cheese

Eggplant may be cooked in boiling water for five minutes before scooping out. Cut slice from top or cut in half lengthwise. Remove pulp and mix with other ingredients. Refill shells and cover with cheese and crumbs and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 minutes.

Green Tomato Fritters.
(Serves 6)

1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
⅔ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, well beaten
6 green tomatoes, sliced ½ inch thick

Beat egg, add to milk. Mix flour, baking powder and salt. Combine with liquid and mix to a smooth batter. Sprinkle sliced tomatoes with salt and pepper. Drain on absorbent paper and dip in batter. Fry in deep fat until golden brown. Other raw vegetables may be prepared in this way.

Lynn Says:

Refrigerate Your Foods: Refrigeration is necessary to most foods not only to preserve their appearance and palatability, but also to prevent food spoilage.

In most cases, temperatures of 40 degrees will take care of the situation. This temperature is best maintained.

Meat, milk, vegetables and fruits are extremely perishable and should be refrigerated immediately. Root vegetables do not need as low as 40 degrees and may be kept out of the ice box. Bananas need never be refrigerated.

Fruit needs chilling, not freezing.

The crisper or open dish or even paper cartons are excellent for keeping eggs in the refrigerator.

Meat needs the coolest place in the refrigerator—right under the freezing unit. Bacteria multiply very rapidly unless it is well protected.

The x-rays, so-called because science did not know their exact nature, were discovered by the German physicist, Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen, on November 8, 1895, at the Physical Institute of the University of Wurzburg in Bavaria. Early in his experiments with the newly discovered rays, Roentgen found that they would penetrate opaque objects, among them the human body. Interposing his hand between the source of the rays and a piece of luminescent cardboard, Roentgen saw the "bones of his living hand projected in silhouette upon the luminescent screen."

His discovery electrified the medical world, which immediately saw the vast possibilities of this new instrument in the war on injury and disease. While the public is generally familiar with the use of x-ray in the detection of broken bones, it does not fully appreciate the employment of radiology in diagnosing "soft tissue" pathology and the use of x-rays in the prevention and treatment of disease.

No part of the human body, due to developments in the medical uses of x-ray over the last half-century, is now hidden from the radiologist. By means of x-ray examination, the radiologist can detect diseased conditions of the brain, the heart, the lungs, the digestive tract and other parts of the body, eliminating guesswork almost entirely. Incipient cancer, tuberculosis and other maladies are quickly diagnosed by radiology, allowing for preventive treatment which more often than not arrests the disease. The x-ray plays an indispensable role in denistry. Also cancer, various blood diseases and other conditions may be checked by radiation, that is, through treatment with x-rays.

Mixing Insecticides

Keep children and pets away when mixing insecticides, and wash all utensils thoroughly and promptly after mixing. In both mixing and using sprays and dusts, take great care to keep them out of mouth, eyes and nose, and also away from the skin as much as possible. Shorts and sunsuits are not suitable wear for these jobs because they leave so much skin exposed. After handling and using insecticides, wash hands and face thoroughly. Garments worn when spraying and dusting should be washed frequently. Bags and packages which have held insect powders should be burned out in the open air and empty cans and any leftover insecticides should be buried at least a foot in the ground.

New Corn Products Include Zein and Allyl Starch

Corn is the largest volume agricultural material going into industry. In 1944 the amount ground for industrial purposes was about four times the 800,000 tons of synthetic rubber produced in this country. The starch industry, however, has not confined itself to corn as the single raw material. When the supply of corn ran out, wheat took its place. Looking toward possible new sources, work is being done in the industry on the grain sorghums as raw material for starch products. Products from corn include zein, a protein on the market for some time while allyl starch, a new derivative recently developed, may be used in resins and surface coatings.

FOR your tractor . . . for your truck . . . for your car, and for every other farm use, there is a Firestone tire engineered and built to do the job—and to do it better than any other tire made.

There are certain definite reasons why Firestone tires perform better and last longer. One is Firestone's understanding of farm tire requirements based on years of experience in the farm tire field. Another is the never-ending Firestone research and development program to build the best today—and make it still better tomorrow. And still another vitally important reason for the superiority of Firestone tires is the fact that they are built by the finest craftsmen using the finest materials that science and machines can produce.

You can save time, money and do a better job of farming if you specify "Firestone" every time you buy a tire for your farm. From now on make it a Firestone.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Victory decisive and final
Is ours in this world born anew.
Peace . . which we trust everlasting
Is here for the world to review.

Prosperous years are before us,
Provided we all do our part,
And work as one unit together
With a little of God in our heart.

This paragraph is a bit personal, but after all, we know more about our own "Folks & Things" than about others. The thought struck us today when we learned that Mrs. T. W. Bryan was dead. The wife had been invited to a "Miscellaneous Shower" for Mrs. Raymond Cox (Peggy Franklin) who was married a few short weeks ago. Our mother is attending the funeral of Mrs. Bryan this afternoon. It is the beginning and the end. For Peggy, life has just begun. And sunshine and life is bright and wonderful. Her's is a heritage of youth. To Mrs. Bryan it is, we suppose, a heritage of the old. For one life is beginning, for the other life is over. Two generations ago, she and one which life has ended, looked forward to the same bright future as does the youth of today. All her's was lovely to her too, then. The years that pass between and through the years are of our own making. We win or we lose by the way we live. Tomorrow and tomorrow, others will start the long road down through the years to finish at the same place—death. That is, death here. To those who believe there is life everlasting. To Mr. Bryan we offer our fullest sympathy. To young Peggy Franklin Cox we wish for her a full life. May her optimism be fulfilled and all her dreams come true.

We have heard of crazy situations but now we've heard everything. This week a fellow wanted to sell a stove, we think it was a practically new wood range, but wouldn't give us the ad to run in our classified columns because when he run advertising with us he got too many answers. He said he would sell the thing the first day and then for another week or two he will still be getting calls about it. Which reminds us of the lady who advertised the turkeys the other day. She just had 18 small ones to sell but got so many calls for them and had to turn down so many people that she just went ahead and sold all of her grown ones too. She said she could have sold ten times as many.

We own a Wimberly neck tie that we have worn for seven years. A fellow in this business has to wear a tie for seven years. We bought it from Mr. ave Cohen at the Parisian Store when he was located on the alley where Mullins & Scott is now. We were telling Mr. Cohen about it this week and he volunteered, after we twisted his arm, to give us another. He got tired looking at the old one we guess. Anyway, we appreciate the new tie very much and it is really a beauty. It is prettier than any Xmas tie you ever saw. Ties are like good clothes, good printing, good live tock, good advertising, good wives, good gracious! What are we saying? Oh yeah, it pays only to get the best.

We got something in Chilton County that few, if any, Selective Service Board in these United States can boast of. Two brothers left here in February, 1942, for the army. That is they were inducted on February 14th, 1942; they left a few days later possibly. They were James Wesley Wright, 32, and John Hollis Wright, 35. After preliminary training at various camps they fought through Gaudalcanal, New Guinea, Northern Solomons, Southern Philippines and Luzon. One of the brothers was in Company D, of the same outfit—that is the 169th Infantry. James Wesley was wounded. They came back to Camp Shelby, Miss., together and were discharged there on October 3. They both reported to the Local Board here on October 11th. Both received the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre Operations Medal. Philippines Liberation Ribbon, with Bronze Star. Both received Good Conduct Medals and the Distinguished Unit Badge. The brothers formerly lived at Maplesville Rte. 1, but are now residing in Birmingham. According to Mrs. Herbert Newell and Mrs. Louie Smith of the two Locals Boards, we have had no records to compare with the Wright brothers since the organizing of the local offices.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We had a good crowd at Sunday School and preaching services Sunday and Sunday night. Bro. Cook delivered two good sermons. We have preaching service twice a month, the second and fourth Sundays, and everyone is invited.

We will soon have the church wired and we will have lights before long. We are proud of this.

Be sure and go to Sunday School every Sunday. I'm sure you'll enjoy hearing our Superintendent of the Sunday School.

SARDIS

Our new church is completed and we have set Sunday, October 21st, as our dedication day. Bro. G. G. Williams will bring the dedication sermon. There will be services and singing throughout the day. We invite everyone and all good singers to come and be with us. We are looking forward for a great day worshiping together.

We plan to run our revival the following week. We will meet at 10 o'clock Sunday morning for Sunday School. Come bring your lunch and spend the day.—E. L. Owen.

The supply of fertilizer for use in the 1945-46 crop season is expected to be about the same as the amount used last year. An increased amount of superphosphate, about the same quantity of nitrogen, and about the same amount of potash are in prospect for the current production year as compared with last year. Federal controls have been lifted on all but a few "approved grades" of fertilizer.

A cow was crossing the road and the speeding motorist rammed into it. Out of the farm house ran the owner shouting angrily:

"Now, now," said the motorist "Keep calm; I'll replace your cow."

The farmer topped suddenly, looked him up and down, and then spat. "Shucks," he said, "You can't give milk."

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

The following friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Littlejohn and daughter, Lena, gathered at their home on Sunday, October 7th, to celebrate his 86th birthday:

Mr. and Mrs. John Littlejohn, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Baker and daughter, Loyce; Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Smith, Mrs. Gresham Smith and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lenoir and children, Mrs. Hattie Lenoir and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Littlejohn and son, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Carter, Mrs. W. R. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Littlejohn and son, Mr. and Mrs. George Foshee, Mrs. Lemmie Melton, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Littlejohn, Mrs. Macie Collins and children, Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Littlejohn and Mrs. Sam Avery and son.

Three long tables were piled high with food in the spacious back yard at lunch time, which we all enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Littlejohn, Mr. and Mrs. S. Q. Foshee called in the afternoon.

JACKSON

Our pastor was with us Saturday night. Also Rev. Ocie Payton delivered a wonderful message Sunday night, which was enjoyed by all.

Next Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night are our regular preaching services by our pastor, Rev. Clyde Davis. We will also have a supper for the children. There will be foot-washing and the Lord's Supper Sunday night.

The Young People's Class is doing nicely. Sunday School each Sunday at 10 o'clock. Remember all are welcome. Come bring the family.—C. J. Moatts, Reporter.

IT'S MORE Comfortable TO TRAVEL NOW

The understanding patience of our patrons was an encouraging factor in the Louisville & Nashville's handling of its over-taxing war job, and we want to say "Thanks to you, Mr. and Mrs. Traveler, for your grand cooperation." We are pardonably proud of the task performed.

With the war ended, the travel situation is rapidly improving. While many service men will be traveling — mostly homeward — for months to come, crowded conditions on our railroad have been somewhat relieved.

Government restrictions are almost entirely gone. We are again able to give greater attention to those features that for so many years have caused our railroad to be known as "The Old Reliable": Comfort, Friendliness, Courtesy, Dependability, Safety, at Low Cost—In All Weather—Every Day of the Year.

Comfortable coach seats are available now on most trains and seats or berths in Pullman cars can usually be secured.

On order now are 28 additional comfortably appointed passenger cars for your use between many important points on our line. These will be in service in the not-too-distant future.

Our representatives can be helpful in handling details of your trip. For reservations, or just friendly assistance, call your L. & N. Ticket Agent.

Where they are and How they are

T-Sgt. Leonard M. Eiland recently received his discharge from the Army where he was stationed at Fort Myers, Fla.

He is with his family and other relatives for a visit before going to work.

Morris Jacks, S 2-C, of Route 3, served on the U S S CHENANGO, an escort aircraft carrier, when she carried 1,357 released prisoners of war from Nagasaki, Japan, to a redistribution point at Okinawa.

Some of the evacuates—Americans, English, Australians, Dutch and Japanese—are survivors of Wake Island, the Bataan "Death March" and the sunken U S S HOUSTON.

Cabot Robinson, S 2-C, Verbena, Ala., served aboard the U S S NEHENTA BAY, an escort aircraft carrier, when she, too, took part in the occupation of Ominato Naval Base on the Northern tip of Honshu, main Japanese Island.

Lawrence A Duffey, Gunner's Mate, 2-C USNR, Mt. Creek, Ala., helped evacuate 219 recovered Allied Military personnel aboard his cruiser, the BILOXI, from the city that was the victim of the second atom bomb, Negasaki.

Edgar Allen House, S 1-C, of Route One, Maplesville, Ala., served on the light cruiser, the U S S RICHMOND, as she anchored off Ominato Naval Base to help in the occupation of Northern Japan.

To the men of this ship, the occupation of Hokkaido and northern Honshu was a fitting climax to the long, weary months of battling fogs, storms, cold and Japs in the North Pacific.

Former S-Sgt. Henry A. Roper, who was last stationed with U. S. Army at Fort Bragg, N. C., is now at home after receiving his discharge. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Roper of Route Three, Clanton.

S-Sgt. Shelton P Owens, son of Mr and Mrs. G. M. Owens of Clanton Rt. Three, has just returned with a discharge, September 22nd, from the Philippines, where he spent 35 months overseas.

Owens is doing fine and is very happy to be back home with his loved ones and old friends.

Among those recently discharged at the Fourth Service Command Reclamation Center, in Atlanta, Ga., for re-enlistment in the regular army, was Technician Fifth Grade George L Burnett, of Clanton.

Tech. 5 Burnett has served three years in the armed forces, 30 months of that time in the North African, Mediterranean and European Theatres of Operation. He took part in the Rome-Arno Campaigns in Southern Italy and wears the European Theatre Ribbon with one battle star.

He is now on 90-day re-enlistment furlough from Atlanta.

SPENT FORTY-FIVE DAYS AT HOME

Pfc. Jack W. Martin of the U. S. Army Air Corps spent forty-five days at home with his wife, Mrs. Olga Martin, on Route Three.

Pfc. Martin served in the European Theatre of operation, 24 months in the Area of North Africa, Sicily and various parts of Italy.

He has returned to Atlanta Ga., for re-enlistment.

T-4 John D. Smith, who has been in the European Theatre of Operations for some time recently received his discharge from the U. S. Army, and is in Clanton with relatives and friends.

A MESSAGE FOR PERSONS LIVING IN RURAL AREAS

Rural telephone service is more highly developed in this country than anywhere else in the world. We are developing a wide-range program to further extend and improve service to rural dwellers in the South.

As soon as conditions permit, the necessary manpower and equipment will again be put to work on the job of expanding rural service—just as we were busily engaged in expanding this service prior to the war.

The goal is to bring the telephone to the greatest possible number of farm families.

WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I. The Herlongs had three children, Dick, 17, about ready to enter the service, Cherry and Brian. Arthur had not been killed, but taken to a German hospital, badly disfigured. He did not want to live, and wanted Elizabeth to believe he was dead. When Dr. Jacoby started treating him, Arthur was almost helpless. He recovered, hid part of his facial disfigurement behind a beard and went to Hollywood. He soon started to work for Spratt, under the name of Kessler.

CHAPTER XII

What was left of Arthur quivered with rage. "You brute," he said, "you damned brute." He continued with epithets worse than that. He had never been addicted to profanity and was surprised to find such language coming so readily to his lips. But the words were there and he used them, and continued using them every time he saw the doctor.

Later he asked Jacoby if he had understood anything of what he had been saying then. Jacoby smiled with the grim humor Arthur had learned to recognize. "Not the vocabulary. But I did not need the vocabulary to understand what you were saying to me, and just then I did not blame you."

But at that time Jacoby paid no attention to the protests. He simply left Arthur there to contemplate his shattered body and go wild with the prospect of being forced to live in it. There was nothing else Jacoby could do. He was working eighteen hours a day, on a pittance of food that in pre-war Germany would not have been thought enough for an idle man. Besides, since he knew so little English and Arthur knew no German at all, he had to let Arthur go on believing what he believed.

There was no way then for Jacoby to explain that four years of this war had almost annihilated his faith in the human soul. There was no way for him to say that he too was on the edge of despair, searching desperately for some reason to believe that men could be saved from the evil they had wrought.

These were the four years he had just lived through. The physical wrecks brought to him had been dreadful enough, but they were not the worst.

Arthur had been brought to him when he had begun to feel himself giving in to a brutal cynicism. When he examined Arthur, he suddenly felt that here was a man who could prove the ultimate test, not of a human body to recover, but of human courage to overcome disaster. When this American realized what had been done to him his mind would be black with hate and horror, even if it had never been before. At first he had wondered if he had the right to prolong such a life as this. But after several of those examinations under which Arthur had screamed and cursed at him, Jacoby had convinced himself that with labor and patience he could guarantee that his patient would not be helpless. Arthur would have something to work with. If he could be made to use what he had, and with it regain any wisdom or generosity in spite of what he had lost, Jacoby promised himself that he would take it as meaning that humanity could do the same. As he worked with him, as he saw Arthur's fury and despair, Arthur became to him a symbol of the world's wreckage. If this shattered American could come back, there was hope. The damage of the war was done to the world as it was done to Arthur, but if Arthur could be made to go on, could be made to want to go on, there was a reason for living. By this time Jacoby was not sure that there was. But he was going to find out.

Arthur still hated him. He had ceased to doubt that Jacoby meant exactly what he said: Jacoby was not going to let him die, but was going to restore as much as he could of what had been lost. That there was so much he could not restore made no difference to his eagerness. Much of the work was necessarily experimental. "But it's the sort of experiment he looks for," Arthur told himself bitterly. "It's not often he finds a patient who simply can't be any worse off, no matter how many mistakes he makes. When he gets one like that he gives him the works. One man is better than a thousand guinea pigs. I can see the reasoning. Only I never thought of its happening to me."

When he did have a chance to talk to Arthur again, Jacoby's difficulty with the language was so great that he could tell him very little. But after many attempts he managed to say,

"When you were begging me to let you alone, I was trying to make sure you would keep your right arm. Believe me, Kitt, if you had lost both arms, or if there had been blindness with all the rest, I should have done what you asked me."

Arthur said angrily, "Why don't you do it now?"

Jacoby gave him a look of real surprise. "Do you still want me to?"

"Yes. I do not want to be a subject for vivisection."

"Kitt, do you still think that is what I am doing to you?"

"You know it is."

Jacoby shook his head. He fumbled for words. He said, "I watched you for many days. I fought a battle. I cannot say it well. Perhaps in English I cannot say it at all. You are a man, Kitt, but also you are mankind. You must live. You must want to live. You must—do you understand me?" He spoke so intensely that he was almost fierce. "Kitt," he exclaimed, "let us try!"

Though he did not realize it then, Arthur remembered later that his own resistance was gradually being worn away by the power of Jacoby's determination. As time went on, he came to recognize the enthusiasm Jacoby was feeling. He had felt it himself when there was some almost impossible job to be tackled. "If I can do this, I can do anything." He knew what it meant to roll up his sleeves, saying that.

What he did not realize at the time was that this was not what Jacoby was saying. Jacoby was saying to himself, "If he can do this, I can do anything."

The first time he began to understand that Jacoby was not merely a cold scientist was the day when Ja-

"Kitt, if you will tell me—spell it slowly—the name of the woman—"

"Kitt, if you will tell me—spell it slowly—the name of the woman you kept talking to when you were delirious—?"

Arthur groaned. His impulse was to grip Jacoby's hand, but he could not do this. He could only say, "Jacoby, be merciful! If you've made up your mind to do this to me I can't stop you. But don't do it to her."

Without looking at Arthur, Jacoby said, "I thought it might be possible to get her a message. Through the Red Cross."

Arthur did not answer. After a pause Jacoby asked,

"You do not want to tell me who she is?"

Arthur said, "She is my wife."

Jacoby turned his head toward the bed then, involuntarily. He knew no words to speak and even if he had been using his own language there could have been nothing to say so eloquent as the pity he could not keep out of his eyes.

He crumpled the slip of paper in his fist. There was a silence. At length Jacoby said, "Very well." He turned and went away.

But in the depth of his own despair Arthur felt a stir of astonished warmth. "The man is a human being. There are some things even he can't take without a shudder."

After that, slowly but unmistakably, he began to discover that Jacoby wanted to be his friend. He began, dimly at first, through those days and nights of desolation, to grasp what Jacoby had meant when he said, "You are a man, but also you are mankind." It was a hard realization, and at first he was doubtful that it had any meaning. "He can make me stay alive," Arthur said to himself wearily. "But can he make me find any reason for doing it? Can anybody? I don't believe it."

Jacoby came back to his bedside often. He never again mentioned the woman Arthur had called for in his delirium. But there was more work on the arm, more on the jaw; the rest had to wait on the patient's strength and the doctor's opportunities. Arthur still had very little hope. Now that he understood Jacoby's purpose, he tried to sympathize with it, but he found this hard to do.

For after all, even after years of labor and pain, even with the highest success, what was the utmost Jacoby could give him? Power to use his right arm; power to sit up and write a letter; possibly, after a long time, power to hobble from place to place with a crutch. Power to look on hopelessly while healthy men and women went ahead with their healthy affairs, doing useful work and enjoying the rewards of it. Not even Jacoby's genius could restore him the sense of knowing he could take care of himself no matter what happened, the old happy forthrightness of being able to look the whole world in the face and tell it to get out of his way. Jacoby could never restore him his marriage. He could never give Elizabeth the children she wanted, or even the security and companionship she had had with him. Lying in a helpless huddle on his cot in the intervals of being fed and washed by strange hands, Arthur had nothing to do but look ahead into the sort of life-sentence he would be giving her if he let Jacoby communicate with her. No doubt he had been reported missing in action. When they found him, the Red Cross would have means of notifying Elizabeth he was still alive. After the war, as soon as Jacoby had repaired him sufficiently to make it possible for him to go home, he would have to go.

And then, Elizabeth would offer him everything she had. She was too loyal, and she loved him too much, to dream of doing otherwise. She would work, and use everything she could earn for his support. She would spend her life nursing him, amusing him, taking care of him, himself a broken wreck of a creature who could give her nothing in return except a doglike gratitude. Her splendid vitality would be spent in a twilight of half-living until she was dry and withered like fruit that had been broken off the tree before it had had a chance to ripen. As he thought of it he knew more and more surely that no matter what would become of him, he could not let this happen to her.

His decision was not entirely unselfish. Arthur was too clear-headed to imagine it was. Not only could he not do this to Elizabeth, but he could not do it to himself. Bearing his tragedy alone would be easier than requiring her to share it.

He knew, almost as if he were with her, what she would suffer at being told of his death. But that would not last forever, though at the time she would undoubtedly think it was going to. She would pick up the broken pattern of her life and set about putting it together again. Elizabeth was young, vital, alert, and there would be another man who would find her as lovable as he had found her. She would have again the sort of mating she should have. He tried instinctively to clench his fist with decision, and the pain that went like a bayonet-thrust into his shoulder, reminding him that he was not even able to make such a simple gesture, served to strengthen his resolve. When a man dies, he told himself, with more fierceness in his mind since there could be none in his body, it is like taking a teaspoonful of water out of a river. The water closes up, it is gone, and after an instant, nobody notices it any more.

When Jacoby came in again, Arthur told him what he had decided to do. He had to speak slowly, repeating often and waiting until Jacoby's intelligence had limped through to comprehension. The effort to make Jacoby understand took his attention away from the bleak import of what he was saying.

"I will make you a promise, Jacoby, if you will do one thing for me. Do it, and come back and tell me you have done it."

"I understand you. Go ahead."

"When I was brought in here, you found the metal tag of identification? And other things, maybe? Take those to the International Red Cross. Tell them your stretcher-bearers brought in an American who died of his wounds. You do not know his name. But you took these objects from his body. You will sign a death certificate, or whatever you have to sign. The American army will take care of the rest. If you will do this, and bring me some sort of proof that you have done it, I promise you that I will let you do whatever you please to me. But if you will not do it, I swear to you that I'll make you do it because I'll end my life as soon as I have a usable hand to do it with."

Deliberately, further to relieve his attention, he fixed his eyes on Jacoby's eyes, tender as the eyes of a mother; on Jacoby's strong, wise, gentle face; and while he repeated his sentences he noticed again what a thin face it was, the skin showing the waxiness of malnutrition, and guessed as he had guessed before that this man was denying himself part of his own rations to provide more nourishment for the men he was trying to save. At last he said, slowly and carefully, "You understand me? You will do what I ask, Jacoby?"

Jacoby used one of the precious night hours when he should have been asleep to rig up a sort of shelf across Arthur's cot, and set the dictionary up on it. "My English is so faulty, Kitt, and I have no time to improve it. Why do you not learn to talk to me?"

He read the first words aloud to him, slowly, so Arthur could begin to learn their pronunciation. While he was taking a hasty meal of turnips and potatoes Jacoby drew rough sketches of various objects in the room, writing their names beside them, and set the sheet up for Arthur to study during the day.

MAKING THE HOME CHRISTIAN

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:38-42; I Corinthians 13:4-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—Love suffereth long, and is kind.—I Corinthians 13:4.

Things do not just happen. It takes praying and planning and real effort to accomplish a worth-while purpose. We are thinking these weeks of the home as a Christian center of influence. We trust that many are asking in their hearts, "What can I do to make my home really Christian?"

The answer is clear. A home will be Christian when those in it are Christian and put their Christianity into daily practice. First, you must be sure of your own salvation and that of the members of your household. Then you can proceed to put the principles of godliness to work.

Our lesson presents the believing home as one that is well-balanced. There is both:

I. Work and Worship (Luke 10:38-42).

No home can be a place of comfort and pleasant fellowship without much work. A disorderly, dirty or run-down house is a disgrace and a discouragement to all that is finest in the relations of those who live in it.

Home need not be a mansion. It does not have to be richly furnished, but it does need to be clean and orderly. Meals must be made. Cleaning must be done. So far Martha was right, but she went too far. She let the labor of the household hinder her from what she so deeply needed — fellowship, not only with her family but with the Lord.

Now, notice that Mary had not shirked her duty to share the work. Observe the word "also" in verse 39. She had worked, but she also sat at Jesus' feet. She knew when it was time to call a halt to labor and make the most of good comradeship. Blessed wisdom! Would that many burdened housewives would learn of Mary!

Jesus made it clear that life in the home is to strike a proper balance between work and worship. If you do not know where to make the division in your home, err on the side of worship. Give that more time than it should have rather than less.

Alas, is it not true that in most homes, even in Christian homes, worship is almost, if not entirely, forgotten! Something should be done about that. Will you do it in your home?

II. Love and Longsuffering (I Cor. 13:4-7).

We are apt to think of love as the warm feeling of interest and emotion which suffuses one's nature in moments of special pleasantness or of intimate fellowship. But life is not made up of a succession of pleasant incidents, of sunny afternoons and moonlit evenings.

Life is real; it is earnest, and often it is drab and irritating. What about such times? Can love meet them? Yes, for love knows how to be longsuffering.

But someone may ask, Does love really work, or is this just a fine-sounding but obsolete theory? It works!

Think of the things in life which irritate and depress us. Then put opposite them the qualities of Christian love as given in verses 4 to 7, and you will agree that what this world needs most of all is love.

Remember that talking about love, or reading about it, or studying it in the Sunday school will not make it effective. We must put it into practice. Why not start now? You will be surprised at the results.

III. Promise and Perfection (vv. 8-13).

Christianity has a hope, and that is not just a vague wishing that something might come to pass; it is a sure hope. In Christ all the rich promise of prophecy, of faith, of hope will come to pass.

The Christian home is the place to teach boys and girls to believe with assurance that He who has begun a good work in us "will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ" (Phil. 1:6).

We who see only dimly shall one day see our Lord face to face, and love shall abide through all eternity.

Many gifts are only temporary in their usefulness; in fact, almost everything that man makes or does (apart from his service for God) is transient.

Even as vital a matter as prophecy shall one day find its end in fulfillment. Hope shall eventually find its longing expectation satisfied. Faith will be justified in seeing what it has believed. Childish things will be put away by the full-grown man; knowledge will increase and darkness disappear.

But love — love is eternal. It never fails, and will never fail. God is love, and God is eternal. From all eternity and unto all eternity love continues. Therefore, we agree with Paul who, in the verse preceding this chapter (I Cor. 12:31) says that while you may covet the best gift, here is the more excellent way

Studies Show Time Saving In Home Management

Time and motion studies by home management investigators in several states indicate that using both hands as a team makes many household jobs easier and speedier. Investigators in war industries have made similar conclusions. To change the working habits of hands takes practice, studies show, but pays in time and energy saved.

Recently home management specialists studied some of the common time-consuming household jobs. They went into 25 homes and observed the usual methods of doing these jobs, then tested ways of speeding the work, emphasizing the use of both hands.

One job investigated was washing spinach. Many a housewife has complained of the time it takes "to get the grit out of those curly leaves." Observation showed that the average housewife uses one pan in a single sink, and, with one hand, lifts the greens from the water to a colander, and back into the fresh washing water. Five of the women observed washed spinach leaf by leaf, which took 50 per cent extra time. Tests showed that the job could be done as well in less than half the time by using two pans or a double sink, filling them alternately with water, and using both hands to draw and drain off water and to lift the greens. Most women cut off the roots in the washing water or sink, but trimming directly into a garbage container before washing proved faster. The tests also showed that washing in lukewarm water takes less time than washing in cold water.

Specialist Lists Factors For Good Dairy Market

Aside from increased national income eight factors related to the increasing demand for milk and milk products have been listed by P. H. Tracy of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

In a summary of these significant points the Illinois dairy specialist enumerated them as follows:

1. The dietary habits of American people are changing and increasing emphasis is being placed on the use of fruits, vegetables and dairy products; 2. Dairy foods such as milk, cheese and ice cream, are convenient to use as they can be served without the additional labor required for preparing the foods they replace; 3. Although the rural population has been decreasing the urban population has been increasing; this means that the percentage of people dependent upon others for food has increased; 4. Dairy products are popular items for serving in restaurants, hotels and other eating places; 5. Improved merchandising methods are being employed each year (use of dairy stores or bars together with all mediums of advertising); 6. There is greater appreciation on the part of the public of the healthfulness and nutritional value of dairy products; 7. The public has greater confidence in the healthfulness of dairy products, which has been brought about by the general practice of pasteurization and the more extensive city and state supervision of dairy plant operations; 8. A general improvement of quality of dairy products has been taking place over a period of years.

Careful Buying Cuts Home Alteration Job

Buyers of ready-made clothing can save themselves a lot of later grief by giving careful attention to the kind of alterations needed and avoiding those that may be so difficult to fit as to go unworn. If a dress that fits throughout can't be found, it is usually best to buy one that fits the upper part of the body as the skirt is less difficult to alter. Here are some other suggestions: Remember that if seams are let out, the previous stitching line will show on some materials such as jersey. Many misfits cannot be remedied. A narrow sleeve cap or back cannot be satisfactorily enlarged unless there are unusually wide seam allowances because skimpy shoulder seams soon tear out. In altering rip no more than necessary. Clip the machine stitching between places to be changed. Remove stitching carefully. Press the edges of opened seams, being careful not to stretch them. Many ready-made dresses need to have the belt shortened and hem adjusted. To shorten a belt remove the extra length from the buckle end.

If the hem is uneven, first make sure that the waistline and hip line have been fitted properly before trying to mark the length. When marking the hem, wear the kind of shoes that will usually be worn with the dress. If the skirt is to be shortened, even off the turned-up part to about 1½ to 2 inches all around.

Fires Costly

Every day in the U. S. there are 1,800 fires, 28 deaths caused by fire in 1,000 homes, 130 stores, 100 factories, 7 churches, 7 schools and 3 hospitals.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Post-war automobiles may ride on rubber springs which will eliminate noise and the necessity for lubrication. B. F. Goodrich has supplied over half a million rubber springs for military landing vehicles.

B. F. Goodrich is now making tires of a new kind of synthetic rubber. The new rubber makes tires wear longer.

Since cotton is of almost equal importance with rubber in the manufacture of tires, the rubber industry is one of the biggest customers of the Agricultural South.

Ever Try Making Cough Syrup In Your Kitchen?

Quick Relief. No Cooking. Easy!

If you've never tried mixing your own cough medicine, you've missed a lot. It's no trouble—needs no cooking—and gives you about four times as much cough syrup for your money. You'll say it beats anything you ever tried for coughs due to colds. And here's how it's done:—

Make a plain syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until it is dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from your druggist. Put this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—a family supply. Tastes fine and never spoils. Children love it.

And as for results, you've never seen anything better. It goes right to work on the cough, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritation, and helping clear the air passages. You will like it for its results, and not merely for the money it saves.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I. Arthur had not been killed, but taken to a German hospital, badly disfigured and not wanting to live. He finally reached an agreement with Dr. Jacoby that if the doctor would see he was reported dead, he would permit Dr. Jacoby to try to make him sound in body. Dr. Jacoby talked Arthur into a study of the German language. He was determined that his patient should find some interest in life. Arthur not only had lost interest in living but believed that living in his useless wrecked body would be impossible.

CHAPTER XIII

He was not yet able to push his thoughts forward into what he might be going to do with the future Jacoby was forcing upon him. This occupation was enough for the present. He filled up his mind with German words to keep it from being filled up with thoughts of Elizabeth. When Jacoby came to see him he talked in simple sentences, proudly, and felt a childish delight when Jacoby and the nurses began to understand him.

Long afterwards, when they were looking back on those days, Jacoby said to him, "You did not know how you were encouraging me then." Arthur answered, "Maybe you never knew how often I nearly gave up." "Yes I did know," said Jacoby, "but you did not give up. That is what I mean, Kitt."

To the very end, Jacoby sometimes called him Kitt. If anyone asked why, he said, "Oh no, Herr Kessler's first name is Erich. Calling him Kitt is an old habit of mine, from years back."

They were both so used to it they generally forgot it was an abbreviation of his old name. The new name was provided by Jacoby after Arthur had been moved to the hospital in Berlin, while he was convalescing from another of the surgical operations Jacoby inflicted upon him. He had been very ill and Jacoby had given him a blood transfusion. When he was better and tried to express his thanks Jacoby retorted, "My blood isn't good enough for gratitude, Kitt—made of nothing but turnips and a carrot or two. But I have something else for you, more important." He produced a document, offering it with an air of triumph. "Here is your birth certificate.

"Listen carefully, Kitt. From now on your name is Erich Kessler. I have lost sleep over wondering how you could identify yourself, until one morning about three o'clock I found the solution. When I was a child, my parents knew a couple named Kessler. They had a son named Erich. While the boy was still a baby, the Kesslers went to the United States. They lived in a town called—" he consulted his notes, and pronounced incorrectly — "Milwaukee. You have heard of it?"

Arthur nodded. "Yes. I grew up in a town called Chicago. They are very near each other."

"You have been to Milwaukee?"

"Frequently."

"That is good. While he was still a small child, Erich Kessler died. I know that, because his mother and mine used to correspond. But there is no official record of that in this country, because the Kesslers stayed in the United States and were naturalized. For all I know they may be there to this day."

"Making beer, perhaps?"

"Why? Do you know them?"

"Never heard of them. But I know Milwaukee. Go on, Jacoby."

"I have obtained Erich Kessler's birth certificate. I have recorded that Erich—you—naturalized without his knowledge or consent when his parents were naturalized, was drafted into the American army. The rest follows. You have returned to the land of your birth, and can stay here now until you want to leave."

"I shall not want to leave, Jacoby."

"I hope not. But anyway, this makes you a German and at the same time takes care of your American accent. However, please listen to me and try to speak like me. Erich Kessler would have heard his parents speak German at home and would pronounce it better than you do."

"I'll do my best. Correct me whenever you please."

Almost automatically, Jacoby was massaging the muscles of his patient's right arm. "These are flabby," he observed. "While you are lying in bed, for a few minutes at a time, clench your fist slowly and relax it slowly. Slowly, remember? That won't tax your strength, and you must take care of this arm. You will need it."

"I hope there will be a crutch," Jacoby answered quietly. "Remember, I've promised nothing about your legs except to do the best I can with them."

"All right, all right, I know. A man isn't hoping for too much in this world when he hopes for a crutch, is he?"

Jacoby addressed him sternly. "My friend, until you can face what you're up against now, you aren't fit to try to go further."

There was a long silence. At last the patient said, "I get it, Jacoby. And—ah—thank you."

Jacoby stood up. "Thank you, for not being angry with me."

"Oh, shut up, will you?" He felt like changing the subject. "By the way, Jacoby, this Erich Kessler—me—am I a Jew like you?"

"No, why? Were you a Jew at home?"

"No, what's why I asked. I thought if I was to be one here you'd better teach me something about the religious rituals. But if I'm not, then it's not important."

Startling to remember now that there had been a time when one could say "It's not important," so carelessly, and then forget about it. There was nobody then to tell him that Erich Kessler's not being a Jew was going to be so important later on that it would enable him to save Jacoby's child.

"Jacoby, I don't know a thing about medicine or surgery, but if there's one thing I do know it's chemistry. Do you think I could learn to do some of these routine analyses that take up so much of your time? Blood-counts, and things like that?"

Kessler felt a tingle of returning vigor. This would not be much, but it would be something toward repaying Jacoby. The prospect of making any kind of return was an immeasurable impetus.

He hurried off and came back with an armful of books.

He went to work. He worked as hard as Jacoby would let him. Within a couple of weeks he was surprised to find his study interesting for its own sake. "I always thought I was burning up with curiosity about the universe," he said to Jacoby, "but I'm ashamed to find how I neglected my own species. You don't know how glad I am you're letting me do this."

Jacoby shrugged. "Where did you get the impression I was 'letting' you do it? I need you. One of these days, when the country is normal again, maybe I'll be able to get enough technicians. But now—!"

Though at first Kessler undertook only the simplest routines in the laboratory, they absorbed all his energy. He was still far from strong. The work was new, his reports had to be made in a language he still found unwieldy, and learning to make one hand serve the purpose of two required a thousand adjustments. But it meant that he was back in the sphere of active men, doing something that needed to be done, and occupation relieved him of leisure for brooding.

"There's the car," said Elizabeth. "Remember, both of you, not to take any notice of his misfortunes."

"I know, dear, but sometimes the best of us give a little start when we see persons very different from ourselves. We don't mean to."

Cherry and Dick promised to be models of good behavior. Elizabeth got up and went to the door opening from the living room into the entry. She hoped Mr. Kessler would have a comfortable evening. Entertaining Spratt's business associates was a duty they were all used to, and the older children adapted themselves to it well enough. Brian begged to be let off when there were strangers in to dine, so as usual he had had his dinner early and was now upstairs in his room pottering over his natural history collections. Spratt opened the front door, saying,

"Here we are, Kessler. And here's my wife. Elizabeth, my friend Erich Kessler that you've already heard so much about."

Elizabeth looked up with the smile that Spratt characterized as the masterpiece of the accomplished hostess, "not bright enough to look insincere, but not strained enough to look dutiful. Just in between, gracious."

Mr. Kessler's physical handicaps had threatened to make this occasion difficult, but Elizabeth's initial glance dispelled her apprehension. He was badly crippled, but he did not appear resentful; he faced the world before him with a grave acceptance, as though all the fault he had to find with destiny had been got over long ago. As their eyes met Elizabeth was struck with an impression that she had seen Mr. Kessler somewhere before.

It also seemed to her that Mr. Kessler was looking at her with an unusual interest. His eyes went over her swiftly and inclusively, taking in her hair, her face, her dress, every detail of her as though it were important that he should know all about her as soon as possible. It was the way a man might have looked at a famous personage he had long been eager to meet, or a woman so astoundingly beautiful that he wanted to impress her forever upon his memory. Elizabeth was not famous, and while she was not ugly she was no ravishing beauty either. She thought it might mean that they really had seen each other somewhere, and he like herself was trying to identify the recollection. If her own sense of familiarity persisted she could ask him about it later on.

All this was only a quick flutter in her mind, pushed aside in an instant while her attention turned itself to its immediate concerns. She took in his appearance quickly: a big man of more powerful build than she had expected, bent over a heavy cane with a dependence that told her instantly that she should not expect him to shake hands; iron-gray hair receding at the temples, a thick beard, a scar that rippled up his right cheek, dark eyes with a line of concentration between the eyebrows and crinkles of kindness at the outer corners, and a pleasant smile—what she could see of it between the whiskers—a very pleasant smile indeed. If he had any idea that this was not their first meeting he gave no evidence of it, for all he said to her was, "How do you do, Mrs. Herlong," with the stateliness she had learned to expect from Europeans. Elizabeth indicated the room beyond.

"Come in by the fire, Mr. Kessler. These are my children."

Dick was standing, with that mixture of assurance and awkwardness that made her find boys in their teens so eminently kissable just when they most resisted being kissed by their mothers. Cherry, with fewer years but more social graces than Dick would acquire for another decade, sat smiling a welcome to the newcomer. Elizabeth introduced them, and again it seemed to her that Kessler was regarding them with an attention extraordinary in a man who could hardly be supposed to have any interest in them. There was an alertness in the way he spoke to Dick and Cherry, as though he had decided in advance that he was going to be fond of them and hoped they would respond. He said, "Your father has told me a great deal about you, and has shown me your pictures. I am so glad to see you."

Dick, who had already said "How do you do," tried to look pleasant without knowing what else to say, while Cherry, a shade too adept at social fibs, answered, "He has told us lots about you too, Mr. Kessler," with such a bright smile that Elizabeth privately reminded herself, "I've got to warn Cherry about that sort of thing, if she isn't careful she's going to be an intolerable gusher before she's twenty." Kessler appeared to be finding them the most attractive youngsters on earth. While she was offering him the chair she had intended for him, arranged with a little table at its side so he could set down his glass when the hors d'oeuvres appeared, she added to herself, "Spratt must have led him to expect a most remarkable pair of children, he really shouldn't—or is Mr. Kessler as charming as this with everybody?" Spratt, evidently pleased at the good impression his offspring were making, crossed the room to the door leading upstairs, explaining that Kessler had had time to wash up in his bungalow before leaving the lot, but he himself had not, and if they'd forgive him he'd go up and make himself presentable. "I'll leave you with the family, Kessler," he concluded.

Kessler gave him a smile and a slight formal bow. Elizabeth returned to the fire. "Now we'll have a cocktail. Dick, will you bartend?"

Dick would; he was always glad of this to occupy him during his first minutes of encounter with a stranger. Everything became quite as usual. Dick mixed the Martinis, and as the war had reduced the number of their servants Cherry brought in the hors d'oeuvres. "These are liver-paste, Mr. Kessler, and these are smoked salmon, and these thingumbobs on toothpicks—I don't know what they are, something she made out of an old lampshade." But as Elizabeth and Kessler picked up their glasses and their eyes met across them, she felt another twinge of familiarity. "I have met this man before, I know I have, and he knows it too. Or doesn't he? If he doesn't, why is he looking at me like that? Maybe it's just because I keep looking at him—for pity's sake, I do believe I'm staring. Behave yourself, Elizabeth." She was relieved to hear Cherry talking.

Women Face Tough Fight in U. S. Politics

Those women who succeed in American politics do so, with certain significant exceptions, by playing the game according to the men's rules, declares Coronet magazine. For American politics is still a man's game.

When suffragettes chained themselves to the White House fence to the dismay and annoyance of William Howard Taft and Woodrow Wilson, their battle cry was for women's rights. They proposed to "take politics out of the saloon," to bring "a woman's touch" to the legislative halls, and to end the making of laws in an atmosphere permeated by the fumes of Pittsburgh stogies. Yet today only nine women sit in congress—about 1½ per cent of congressional membership—and on a census basis there should be more than 20 women members.

By and large, the influence in congress of the "gentlewomen" is much greater than would be expected from their numbers. Their biggest fight is to get a nomination from the local organization, for few women are trying to move up the ladder from precinct, to ward, to city, to legislature, and finally, to congress. It has been said that a woman needs much more ability and energy than a man to break into congress.

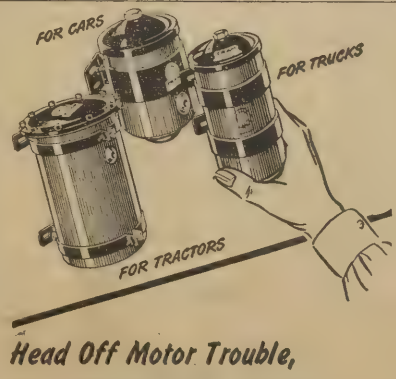
Iron Across Length

When ironing, press with the length rather than across the width of fabric wherever possible. But if a skirt, slip or nightgown is cut on the bias, then iron a slant, along the grain or straight of the material. This will prevent the stretching and sagging which makes hems uneven.

LIGHTER MOMENTS with fresh Eveready Batteries

"Hey, I said send up some quinine, not K-9!"

UNTIL RECENTLY, our entire production of "Eveready" "Mini-Max" batteries went to the Armed Forces for use in walkie-talkies, handy-talkies, and other vital communications equipment.



Now—although military needs continue to come first—substantial numbers of these extra-powerful "B" batteries are available for civilian use.

Remember: their exclusive construction makes "Mini-Max" batteries size for size the most powerful batteries ever built. In your radio, they deliver longer life—longer listening!

ONE DEAD; SEVERAL INJURED IN WEEK END CAR WRECKS

Last Sunday morning about 6:00 o'clock a car ran off the road near the bridge at Verbena, and almost plunged into the creek several feet below. It was occupied by C. B. Calloway and S. Clyde Calloway, formerly of Beat 14 in Elmore County, but now residents of Montgomery. Both ambulances here answered the call and brought the injured men to Central Alabama Hospital; later C. B. Calloway was carried to Veterans Hospital in Montgomery, and Clyde, a service man, was carried to Maxwell Field Hospital. C. B. suffered head injuries and had some broken ribs; Clyde's right leg and back where injured.

Sunday afternoon at 3:30, four miles south of Calera, even with the lumber camp, a car from Jemison driven by Ed Leech and a Birmingham car collided injuring seven people: T. A Leggett of Mobile, his sister, Mrs. Ida Leggett, and brother-in-law, L. H. Hagwood, all of Birmingham, were carried to Birmingham hospitals by Martin's ambulance. Mrs. Leggett died Monday morning. Mr. Leech, wife and child were carried to Selma hospital in Spigener's ambulance.

County Receives Banner For 7th War Bond Work

A group of Chilton County War Bond workers attended a meeting in Selma on Thursday the 18th of October, and there they were presented with a beautiful banner for outstanding work done by Chilton County in the Seventh War Bond Drive.

This banner has been presented after each War Bond Drive to the County exceeding its quota by the greatest percentage in its district. Chilton County not only won the banner for having exceeded its quota by the greatest percentage but they were especially commended for having been the first County east of the Mississippi to make its quota in the Seventh Drive.

This banner will be on display in different localities throughout the County during the Eighth War Bond Drive which starts October 29th. The first display point will be Jemison and this is in recognition of Jemison having been the first beat in any County in the United States to have met its quota in the Seventh War Bond Drive.

After the banner has been displayed in different sections of the County it will be returned to Clanton where it will be on permanent display in a suitable location. Chilton County has every right to be proud of its accomplishment. And now we must realize that success also has its reponsibilities. Many counties all over the nation will be out to beat our good record and we already have notice that one Alabama County is determined to come out ahead of Chilton in the Eighth Drive.

We must accept this challenge and go after this Eighth and last drive with the same determination that carried us through to success in former drives. Alabama now is the only State in the nation in which every County has met every quota every time. This record must stand unbroken. Our boys have won the last battle, let's us win the last Bond Drive.

Jarman Talk Before A.A.U.W. Cancelled

On October 18, the American Association of University Women of Chilton County received a communication from the Hon. Pete Jarman in which he expressed deep regret that he would be unable to be with us this week. It read in part: "Different from many public men, who accept every invitation the get without any knowledge of whether they can be present and later decline most of them, I am always eager to fill every engagement, particularly one that has been advertised. Toward that end I never accept an invitation until reasonably certain that I can be present, barring some such situation beyond my control. In fact, under present conditions this policy prompts me to be rather reluctant to accept invitations."

The AAUW regret, too, that he will not be able to be here, however, the A.A.U.W. will hold its meeting in the home economics building at the high school Thursday afternoon at 4:30.

HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A. HALLOWE'EN PARTY

There is to be given at the Chilton County High School a Hallowe'en Party, sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association on the evening of October 31, at seven o'clock. The public is cordially invited to attend this party. The first part of the program will be presented in the gymnasium and to this there will be a small admission. There will be other features characteristic of this particular season.

Miss Elizabeth Barton has been asked to serve as chairman of the committee to play this party.—Mrs J. E. Gowan, President.

Civil Jury Circuit Court will be held the week of December 10th.

MUSTARD AND TURNIPS ARE EXCELLENT FOODS

The eating of the mustard and turnip greens and collards now growing in fall gardens can do much to help the family build up a vitamin A supply for winter health, says Marie Amos, extension nutritionist.

"A serving of either of these greens supplies sufficient carotene, which is changed into Vitamin A by the body, store this vitamin in the liver and kidasserts. "Fortunately the body can tore this vitamin in the liver and kidneys and release it into the blood to be carried to the tissues. Since the thinner and greener leaves are richest in Vitamin A and iron, let us use these greens when young and freshly gathered."

The cooking technique recommended for saving the food values is—cook as quickly as possible, using little water and cook only until tender. If more greens are available than can be eaten immediately, they may be canned for use during months when green vegetables are scarce. The pressure cooker must be used for canning greens since they are non-acid.

State To Light Victory Torches For War Loan

Ceremonies Will Mark Opening Of Bond Drive October 29

The lighting of Victory Torches in Alabama towns and communities will mark the opening of the Victory War Loan Oct. 29.

These torches will burn, day and night, until each town and community and rural beat has finished its part of the victory loan job.

This was emphasized today by State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan of Brewton as he called upon town and county organizations to participate in the ceremonies.

"I know of no finer way in which we can start our Victory Loan effort than by lighting a Victory Torch, the symbol of the Victory Loan," Mr. McMillan said.

"This torch should burn brightly, day and night, until each community has finished its part of the job and then it can be triumphantly extinguished in real Victory ceremonies.

"Members of the state committee have met with war bond workers throughout the state during the past two weeks and I am proud to say for them that Alabama goes into the Victory Loan with one of the finest and most enthusiastic organizations of all the war loans.

"Every group of our people, those in the plants and mills, those on the farms, those in the schools and those at home, are all anxious and willing to do their part 'to finish the job.'

"I know that Alabama will keep bright its great record of every county going over the top in every war loan. Our state is the only state in the nation that has that record. It will be up to each of us, sellers and buyers alike to be sure that when the Victory Loan is finished that we can still say that Alabama is the only state in the nation in which every county went over the top in every war loan.

"I do not believe that there will be one home that will want to be without a Victory Bond."

ISABELLA P.-T. A. SPONSORING HALLOWE'EN PARTY

SOYBEAN MEAL DAMAGES HATCHBILITY OF EGGS

Soybean meal has proved as a protein in poultry food. But poultry specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture caution against too heavy feeding of soybean meal to laying pullets and hens in breeding flocks. As far as egg laying, size of eggs, or body weight are concerned heavy feeding of soybean meal seems to have no bad effect. But the Department men say more than ten per cent of soybean meal in the diet of breeding flocks does lower the hatchability of the eggs.

Agricultural war bond week will be held the week of November 26. Some counties, of course, may finish before that. . all should be through by the end of that week, says P. O. Davis, state agricultural chairman.

1946 FORD TO BE SHOWN AT CLANTON MOTORS FRIDAY

What your post-war automobile will look like will be a secret no more after Friday of this week when Clanton Motors, Inc., brings the first 1946 automobile for display at their show rooms. Much discussion has taken place in the past several months as to what we could expect in our New Ford automobiles, but here is your chance to see for yourself what it is like.

"We've never been personally more enthusiastic about a new Ford model." J. C. Burnett stated today. "Without doubt it is the smartest Ford car ever built, and as far as performance is concerned, please take special note when you visit our show rooms Friday of this week, that the 1946 Ford, the first post-war model, contains many engineering advancements and mechanical improvements than were included in any previous year-to-year model," he continued.

Each and every resident of the County has a special invitation to attend the showing of this new and better Ford automobile at Clanton Motors, Inc., Friday, October 26th.

Outstanding features of the car are: A more powerful engine, better performance, longer life, improved economy and a better ride.

Lid On Auto Repairs

Definite limits on the amount of time which may be charged for the 56 most common automotive repair jobs now bring these operations under actual dollars and cents ceiling prices, Irby A. Jones, OPA District Director in Montgomery announced this week.

Mr. Jones pointed out that the charges for these operations must not exceed the amount obtained from multiplying the authorized hourly rate by the time limit specified in the regulation for such an operation.

According to Mr. Jones the regulation also requires that repair shops give the customer an invoice. This makes possible for the first time a means by which the customer may determine the correctness of charges for automotive repair work, he added.

Building Program Spells Farmer's Safety

Farmers will benefit directly from OPA's all-inclusive program to establish rigid dollars and cents ceilings on the prices of building materials and constructive services, Irby A. Jones, OPA District Director in Montgomery said this week.

Under OPA's new plan, now being worked out in detail, for maintaining reasonable prices on building materials, and for setting ceiling prices on the charges made for construction services, hundreds of farmers can now make the repairs they postponed during the war, Mr. Jones explained.

With these OPA controls in effect, which Jones estimates will save thousands of dollars yearly for farmers, he predicted an unprecedented boom in farm construction within the next few years, especially since farm savings are now at the highest peak in history.

Sugar Must Last

Chilton County housewives are cautioned to go easy on the baking of those Hallowe'en pies, since their current sugar stamps must also last through Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year holidays, the chairman of the War Price Control Board said this week.

The present sugar stamp number 38 must be made to last until January 1, he explained, and stretched to supply a period of traditional holiday baking.

In regard to the recently reported 1,600,000 tons of sugar in Java, it was stated there is no definite information on what quantity may be delivered to the United States or when it might arrive.

BLACKLEG CAUSING HEAVY LIVESTOCK LOSS

Considerable losses of cattle due to blackleg disease have been reported on many Alabama farms, announce state livestock producers.

"Blackleg is one of the most infectious diseases of cattle and takes its toll in animals between 6 and 18 months of age," they say. "It is fatal in most cases and the only control is in vaccination and sanitation practices on the farm."

According to BAI veterinarians the symptoms are (1) loss of appetite and high fever, (2) rapid breathing, (3) rapid development of swellings or tumors in the tissue under the skin, and (4) death usually occurs 12 to 36 hours after appearance of the disease. These swellings, small at first, are painful to touch and increase in size rapidly until they cover a considerable part of the body. When pressed these swellings make a peculiar crackling sound. After death the body becomes distended very rapidly due to formation of gas under the skin. This disease is most prevalent in animals between 6 months and two years of age.

There is no effective known treatment for blackleg after the animal is infected, but very effective prevention is obtained by vaccinating animals under two years of age with Blackleg Bacterin. Proper disposal of dead carcass aids greatly in immediate control. Dead animals should be burned without being moved. If animals must be moved, the place where it has lain should be carefully disinfected.

Good lighting in every room—meaning light adequate for the activity going on—cannot be too strongly recommended. To avoid a shock and fire hazards, your electrical equipment must be kept in repair — no frayed cords, broken plugs, and faulty appliances.

Whenever you use the bedroom as a sewing room, put away scissors, pins and needles where the children cannot get them.

Most Thrilling Exploit of War Wins High Honor

Lone Yank Officer Repulses Tank Attack Led by 250 Germans.

WASHINGTON.—A young officer who manned a machine gun atop a blazing abandoned tank destroyer and beat back a tank led assault by 250 Germans has been awarded the nation's top decoration.

He is First Lt. Audie L. Murphy, 21, of Farmersville, Texas, who won the Congressional Medal of Honor near Holtzwihr, France, last January 26. He was still a second lieutenant and new to the command of his company in the third infantry division, says the Chicago Tribune.

The citation accompanying the medal, which was to be given to Murphy in Europe, credited him with killing or wounding 50 of the Germans with machine gun fire and with directing artillery fire earlier in the fighting which killed "many" more. Some of Murphy's buddies estimated that he accounted for 100 Nazis in the hour-long battle.

Swept From Woods.

Murphy was in front of his company when the two German infantry companies, paced by six heavy tanks, swept from a woods. He ordered his men to fall back to prepared positions while he stayed at his advance post to call for artillery fire to smash the Germans in the open. He was alone except for a tree and the tank destroyer about 10 yards to his right.

First Lt. Walter W. Weispfennig, an artillery officer of Fredonia, N. D., who witnessed the action, said later the artillery fire that Murphy directed "had a deadly effect."

"I saw Germans disappearing in clouds of dirt and snow," he related.

Then a German 88 mm. shell crashed into the tank destroyer and its crew bailed out, falling back to join the remainder of the company. Smoke and flames spurted from the destroyer. The German tank crews swung wide around it, fearing that its gasoline and ammunition would blow up.

With the German infantry only 100 yards away, Murphy dashed over to the destroyer, climbed into the turret, and began blasting the Nazis with its .50 caliber machine gun. Weispfennig called it the "bravest thing I've ever seen a man do in combat," adding:

Exposed to Foe's Fire.

"He was completely exposed to the enemy fire and there was a blaze under him that threatened to blow the destroyer to bits. Machine gun, machine pistol, and 88 shellfire was all around him.

"Twice the tank destroyer was hit by direct shellfire and Lieutenant Murphy was engulfed in smoke and flame. His clothing was riddled by flying fragments of shells and bits of rocks. I saw that his trouser leg was soaked with blood."

Twelve Germans tried to sneak up along a ditch and flank him but he swung the machine gun and killed all of them at a 50-yard range. The Nazi infantry was stalled. Without the infantry the enemy tanks couldn't advance and the whole attack collapsed.

Murphy dropped wearily off the destroyer, all his ammunition gone, and limped back to his company. Refusing treatment, he reorganized his company and led it in an attack that routed the Germans.

Murphy, a native of Farmersville, joined the army on his 18th birthday and fought throughout the African, Sicilian, Italian and French campaigns. He has been wounded three times and wears the Purple Heart with two clusters.

United States U-Boats Sank 1,256 Jap Ships

WASHINGTON. — U. S. submarines operating in far Eastern waters in the last three months of the war sank 69 enemy vessels, the navy announced recently, bringing to 1,256 the number of Japanese ships sunk by American underseas craft in the war.

None of the sinkings in the last three months had been announced previously. The figures were compiled from reports of submarines after their return from Pacific action.

The latest bag included 20 Japanese warships and 49 noncombatant ships.

The warships sunk were two Japanese submarines, one mine-layer, two minesweepers, two large subchasers, eight special sub-chasers, four coastal defense frigates, and one torpedo boat.

'Jobs for All' Goal Seen In 150 Billion Income

WASHINGTON.— Treasury Secretary Vinson told congress that a national income of 150 billion dollars will be needed to provide jobs for all who are willing and able to work.

To assure employment for 60 million people, purchasing power must be increased enough to boost consumption 50 per cent and to expand construction and investment by 100 per cent over prewar levels, Vinson said in a statement for the senate banking committee.

Vinson endorsed the so-called "full employment" bill, which the committee is considering, but cautioned that "ultimate reliance for jobs must come from an expansion of private consumption and investments."

Arthur, badly disfigured and not wanting to live, was in a German hospital. Dr. Jacoby, who was treating him, finally secured a promise from Arthur that he would try to live, providing the doctor reported that he was dead. Arthur did not want Elizabeth to know of his condition. When he arrived in America he secured a job with Spratt, and was invited out to his home. He knew who Elizabeth was, but believed the change in him was sufficient so that she would not recognize him.

CHAPTER XIV

"Have you ever been to the United States before, Mr. Kessler?"

He turned to her at once, and Elizabeth thought, "He's as relieved as I am to have that look between us broken, or if he's not, then I'm letting my imagination go haywire." He was answering Cherry,

"Yes, Miss Herlong, but that was many years ago, long before this country was brightened by your existence."

"Say, that's very good!" Dick exclaimed with a grin.

Elizabeth flashed him a teasing glance. "You will, Oscar." They all laughed, and Dick said to Kessler,

"You speak awfully well for a man who's just been here once, and that so long ago."

"It has been three years since I left Germany. Besides, I have visited England and Scotland. We have more chance to practice foreign languages in Europe than you have here."

"Oh yes, of course you do," said Cherry. "We don't have any. We take French, and learn to say 'Have you seen the garden of my grandmother's cousin?' and then school is out for the summer and we forget it. At least, I always did."

"Haven't you three children, Mrs. Herlong?"

"Why yes," said Elizabeth, "but Brian is only eleven, so he had his dinner early." But she could not help asking, "How did you know there were three?"

"Mr. Herlong told me, and showed me a picture of you all. Brian isn't asleep yet, is he?"

"I'm sure he isn't. Do you want to meet him too?"

"I should like to very much, if it's quite convenient."

Elizabeth laughed a little. "Mr. Kessler, you should know it's never inconvenient for a mother to display her jewels. Dick, will you run up and get Brian?"

"Sure, but you'd better warn Mr. Kessler that he'll be all smeared with glue and bugs. Brian's mounting butterflies, does it all day and night, and he'll talk your ear off about them if you let him."

"I should like that. Tell him to bring his specimens down and show them to me."

"There are thousands," Cherry warned, but Kessler showed no dismay. He only said,

"Then tell him to bring a few, and don't make him brush his hair, or he'll disappear before he sees me." He and Dick exchanged a look of understanding. As Dick went out Kessler turned to Elizabeth. "I hope I'm not upsetting a domestic arrangement, Mrs. Herlong, in asking that he come in. But your two older children are so entertaining that I couldn't help wanting to see the other."

"Aren't you nice!" exclaimed Cherry.

"Thank you for saying so," answered Elizabeth. "Of course, their father and I think they are, but we love having other people agree with us."

"I'm sure other people do. You should be very proud, Mrs. Herlong." He glanced around him. "When one sees a home like this, one knows who is responsible for it. I don't mean the physical furnishings of your house, attractive as they are—I mean its atmosphere. It's not by chance one achieves such confidence and vitality."

His words made her feel better than she had felt all day. Now that the two of them seemed to be back on a normal basis from which a friendship could be started, it occurred to Elizabeth that perhaps Kessler, fresh from Nazi Germany but evidently not part of it, could tell Dick more clearly than she ever could something about the issues at stake in this war he was going to be asked to fight. Much as she loved Dick she could not disguise from herself the fact that he was more superficial than she would have liked him to be, so occupied with girls and football that he was glad to accept cliches that relieved him from being occupied with more troublesome matters. Dick was a nice boy, but mentally he was a rather lazy one, and neither she nor his father was quite capable of coping with him. Spratt was inclined to believe he would begin to take life seriously when the time came; Elizabeth thought the time had come for it. Sometimes it happened that a friend was better at this than the parents who had spent so many years being more indulgent than they should have been, or who at least had emphasized details of socially acceptable behavior at the expense of the much harder job of making a boy think for himself.

Her thoughts were interrupted by the opening of the door from the hall. Spratt and Dick came in with Brian, who had a glass-topped box of specimens under his arm. "This is Mr. Kessler, Brian," Spratt said. "He wanted to meet you so he could know the whole Herlong family."

"How do you do sir," said Brian, all in one word, and held out his hand. Fortunately Kessler was sitting down instead of leaning on his cane, and so could give him a handshake. Brian stood uncertainly, one foot curled around the opposite ankle.

"Your brother tells me you are interested in natural history," said Kessler, "and I asked him to tell you I should like to see some of your specimens. Is that what's in the case?"

Brian nodded. "Butterflies. Want to see them?"

"Look out," warned Dick, and Cherry said simultaneously, "You don't know what you're getting into, Mr. Kessler." Paying no attention to them, their guest already had his head close to Brian's as they bent over the butterflies together. Dick poured a cocktail for his father, and saying, "You'll need another one too, Mr. Kessler, if you let him get started," he refilled Kessler's glass. Kessler appeared to be deeply interested in Brian's butterflies. Brian was chattering.

". . . that blue one is easy to get, they're everywhere except where it's too cold for them. The name is Lamp—Lampides something, I forget, but I've got it written in my notebook. This is a monarch butterfly, they fly north in the summertime like birds. The copper and black one, you've seen thousands like it, it's a viceroy."

Spratt sat down by Elizabeth. "Good fellow, isn't he?" he said under cover of the other dialogue.

"Yes indeed. But we mustn't let Brian wear him out."

"I think he likes it," said Spratt. "One of these men who's interested in everything."

Elizabeth glanced at Kessler, almost ready to believe that her impression of self-consciousness on his part had been mistaken. Certainly their exchange of remarks before Brian's entrance had not suggested it. When the maid came in to announce dinner neither Kessler nor Brian heard her. They were deep in conversation, Brian sitting on the floor with his case in his hands, this time listening instead of talking.

". . . one of the ugliest objects in the world, but strangely fascinating," Kessler was saying to him. "It looks like a man with his hands spread out, but they are tremendous hands, many times larger than his body. The first time you look at one you feel a cold shiver run down your spine,"

"What on earth are you talking about?" Spratt demanded.

Brian started and turned his head. "The skeleton of a bat. Mr. Kessler says if we can get hold of a bat he'll help me mount the skeleton."

"If your mother doesn't mind," Kessler amended.

"Of course I don't mind," said Elizabeth. "But Brian, Mr. Kessler is a very busy man, and you mustn't use up too much of his time."

"Mother, Mr. Kessler says I can come over to his house and we can take the bat apart there, and Peter can come too. He's got time for it, haven't you, Mr. Kessler?"

"I shouldn't have offered if I hadn't. Will you let him come, Mrs. Herlong?"

"Certainly, and it's very good of you. Brian, we're going in to dinner. Won't you move so Mr. Kessler can get up from his chair?"

Brian scrambled to his feet. "Mother, couldn't I come to the table?"

Recalling Brian's usual eagerness to avoid company dinners, Elizabeth was astonished. Kessler had won him, evidently, as he had won the others. She let him come in, pausing to remind him in an undertone that he mustn't monopolize Mr. Kessler's attention. Brian nodded solemnly. As Kessler stood up, Brian watched the procedure with undisguised interest, for hitherto he had only seen him sitting down and had not been warned of all his new friend's handicaps. Elizabeth felt a moment's embarrassment, until she reminded herself that Kessler must have had to bear many stares from children and would understand that Brian did not know he was being rude. She was not sure she had been right in permitting Brian to bring a chair to the dinner table. Though she had planned the menu with special reference to his disability, Kessler might nevertheless be awkward about eating with one hand.

That was all they said to each other. Spratt got up and suggested that he and Kessler go into the study and talk over their story problem. The children said good night with a cordiality very warm compared to their usual routine of politeness toward adult guests, and Brian went upstairs. A few moments later Pudge and Julia came to call for the two older ones. "Get through dinner all right?" Pudge asked with a sympathetic grin.

"Pudge," said Cherry, as though conveying momentous news, "he was nice."

Pudge scowled incredulously. "A refugee?"

"Sure," said Dick, "but he's okay."

Elizabeth went upstairs to say good night to Brian. He was enthusiastic about Kessler and the promise of help in mounting the skeleton of a bat. "You know what he told me about bats, mother? He said if we had ears as good as theirs we could hear a fly walking up the wall. He said a bat was one of the most mysterious creatures on earth, we just didn't understand them a bit. That guy sure does know a lot."

The initial sense of familiarity returned to tease her. But whether or not she already knew him, Kessler was a fine fellow, she reflected, and she was glad Brian liked him.

Brian turned over in bed. "Mother, I just thought of something. Peter's a Jew."

"So what?" asked Elizabeth.

"Mr. Kessler's a German, and you know how they are about Jews. He said I could bring Peter, but I didn't tell him—"

"If Mr. Kessler had approved of that sort of thing he'd have stayed in Germany, Brian."

"Maybe Mr. Kessler's a Jew," Brian suggested hopefully. "Is he?"

"I don't know, but you needn't worry about it. He's not stupid enough for that foolishness."

"I guess not," Brian said, relieved. "I sure do like him."

"So do I." She reflected that Kessler's enjoyment of a happy domestic scene might mean he was lonely in a strange country. "Brian," she suggested, "since we like Mr. Kessler so much, let's prove it by doing something for him. Let's ask his little girl to bring some of her friends over to go swimming."

"Oh, rats," said Brian. One thing he could not understand about his big brother was Dick's liking for girls.

"Brian, suppose we had to pack up all of a sudden and go live in Germany. Wouldn't you be glad if other children made friends with you instead of making you play all by yourself?"

"Well—do we have to?"

"Not at all, and Mr. Kessler doesn't have to help you with the bat, either. Come on, Brian, be a sport. We'll have a good party with lots to eat, sherbet and one of those big cakes from Delhaven's, and all you'll have to do is be polite. You can ask Peter over and she can bring her own friends."

Brian sighed. "It'll be awful," he objected.

"All right, let's put it this way. If you go over to Mr. Kessler's and he helps you put a bat's skeleton together, you can play with his little girl one afternoon by way of saying thank you. If you don't go over there, you needn't do it."

Brian mournfully considered the alternative. It was a struggle, but at last, after she had tried again to tell him the value of give-and-take in the world, he yielded. As she closed the door Elizabeth drew a long sigh of her own. "I don't wonder so many parents let their children grow up to be monsters of selfishness," she thought. "It's so much easier. But then they grow up to grab, grab, grab, until they turn out to be fascists grabbing for the whole world."

She went into her own room. Glancing at the radio, she wondered what fresh disasters she would hear about if she turned it on, and did not turn it on. She sat down at her desk and got ready to write some letters.

"Maybe my children are pretty self-centered anyway," she was thinking. "Oh, for pity's sake, why should I be discontented with them? They're not malicious, disobedient, untruthful — they're simply hard, and it's the age they live in."

Will Be Rewarded For Her Kindness

To Get Estate of Soldier She Befriended.

TUCSON, ARIZ.—A query from a Wisconsin newspaper brought to Mrs. Scott Marie Dyer the first word that a veteran of World War I she befriended 22 years ago at Chicago intended to remember her in his will.

Word was brought to Mrs. Dyer by reporters as she sat outside her small home about eight miles from Tucson. The soldier, Capt. Victor S. Byrne, started the search by a message to the Wisconsin police asking assistance in locating the Dyer family.

Chief of Police Harry Mueller of Fort Atkinson, Wis., said he had received a telegram from Captain Byrne of Los Angeles asking the whereabouts of Mrs. Dyer, a former resident of Fort Atkinson. The telegram said:

"I am very ill and may not live many months. I wish to leave Marie Dyer my entire estate for her kindness toward me when I was a poor discharged soldier in Chicago. Now, I am a very wealthy man."

Mueller said that he had wired the information to Byrne and had received a reply thanking him and saying that the sender of the message planned to communicate with Mrs. Dyer soon.

Mrs. Dyer, wife of an electrician, filled in these details:

The friendship started in Chicago in 1923 when Captain Byrne, unemployed, met Mrs. Dyer and lived with the family "quite a while."

"He always acted like one of us," she said.

"For several months after he left, he kept in touch with the family by mail, but when he moved to his present residence in California, the contact was broken.

"This is the first news we have had of him since that time."

The Dyers moved to Arizona in 1941.

Baby's Face of Future Is Fixed at Four Days

CHICAGO. — The facial outlines that a four-day-old baby will have when he grows up can be predicted, through X-ray studies of head growth at the University of Illinois college of dentistry.

The X-rays have shown that the main proportions of the skeletal framework of the human head and face present at birth remain virtually unchanged throughout life.

In fact, if growth rates could be predicted, it is possible that after an examination of such X-rays an artist could draw a fairly reliable sketch of the face of the future citizen at the age of 21.

If the length of a four-year-old baby's nose is 43 per cent of the distance from bridge of nose to tip of chin, that nose length will still be 43 per cent at age 65 or at any other time.

The size of bumps on a head at birth remain in the same proportion throughout the life, as do the many contours and positions of all of the features that are fixed by bones.

Martin Designs Plane To Lower Airline Fares

BALTIMORE, MD.—The Glenn L. Martin Aircraft company, for years almost exclusively a producer of larger type war planes, announced plans for mass production of a 30-passenger, twin-engine commercial ship which "promises passenger fares lower than first class rail rates."

A full scale "mock-up" of the plane was inspected by newsmen, who were told the mass production would begin immediately after the initial demonstration flight of the first completed plane, required by the civil aeronautics administration.

The plane, designed for operations on main domestic trunk lines, is a low wing monoplane with a cruising speed of nearly 300 miles an hour. It is expected to be especially good for ranges of 250 to 700 miles, where larger four-engine transports cannot be operated economically.

NEW YORK. — Contributions to the 1945 March of Dimes of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis totaled $16,589,874, or more than 50 per cent above the 1944 total of $10,973,491, Basil O'Connor, president of the foundation, has announced.

O'Connor said that as of August 11, there were 3,558 cases of poliomyelitis throughout the country compared with 5,008 for a like period last year.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Largest inflatable rubber units ever made (200 ft. long and 25 ft. high) were the pneumatic breakwaters used to control the waves on the beaches during the Normandy invasion.

The various raw materials used in the manufacture of tires came from 35 different states.

35.7 pounds of synthetic rubber are used up in driving a car 20,000 miles at 35 m. p. h. 61 pounds are used while driving the same number of miles at 50 m. p. h.

Sponge rubber, a century-old discovery, may become a hundred-million-dollar industry.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I. Arthur, badly disfigured and not wanting to live, had the false report sent out. When he came to America he was employed by Spratt and soon became acquainted with the entire family. Elizabeth thought that she had met him some place, but his change and the name of Kessler made it impossible for her to place Kessler. He showed keen interest in Brian's collection of mounted insects. Spratt promised to get and mount a bat for him. All the children became fond of him.

CHAPTER XV

Elizabeth turned to the desk and began writing an order for some tools needed for the Victory garden. She had finished this and several other notes when she heard Dick and Cherry come in. Going to her doorway, she watched them scamper up the stairs, enjoying the healthy windblown look of them. "Did you have a good time?" she asked.

"Oh yes," said Cherry. "The sea was just beautiful and we all had a hot dog and Dick ate two egg sandwiches besides."

"I don't know why you don't kill yourself," Elizabeth exclaimed.

Dick said he felt fine, which he evidently did. They said good night, and Elizabeth went downstairs. Spratt and Kessler should be finishing up their conference by now if they expected to go to work in the morning. They did appear in a short time, Spratt saying he didn't know why Kessler insisted on taking a taxi when he'd be glad to drive him home. Shaking his head with good-natured insistence, Kessler said,

"I'm sure Mrs. Herlong will agree with me. I can't drive, but it's one of my principles not to let my friends drive for me if I can help it. It may be convenient tonight, but there will be times when it isn't. Am I right, Mrs. Herlong?"

How sensible he was, Elizabeth thought, to accept his handicaps so frankly. "Yes," she answered, "though either of us would be glad to drive for you, in principle you're quite right."

"Thank you. And now, since I don't know where the telephone is, will you stop arguing and call a cab for me, Mr. Herlong?"

Spratt chuckled and complied. Kessler turned back to Elizabeth.

"Mrs. Herlong," he said earnestly, "I can't tell you how happy you have made me."

It seemed a great deal to say in return for a pleasant evening, but he sounded as though he meant it. "We were all glad to have you, Mr. Kessler," she answered. "You have quite won the hearts of the children."

"They are delightful, all three of them. What a joy it is to see a home like yours. Your mode of living is so clear that it leaves no room for doubts. No one who spent an hour here could go away asking, 'Are they happy? Are they free? Do they love each other?' The answers are obvious."

Elizabeth stood up to face him. "Are we really like that? Would you say it just to be pleasant?"

"Indeed not. You should be very proud of such an achievement."

"It hasn't been all mine." She glanced at Spratt, who was returning from the telephone. "I've had a great deal of cooperation."

Kessler's eyes followed hers, then came back to her. "Yes, that is easily seen. I congratulate you both."

Elizabeth and Spratt both smiled back at him gratefully. Elizabeth wondered at their talking like this to a stranger. But just now Kessler did not seem like a stranger. From being a newcomer among them, he had subtly changed into a friend who made her comfortable with the security of mutual understanding. Whatever memory he had stirred within her, it must be some old experience of peace. Since overhearing the children yesterday she had felt unsure of herself and of them, but now, hearing him speak, it was as though she had slipped back into some forgotten period of long ago when everything was safe and right. He was saying to them,

"Your children can afford to be cynical about themselves because they don't know how superior they are to most of their fellowmen. They believe in the obvious because they've found it good. When you see people deliberately clinging to a belief in abstractions they don't know anything about, you can be pretty sure they need to do it, because everything they do know about is unsatisfactory."

"How cheering you are!" exclaimed Spratt.

Elizabeth was looking up at Kessler. She asked,

"Mr. Kessler, have you and I ever met before?"

He started. For a moment he looked down. She looked down with him, and saw his hand tighten on his cane. She was to learn that he did this often, making an unconscious gesture toward his physical means of support when his spirit felt undefended.

But he hesitated only for a moment. His self-discipline had been learned in a long hard school. He answered,

"Before tonight? If we had, Mrs. Herlong, I can't believe I could have forgotten it. No, I am sure we have not."

He had looked up, and was regarding her steadily. Elizabeth did not know that letting his eyes meet hers just then was one of the hardest achievements he had ever accomplished in his life.

He did it so well that she nearly believed him. "Maybe I'm wrong, then," she said. "But tonight, as soon as you came in, it seemed to me that I had seen you somewhere and I couldn't think where it was."

"Maybe," suggested Spratt, sitting down and taking up the cigarette-box from the table, "you two saw each other at one of those big cocktail parties where you see hundreds of people and don't get to know any of them."

"Very likely," Kessler agreed readily, turning toward Spratt as though welcoming his suggestion.

"I have seen him before tonight."

"I've been forced against my will to attend several of those. Or possibly," he added, "you saw me at the studio. You come there now and then, don't you, Mrs. Herlong?" He glanced at her an instant as he spoke her name, and then became occupied with watching Spratt blow smoke-rings. "You might have caught sight of me talking from my bungalow to a projection room—chance glimpses like that sometimes tease our memories unmercifully."

"I suppose it must have been something of the sort," said Elizabeth. But she was still not satisfied. She continued, "But do you know, Mr. Kessler, when you came in I thought I knew you, and I thought you gave me a sort of startled look, as though you knew me too. You didn't?"

"If I stared at you rudely, I hope you will forgive me, Mrs. Herlong." He spoke lightly, almost humorously, as though it were a trifling matter. "I hope you will remember that I had been looking forward to meeting you, more eagerly than you realize. Attractive women have not been a great part of my life recently, or happy homes either. In the life of an exile they assume an importance that you do not understand, and I hope will never have to understand."

Elizabeth thought, "He protests too much," but Spratt was agreeing. "Yes, I should think they would. Is that your taxi pulling up, Kessler?"

"I believe it is," said Kessler. "Good night, and thank you both again."

Spratt walked out to the taxi with him. Elizabeth took a cigarette from the box on the table and stood looking down at the remains of the fire. When Spratt came in she turned around.

"Spratt, I don't care what that man says. I have seen him before tonight."

Spratt shrugged. "Wherever it was, you went there without me. I've been with Kessler every day for the past couple of weeks, and it never entered my head I'd seen him before. Probably a cocktail party, Elizabeth, or rambling about the studio."

"It wasn't. I tell you, I know him."

"All right, all right, you know him. He doesn't know you. He said so. I'm going to sleep on my feet. We talked and talked, and didn't get a thing done."

"You didn't? I'm sorry."

"His mind wasn't on his work. He kept bringing himself back from a great distance and repeating something he'd said fifteen minutes ago. I never saw him like that, he's usually sharp as a whip. Tired, I suppose—working all evening after working all day never is a good idea."

For several weeks Mr. Kessler did nothing about getting a bat for Brian, a reticence that both Spratt and Elizabeth admired. They had had experience of persons who wanted to move in on their lives and had started by trying to load the children with attentions. As they all liked Kessler she invited him to dinner again, and Spratt brought him in two or three times to have a drink on their way from the studio, so when Kessler had had time to be quite sure the Herlongs were accepting him as one of their friends, he brought up the subject of the bat again, to Brian's great delight. Two days later he telephoned that he had obtained the bat, and made a date for Brian to come to see him.

It was very kind of him, Elizabeth thought, and she was glad to see her children's increasing friendship with him. Kessler never patronized them, and he had a great talent for minding his own business. He rarely mentioned the war unless somebody else brought it up, and when he did refer to national affairs he refrained admirably from making adverse criticisms of the President and from telling them what he thought Americans ought to do about anything. In fact, he listened to them a good deal more than he talked, though none of the children realized it. "He's swell," they said of him.

Kessler said to Elizabeth, with a touch of wistfulness, "There is a great deal of you in all your children." Occasionally she wondered why he seemed more interested in finding her characteristics than Spratt's. He and Spratt were good friends and Spratt frequently said his work on the picture was proving invaluable. But when he came to their home it was primarily to see her, a fact that Spratt observed with a sort of proud amusement. He liked other men to admire his wife.

Brian and Peter Stern visited Kessler so often that Elizabeth was sometimes afraid they were going to be nuisances, though Kessler insisted they were not. Brian saw little Margaret and announced grudgingly that she was not bad, so Elizabeth suggested the party. The next time Brian went to see Kessler she went by to get acquainted with Margaret. Kessler's modest street-floor apartment was kept for him by a motherly woman who came in leading Margaret by the hand and telling her to speak nicely to the lady, which Margaret did. She was an intelligent-looking child, with big blue eyes and two fat pigtails, shyly polite; as Elizabeth rarely had any trouble getting along with children, their acquaintance began without difficulty. Margaret had learned the English language very well. Oh yes, she said, she went to school and she was learning to swim, and when asked if she would like to have a party with her school friends she nodded eagerly. When they had got that far in their conversation Kessler was in, having left Brian and Peter blissfully occupied with the bones of the bat. "I'm going to have a party!" Margaret announced to him.

Kessler looked down at her and smiled fondly. Again Elizabeth felt a flash of recognition. "I've seen him somewhere, I know I have," she thought. "Maybe he doesn't remember, but I'm sure of it." However, she did not mention the subject, for Margaret was talking, and by the time they had arranged the date of the party and other details she felt it was time to go.

On the way home she made up her mind that though he might think her foolish for persisting, the next time she happened to be alone with Mr. Kessler she was going to ask him to rack his brain and figure out where it was she had met him. There was no good reason why it should seem so important to her to remember, since it must have been a very casual meeting to have escaped her so thoroughly, but these occasional twinges of recollection teased her. Just for the instant when he had looked down at Margaret with a tender little smile, not only the expression of his face but his whole attitude had been so familiar that she had felt as though she was watching someone she had known for years. Then it was gone, and now she could not remember at all.

Since Margaret's party was going to strain their already overtaxed problem of household help, Spratt suggested that he bring Kessler over that evening, leaving him there while he drove Margaret and some of the other guests home, and then that he, Kessler, Elizabeth and the two older children go out for dinner. Elizabeth agreed gladly. She had managed to keep servants so far, but she wanted to give them no grounds for complaint. The party went very well, for Margaret was not shy among friends of her own age. They played in the pool, gobbled sherbet and cake without noticing that war exigencies had made it impossible to get ice cream, and were happily tired when they were finally coaxed back into their clothes and their parents began to arrive to take them home. Margaret came over to Elizabeth.

"Thank you for the party, Mrs. Herlong. We had a very good time."

Plug Shakers

When refilling salt and pepper shakers that have corks in bottom, or which have fallen inside, remove the cork and discard. Then paste mucilage paper over the hole. Or use adhesive tape.

Fires Costly

Every day in the U. S. there are 1,800 fires, 28 deaths caused by fire in 1,000 homes, 130 stores, 100 factories, 7 churches, 7 schools and 3 hospitals.

Bike Passenger

You invite disaster when you carry another person on your bike.

Clever Washcloth

Here's a clever way to use up those left-over slivers and scraps of toilet soap. Put them into a small turkish toweling bag when taking a bath; this bag full of soap can be put into the tub and you'll have wash cloth and soap in one.

Cleaning Diamonds

To clean diamond rings, cover them with wood alcohol and let stand for five minutes. Remove and polish with white tissue paper

Hanging Trousers

The READER'S DIGEST OFFERS dignified work—extra income to people with a little spare time

America's most widely read magazine—The Reader's Digest—can use a few more Community Representatives in this locality.

The work is pleasant and will take little time. It offers an easy way to make money. Our Community Representatives—young and old—are from every walk of life; busy, intelligent people who welcome this easy dignified means of adding to their income. They do not need to be the salesman type.

Although our readership is growing rapidly, still 4 out of 5 families are not yet subscribers to The Reader's Digest. By introducing the magazine to friends and acquaintances, you'll earn their hearty thanks...as well as liberal profits. By approaching strangers, you can also acquire new and valuable personal contacts.

Further, we have decided—for a limited time—to accept subscriptions from men in the service ...or who have been in the armed forces and are now discharged and back home...at half price.

In addition, many people whose subscriptions are about to expire will be entering their renewals at this season. By calling these people and forwarding their orders to Pleasantville, you receive generous profits.

For complete details of this Community Representative plan, mail the coupon below or a penny postcard to ALLAN SCOTT, The READER'S DIGEST, Pleasantville, N.Y.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Here come the Witches and their big black cats.
Oh how I would like to ride among the flying bats.
To see the Jack-O-Lanterns shining bright
For the children to ride all night.
Ghosts all dressed in white
Will give you an awful fright.
So you better watch out
On Hallowe'en night.

We believe the above song is what you will be greeted with when you attend the Grammar School Parent-Teachers Association Hallowe'en Party next Wednesday night at the Grammar School. There will be fun there for everybody and all the parents, the teachers, and the children are counting on you being there. There'll be fun enought to go around for everybody.

Helen Cox, who has been employed at Chilton County News for the past two years and Cecil Carter, recently returned from overseas, and who completed 65 missions over enemy territory, while in service, were married last Sunday morning by Rev. Roswell Owens at the Clanton Baptist Church. Shortly after the ceremony they left for an extended trip through Florida. For this fine young couple we have only the best wishes, and hope for them a long life together. May all of their troubles be little . . .(hey, wait a minute) . . . may they never have any trouble.

What goes? There sure isn't any flies on Clanton aviators when it comes to flying. Sunday morning about half the population went out to the airport, saddled up their trusty steeds, and hied off to Pensacola, Fla. for the day. Having made previous arrangements, the dined well, we understand, at the Cove Hotel. Thence back to the airport there and off through the air with the greatest of ease, to Gragg Field, Clanton, Ala. Truly times do change. But, as the billy goat said as he caught the farmer leaning over the feed trough: all had a wonderful time and made the cross country trip with no mishaps or trouble. Those who piloted the six plane squadron and their passengers were: Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Golden, Mr and Mrs Charles Wade, Mr and Mrs Raybon Crew, Mr and Mrs L. J. Crew Elizabeth Wade and Lt. Dale, Mayor Leo Thompson and Fred, with Miss Marjorie Esco, well we think that was the compliment of the armada. Anyway it just goes to show you what is going on in the air around here these days.

Last week two ladies came into the office for some cardboard. While here they left a package containing some clothes. We know not who the ladies were but if they would call by the office here we will be glad to return same to the proper parties.

EDITORS RETURN

It is quite gratifying to see on the masthead of The Baldwin Times, "James H. Faulkner, Editor and Publisher." For the past couple or three years, Jimmy has been away from The Times, and while a splendid job was done by Ford Cook in his absence, still we are glad that former Lieut. Faulkner, of the Army Air Corps, has swapped his pilot's controls for a typewriter.

Alabama newspapermen welcome Neil O. Davis back as Editor and Publisher of The Lee County Bulletin, of Auburn. The Bulletin was in good hands while Neil was in the Navy, but his own private touch on the editorial page was missed, and is again appreciated.

The Times and The Bulletin are two of the best Alabama weeklies, and Jimmy Faulkner and Neil Davis made them that. They are both ex-service men now, and ex-presidents of the Alabama Press Association. — Greenville Advocate.

"FROZEN" ASSETS

"Frozen" assets used to mean propty that couldn't be converted into cash. Sometimes it was a polite excuse for not paying bills.

But times have changed. The remarkable advance of the last few years in developing new pulpwood products is giving a brand new meaning to the term. Frozen assets may everywhere soon be expected to mean the meats, vegetables, fruits and dairy products that the American public will be storing up in their own homes against a rainy day.

It has long been known that deep frozen food could be preserved against quick decay. Yet, it took wartime research to find a form of packaging that could preserve these foods against each other and against deterioration.

Pulp and paper chemists did it, developing a special type of paper that is waterproof, mouldproof, taintproof and impervious to changes in temperature. By first packing foods in this paper, deep freezing became a practical method for keeping them indefinitely, without losing any of their original taste or goodness.

Experts today are predicting that the time is near when deep freezing units will be as much a part of the average home as an ordinary cooking stove.

Deep freezing is just one of the many miracles resulting from expanded wartime uses of pulpwood. It is one of many hundreds of reasons why the pulpwood industry is annually becoming a more important asset to this community.

Already we are beginning to feel the effects of the stepped-up postwar demand for pulpwood products in the intensive recruitment campaign for woods and mill workers now being conducted by the pulp and paper industry and the U. S. Employment Service. And no matter how it's looked at, the top quality pulpwood you cut today becomes "unfrozen" assets in your pocket or bank account tomorrow.

MOTION PICTURES

"No Greater Power," is the title of the sound, motion picture which will be shown in Chilton county communities this next week. This feature portrays the life of Zaccheus and how he was won by Jesus to his way of life. "Arctic Thrills" will also be shown and a technicolor comedy of "Little Black Sambo."

Every one is invited to these programs which are being sponsored by the Farmers Union Cooperative and the United Congregational Church. A free will offering will be taken to help defray expenses.

CARD OF THANKS

Please allow us space in your paper to thank all those who were such a comfort to us during the sickness and death of our dear wife and sister, Mrs. Reese Lee Bryan.

May God's blessings be with you.— T. W. Bryan and Family.

Where they are and How they are

Sgt. John W. Rawlinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R Rawlinson, of Billingsley, is home again after spending almost three years overseas He was in some of the battles in North Africa and Sicily, and he has a Purple Heart for injuries received during these battles. Sgt. Rawlinson says he is very happy to be back home, but he would be ready to get into the "scrap" again if he should be needed to help defend his country.

Barney Powell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Powell of Clanton Route 2, has recently been promoted to Seaman First Class, U. S. Naval Reserve. Mr. Powell enlisted in December, 1944; received recruit training at Camp Perry, Va., and after a short tour of training at the Naval Base in Norfolk, Va., was sent overseas. He is now attached to the Seaman Guard Division of an advanced base supply depot in Northwest Africa. His wife, the former Agnes Knight, and little son, Wendell, are residing with his parents during his absence overseas.

Pfc. Johnnis V. Blow of Tennison, Ala., who is with the 31st Division in Mindanao, is anticipating an early return home, since the announcement that the 31st Division will be among the first in the Pacific Theatre to be deactivated.

Pfc. Blow has been a member of this division since his induction in 1942. He was assigned to Company H, 167th Infantry, and served as No. One gunner through four major campaigns, inducting two amphibious invasions.

This veteran infantryman is a graduate of Tennison High School and was employed by Somerset Cotton Mills at Talladega.

John L. Howard, fire controlman first class, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Howard of Verbena, Ala., was serving on the crusier, The U S S Mobile, in the Pacific, when she took aboard 499 liberated prisoners of war at Nagasaki to take them to Okinawa. The crew on this ship had much to tell the former prisoners who had been without news from the outside world for nearly four years.

Among those who have recently been honorably discharged from the Naval Service at the Separation Center in New Orleans, La., was James Milton Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith, of Clanton Route 5.

Seaman Smith has been in the service since 1942, and served in New Guinea and the Philippines He received a citation from his Skipper for maintaining two and a half squadrons of aircraft under hazardous conditions without the proper tools and supplies.

Now that he is being discharged from the service, he says he intends returning to school at Auburn, Ala.

Lots of our boys are coming home to stay and among these we have here are: T. J. Rasberry, son of C. N. Rasberry of Route 5; Cpl. James Oaks and Cleveland Driver. Sure looks good to see the boys in civilian clothes again.

Tec. Sgt. Oliver Church, of Billingsley, is home for a visit with his family after spending twenty-two months overseas. He is very happy to be home for even a little while.

Another member of the Naval Air Forces who is returning to civilian life is Lt. (jg) Thomas Duncan, of Verbena, Ala. He has served almost four years and is very glad to be back home. He plans to teach High School Athletics.

Lee N. (Doc) Davis was honorably discharged from the U. S. Marine Corps the 21st of October. His brother Chester, was also discharged from the U. S. Marines the 13th of Oct. Both served overseas for sometime.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

The Mount Pleasant P.-T. A. is sponsoring a Hallowe'en Party October 31, 1945. Beginning at 7:15 o'clock with a fine program given by the teachers, which will last around an hour, we then will have several cake contests. These will consist of: "The Most Popular Pupil", "Pretty Girl Cake", "Ugly Man Cake", "Ugly Woman Cake." There will be several high school girls to sell Hot Dogs, hot coffee, chicken salad sandwiches and drinks on trays to the audiance during the Cake Contest. There will be a fortune telling booth too in the back of the auditorium. The Glee Club will entertain us at the close of the cake contest for a while. Everybody is cordially invited to attend and make a success of the party.

Stunt Night

The Senior III Class sponsored the High School's first stunt night October 10th. The program included in competition:

Fantasy in Bugs—Junior I Class.
Human Car—Junior II Class.
The Kink and Kizzies's Wedding—Junior III Class.
Human Organ—Senior I Class.
The Umha Family—Senior II Class.

The Senior II's won first place; the Junior III's second. The Senior Class presented a skit, "The Shantytown Scandal." Gulnell Moody in behalf of the student body dedicated stunt night to J. A. Peterson, Principal. A capacity crowd enjoyed the stunts and the proceeds will go toward purchase of a duplicator for the school.

Hallowe'en Party

On October 26th, the P.-T. A. will sponsor the annual Hallowe'en Party in the auditorium of the school. A program befitting the time of black cats and Jack-O-Lanterns will be presented and ice cream, hot-dogs and cold drinks will be on sale. The admission charge will be 15c for children of school age and 25c for adults. The stage program will begin at seven o'clock.

As the climax of the evening one high school and one elementary school pre-school girl will be presented with a prize and crowned queen on the stage to reign over the festivities. For the first time pre-school children will be entered in competition with children of the elementary school. Attention of parents of pre-school children is called to the following rules: Any pre-school child who lives in any of the communities served by the school may be nominated, provided the nomination turned in to Mr. J. R Ekblad is accompanied by 50c, which gives the child 50 votes. Mr. Ekblad has charge of the Elementary School Contest and Mr. Peterson of the High School Contest and they will receive votes at 1c each at any time. The High School home rooms have nominated the following home room queens to compete in the contest:

Junior I, Section A—Betty Joe Tillery.
Junior I, Section B—Anne Lucas.
Junior II, Section A — Mary Julia Blewster.
Junior II, Section B—Peggy Slaughter.
Junior III—Pauline Crowe.
Senior I—Helen Hilyer.
Senior II—Eunice Davis.
Senior III—Anne Crowe.

ISABELLA

Both services at Mulberry were very well attended Sunday and Sunday night.

Bro. R. W. Stuckey is teaching the book, "Some Learning Processes," this week at Mulberry.

There was a number from Mulberry that attended the Association at Cane Creek and Refuge last week.

The Mable Woodward W.M.S. Circle met with Mrs. Jessie McCraw last week, with a good attendance, and a program from Royal Service given.

The Isabella P.-T. A. met in the school auditorium on Monday evening with a good attendance. The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Annye Lecroy; opened by singing, "Abide With Me." Devotional was given by Bro. Charlie Haggard. Old and new business were discussed. Our objective for the year is to purchase an electric ice box for the lunch room.

Plans were made and committees appointed for a Hallowe'en Party to be at the school on the evening of October 30th, Tuesday, at 6:30 p.m.

Games and contests will be enjoyed by all with Miss Loyce Baker in charge.

Sgt. and Mrs. Braxton Lecroy and son of Florida spent their furlough here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lecroy, recently.

Mr. Lynn Williams, who works in Mobile, spent the week end at home here with his family.

Mrs. Erma Bradley and daughter of Birmingham spent the week end here with her mother, Mrs. Lilla Carter.

Miss Gladys Giles, who works in Birmingham, spent the week end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Giles.

O. F. Davenport, Jr., has his discharge from the army and he, wife and baby, are with his parents here. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Davenport and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Traywick, of Sardis, until he goes to work somewhere.

Van Williams, wife and baby, have been visiting his mother, Mrs. C. C. Williams, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sibert Weeks and son of Tuscaloosa, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Oliver and children and Mrs. R. E. Tucker of Birmingham, and Mrs Clifford Manning and children of Clanton spent the week end with Mrs. D. O. Manning here.

This community extends our congratulations to Charlie Griffin and Miss Laura Callen on their marriage recently in Aububrn, Ala. Mrs. Griffin taught here at Isabella several years ago, but at the time of their marriage she was living in Auburn.

Miss Treman Stuckey visited in Birmingham for the week end.

Food management of bees during the Fall months is important in getting the bees in condition to take the maximum advantage of the honey flow next Spring. Each colony should be checked to see that the queen is laying properly and that the colony has 40 to 50 pounds of honey to carry it through the winter and early Spring months.

Cook vegetables only as long as is absolutely necessary. The shorter you can make the time, the better.

YOU CAN'T RENT

So why not build. I have 46 lots for white people in the Windham Addition to the City of Clanton, Alabama.

JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

BILLIE OAKES REPORTER

Our six-weeks examination was last week The teachers wanted everyone to pass, but of course, some did not study and failed. If a student doesn't pass his studies at Jemison High School, it is his fault and not the teachers'.

There are 31 boys going out for basketball. There are some who will not make team, but everyone will have a fair trial of it. Our Coach, Mr. J R. Ekblad, is expecting full cooperation from the boys. Anybody that gets a suit and doesn't obey the rules will have to turn his suit in. We hope to have more games this year than we did last year.

The F.F.A. boys had a meeting last Wednesday night. The purpose for this meeting was to decide how to raise money for buying a moving picture machine. We hope the boys will have no trouble in getting the money.

We wish to compliment Mr. L. C. Shields and the Vocational Agriculture boys in painting the building and straightening up the shop. Anyone will admit it looks much better

The attendance record for the first six weeks this year was better than last year. We hope to have an excellent record for the next six weeks.

LAYTON HOPE CONNELL

Mr. Layton Hope Connell, age 43, of Miami, Fla., died Oct. 19. The body arrived here over the L&N Sunday night. Funeral services were held at 11 a. m. Monday from Chestnut Creek Church, conducted by the Rev. Dewey Hughes. Interment was made in church cemetery.

Camp Fire Girls Inviting All Jills Between 7 and 18 Years Old

Fun-Filled Program Aims At Development of Abilities And Rounded Personality

By MARY E. PENNOCK

"So you're a Camp Fire executive," people say to me when I answer their "what do you do" query. "Let's see, aren't they the little girls who light fires with only one match and fry eggs on hot rocks?" And I smile indulgently and have to admit that they have been known to do both things, but that those two examples hardly typify Camp Fire's activities. It's like saying that the Red Cross has "something to do with bandages, doesn't it?"

Camp Fire's field of activity is broad, seeking to give a girl an opportunity to try many things and so to find herself. The philosophy of the program is that girls "learn by doing," and if you were to glance through the "Book of the Camp Fire Girls," you would notice the long list (1,300) of things that girls may do to earn honors—notice the word "do" not "know." These honors are grouped in seven different fields: home craft, health, camp, nature, business, hand craft and citizenship. Exploration into these fields has meant the discovery of a vocation to many girls. A star study session of her nature group at camp started one Minneapolis girl on a hobby that finally led her to the position of curator at New York's Hayden Planitorium.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE SEPT. 15 TO NOV. 30

Annual membership drive of the Camp Fire Girls extends from Sept. 15 to Nov. 30. Slogan this year is "There's Fun for Everyone in Camp Fire." A summary of the organization's aims:

"Camp Fire Girls work for World Friendship. Their program is based on democratic ideals. It builds for happy home life, community service and better citizenship. Through seven lively crafts, Camp Fire Girls have fun, make friends, and develop their skills and talents."

We have no promises, take no oaths in Camp Fire, because we know that promises are sometimes broken. A girl expresses her desire to follow the Camp Fire Law, which is:

Worship God
Seek Beauty
Give Service
Pursue Knowledge
Be Trustworthy
Hold on to Health
Glorify Work
Be Happy

The Camp Fire Law is really a philosophy of life, and a beautiful one, I think you will agree. A Camp Fire Girl said to me recently, "Miss Pennock, the Camp Fire Law is so lovely it is almost like poetry."

They Join for the Fun.

Girls, of course, do not join Camp Fire because it is good for them—a "character building" agency. They join because it is fun, because it fills for them a need of belonging to a group. Together with from 6 to 20 other girls, they have an opportunity to do things which they cannot do alone. They make their own plans, run their own meetings. I have seen more than one president of an adult group who could learn something from a Camp Fire group president about parliamentary procedure.

These days, when we are all thinking so seriously about making democracy work, Camp Fire groups are getting a first hand experience in democracy. "Workshops of Democracy" is a term that has been given to Camp Fire groups. Girls are not dictated to by their leader. They learn to examine suggestions and ideas critically, to think things through sensibly, to make their own decisions.

A Camp Fire Girl (left) is from 10 to 15. Through the seven lively crafts she becomes well equipped to handle varied situations. A Blue Bird is a junior member between 7 and 10 years old. Through a program of games, story-telling, simple hand craft and war service, Blue Birds learn to work and play with other children. They become reliable while having fun. Horizon Clubbers (right), are of senior high and junior college age. Personality development, vocational study and community service prepare Horizon Clubbers for adult society.

Credit to Volunteer Leaders.

We who work professionally in Camp Fire take little credit for its accomplishments. All credit is due to the tireless and loyal devotion of its thousands of volunteer leaders and the men and women in each community who make up its local councils. They serve the girls of their community through the Camp Fire program because they believe in youth and because they, too, have fun. Do not think that all the benefits revert to the girls. A Minnesota guardian, telling what grand times she was having working with her group of Camp Fire Girls wrote, "My former classmates, now grown heavy and dull, look at me and say, 'My, but you get younger and nicer looking all the time.' I never have time to wonder about whether or not it is true that 'Life Begins at "40".' Sometimes, the old woman that I really am stands aside and looks at me that is guardian of Camp Fire, and I laugh until my sides ache to think how Camp Fire has cheated old age."

It sounds like fun, doesn't it? It is fun, and there is a place for you in the Camp Fire picture if you love and understand girls. Youth needs you now, and Camp Fire can give you the tools with which to serve. Your opportunity is as close as your telephone—to call your local Camp Fire office — or your paper and pen, to write National Headquarters at 88 Lexington avenue, New York 16, New York.

And about those eggs fried on hot rocks—you can be associated with Camp Fire a long time and never learn that trick. I never have.

CASBAH CUISINE

What's your favorite dish when you're cutting up at the Casbah—when you're making talk at the marble slab? What we mean is, what do you order at the corner soda fountain? Do you whittle your waistline with a lemon fizz or do you crave these cataclysmic calories?

Triple Threat—Three balls of assorted ice cream each one dripping with another kind of goo. The combinations are gruesome.

Horse's Neck—That's what you ask for when you want a coke with ice cream. Ever try root beer with ice cream? Lush Mush!

Maiden's Delight or Epicure Special—You have two names for this concoction, but we call it "Anything Goes." The idea is for the soda fountain jerker to use his own imagination.

MORNING AFTER

When she telephones you early—
As soon as it is light—
And cannot wait to ask you,
"Did you have fun last night?"
(SHE DID!)

If you try to change the subject
With "Oh, it was all right,"
And don't even want to know
If she had fun last night—
(YOU DIDN'T!)

SPREADING CHEERS

As far as we know this is the only newspaper reportage on high school cheers. If we'd known better, we probably wouldn't have done it either—but it's too late now. Our soda fountain FBI is sending in cheers like mad, and we're honor bound to report them to you. Sorry—no sound effects!

Nice Spirit
I'm a raindrop, I'm a raindrop, I'm a raindrop
Till I die—
But I'd rather be a raindrop
Than a drip from Central High.

For Blue Mondays
Wash 'em out!
Wring 'em out!
Hang 'em up to dry!
Yeh, Central High!

Don't Get Dizzy Now
When you're up, you're up,
When you're down, you're down
When you're up against Central
You're upside down.
Stand 'em on their heads,
Stand 'em on their feet,
Central, Central
Can't be beat.

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

Don't think you're the only teen who's nursing ambitions to be a movie star, a radio actress or a singer with a band. No harm building castles in the air. But, just in case those castles never come down to earth, you'd better be digging the foundation now for a more practical bungalow. Clicking a typewriter or selling behind the counter may not be your idea of glamour, but they'll certainly tide you over until the Talent Scout finds you. And—find you, he will—providing, of course, you have the Talent.

Rotenone Imports

In 1931, the first year in which this country imported rotenone roots in commercial quantities, our imports were only 8,400 pounds. By 1940 they had expanded to 6,500,000 pounds. Rotenone is used in insecticides.

Blooming Hats

It took clothes-ration points for an Australian girl to buy a hat. Knowing this, United States soldiers often brought to their dates specially made headpieces of fresh flowers. This custom, started by our troops, became the rage in hat-scarce Australia.

Progressive Century

The barometer and the thermometer were developed in the 17th century.

Heating Safety

One of the most notable innovations in safe heating is the wet base boiler in which water circulates under the ash pit. The fact that the boiler can be placed on a combustible floor is of interest in connection with the trend toward the basementless house. In such houses it is often desirable to install the boiler on a wooden floor in a utility room or kitchen. Other safety features of modern boilers are foot-treadle door openers, ball-shaped, air-cooled handles and side shakers, making it easier to open and close doors.

Lucky Stones

Emeralds were once believed to be beneficial to the eyes and amethysts were thought to prevent drunkenness, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica. The belief in lucky stones still exists.

Bath Banishes Blues

According to etymologists, the English word "bath" comes indirectly from a Greek word meaning "to drive sadness from the mind." Which goes to prove again that the classic Greeks were a modern people and that they knew the full value of bodily cleansing. Bathe frequently and thoroughly, and thus "drive sadness from the mind."

Plan Baths

If the man of the house has been accustomed to taking his daily shower in the morning, reserve this time for him. The children might bathe in the evening, alloting the time according to their ages and when they go to bed. The younger children might be bathed before dinner, older children later. Plan your own bath for whichever hour will give you the most relaxation.

Eggs Nutritious

Eggs help keep the body healthy. They make strong muscles and red blood. A child needs four to five eggs a week. An older person needs three to five eggs a week. Eggs may be eaten plain, or mixed in other foods.

Whip Soap Flakes

Whip your soap flakes in a little hot water with an egg beater and you will need fewer flakes and get better results.

Common Sense Will Kill the Common Cold

"It takes a week to cure a cold, but it cures itself in seven days," runs an old saw. Though medical research is finding effective anti-cold drugs, a cold is self-limiting and unless complications set in, the sufferer gets well anyway.

We know that the cause of the common cold is a filtrable virus, and that the virus is highly contagious. Theoretically, the fellow with a cold should isolate himself during the acute two-day incubation period. But most cold carriers consider themselves too "indispensable" to stay home, and consequently the rest of us are doomed to inherit the virus and catch cold.

Specialists say that during the first stage of an acute cold local nasal treatment is of no value and may produce uncomfortable secondary reaction. The medical profession is anxious to help the layman choose proper medication; because of the hundreds available, most do more harm than good. It is unfortunate that the alkalinity of certain nasal preparations has been so extolled over the radio. It is now known that nosedrops should be slightly acid. Of the available liquid nasal preparations, antiseptics and silvers are often more irritating than helpful, while gargles are usually ineffective in killing or even inhibiting bacteria, according to an article in Coronet magazine.

Sulfa Drugs Useless.

While the sulfas have little or no effect on the common cold virus, they are effective against many types of bacteria and consequently may — when sprayed or dropped into the nose—serve a useful purpose in preventing the spread and shortening the duration of infection after the first acute stage of the cold. But there's danger as well as miracle in the sulfas and even these preparations should be used by the layman only on the advice of physician.

There are also a great many nasal inhalers on sale. Yet, only three of them contain a therapeutic ingredient which actually shrinks the nasal mucous membrane and promotes ventilation and drainage. Those inhalers which are advertised to the public often claim to make the nose feel clear in seconds. Because of cooling menthol, they do make the nose feel clearer, but that's all. Actually, they irritate the nasal membrane and are of no medicinal value whatsoever.

The common cold must run its course. But its course can be shortened and its potential dangers can be minimized, and here's how: Make the first sign of a cold a slow down signal. If you can't spend a day or so in bed, get extra sleep. Keep warm and dry. Don't over-indulge. If the air in your house is too dry, a copious jet of steam flowing from the kitchen kettle will help moisten the dry mucous membrane.

Only when the later symptoms are in evidence has the time come for medication. Then it is important to get the right medication. It's easy to telephone your doctor for advice.

The Romance of Your Name

By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

BALL

This name is of Saxon origin and means "swift." Another authority gives the meaning "bold." It had many variations in spelling, such as Balle, Bale and Bal. Bal is also a Belgian surname.

The first head of the Ball family on record is Vice Comes Ba, who is named in the Doomsday book as a landed proprietor of Exon, England. A noted Puritan divine, John Ball, also a member of the English Ball family, lived in the 14th century.

Another descendant, Thomas Ball, was a great warrior and defended the castle of Salonica a year against the Turks, and so well did he defend it, that Mohammed II, Emperor of the Turks, said of him that he had seen many heroes in the country of Peloponnesus, but only one man, Thomas Ball.

William Ball of Wiltshire, England, was the father of Francis Ball, who was a settler of Springfield, Mass., in 1640. He married Abigail Burt, and all of the Balls of Massachusetts are their descendants.

Edward Ball of Stamford, Conn., went to New Jersey with a party of New Englanders and assisted in building the town of Newark.

The southern Balls of this country are well known. Col. William Ball was the first of them to land in this country, and settled in Lancaster country, Va., 1650. He was a direct descendant of William Ball of England, who was the great grandfather of George Washington.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Farm plans were made recently on the farms of Mr. M. C. Durbin, Miss Mary Sue Moore and Stewart Smith. These plans included a complete water disposal system, pasture, crop rotation and permanent vegetative cover for lands too steep for cultivation.

Mr. Durbin has planned to establish sericea in a two-acre peach orchard. He is going to cut the sericea and practice a system of mulching. By doing this he will have eliminated an erosion hazard. The mulch will serve to conserve moisture for the trees. The first cutting will be used for hay and the last cutting will be used for mulching the trees. In one field which is too steep for continuous cultivation, he is going to practice a system of perennial strip cropping. Sericea will occupy one terrace interval and row-crops will occupy another terrace interval. The sericea will serve for two purposes. If a terrace breaks in the field, the sericea strips will hold and keep other terraces from breaking. The sericea will also improve the soil. After the sericea has grown for four or five years, it will be plowed up and put in row-crops, and the cultivated strips will be established in sericea.

Mr. Ramond Oden of Maplesville reports that he has better corn this year following Kobe Lespedeza than corn following winter legumes. A very good example of how well Kobe and Common Lespedeza will grow can be seen on the farm of Mr. J. N. Dennis which is located four miles east of Jemison. This lespedeza was planted six or seven years ago. Two crops of corn and three crops of oats have been grown on the land since it was planted. Without any fertilizer, there is a perfect stand that ranges in height from ten to 14 inches. The yield of oats on this lespedeza stubble was twenty-five to thirty bushels and no fertilizer was used.

PRESIDENT OUTLINES FARM PROGRAM NEEDS

President Truman has asked for legislation "to strengthen the machinery for carrying out price-support commitments, and for laying the basis for broader peacetime markets for agricultural products."

In his special reconversion message to Congress, the President recommended:

1. Making an additional $500,000,000 available to the Commodity Credit Corporation to safeguard farm prices. This should be done by transferring Lend-lease funds to the account of C CC on a continuing basis, he said.

2. Stimulation of the export of farm products, particularly through shipment of more food to war-ravaged areas.

3. Strengthening and further development of the Federal crop insurance programs which, together with the assurance of reasonable and stable farm prices, will go a long way toward meeting [illegible] which have plagued farmers in the past.

4. [illegible] strengthening of [illegible] and improvement of soil and forest resources, and [illegible] for scientific research.

PLENTY OF FEED FOR LIVESTOCK

The corn crop is big. The oat crop the biggest on record. The barley crop bigger than average. And the grain-sorghum crop the next biggest ever. Economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture figure that production, plus the carry-over and about the same amount of by-product feeds, will make a total supply of feed concentrates as big as last year.

They say the number of livestock in the country the first of January will add up to about the same as the first of this year. So, it seems we will have a record or near-record supply of feed per animal.

EXPECTS LESS DEMAND FOR EGGS THIS WINTER

By the middle of December egg prices may sink close to the support level and stay near there most of the winter and spring, predicts the United States Department of Agriculture.

When the Japs surrendered, the Army cancelled most of its orders for dried eggs. That may mean some more eggs for civilians in this country. But a lot of folks in this have been using more eggs when meat was hard to get. Now that they can get more meat, they may not want quite so many eggs. So it looks like a slackening in the demand for American eggs.

The Future of Pulpwood in Alabama

● One result of the war has been to make the people of this state more conscious than ever before of the great asset we have in our pulpwood resources.

Now that complete victory has been won, the new usefulness of pulpwood will result in increased peacetime consumption of paper, rayon, plastics and many other products of pulpwood. Part of our vast forest heritage, pulpwood—a basic American industry—will continue to serve the nation in peace, as it did in war.

Make the Most of this Asset

Intelligent cutting of pulpwood pays big dividends. By adequate planting and selective cutting even a small farm woodland can yield a valuable crop of pulpwood periodically. It is a crop which needs only a little care and can be harvested at any convenient time. It is another cash crop. Consult your nearest district forester or forest ranger.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

While I stood near the Escalator in a large department store I observed the people as they came and went over this moving stirway. One would pause a moment and then take a careful step. He would then begin to go down, or up, according to his own choice. The Bible tells us that we are within one step of eternity all the time. There is only one step between us and death. In our travels we are sure to come to the moving stairway that will carry us out of this world. No one can take this step for us. We pause for a moment and then we take the step alone. We step out on the life that we have lived, and according to our own choice we will either go up or down. When our deeds are evil we make the step of death and down we go. When we have known righteousness and have experienced salvation we make the step and up to God we go. While we live we determine the direction of the soul when the last step is taken.

The All Wise God sits on the throne of the world, and we are often filled with astonishment as we see how heaven can smite a foe with little the side of the largest army. Frog in the hand of God defeated Pharaoh. Grasshoppers in the plan of God defeated mighty Israel. Snowflakes sent Napoleon rolling back from Russian soil. Just a sling and a stone and Goliath bit the dust. If God be for us, it is useless for any one, or anything, to be against us. God and a man, God and a snow cloud, can put the mightiest foe to flight.

Washington Irving tells of a man who saw a steep hill before him, and decided that he would jump over it. He went back so far to get a running start for the jump, and then when he ran, he ran so fast to make the leap a success until when he had come to the place to jump, he was exhausted and fell down flat on the ground. After resting for awhile he then got up and quietly walked over the hill. A great many people exhaust themselves getting ready to do something. It is all right to grow, but the time comes in the life of each one of us when we should do something. To be forever preparing to do something and then doing nothing, is to fail.

Having what I thought to be a reliable yard man, I turned over to him my yard tools and instructed him to go five blocks away and mow the yard of our apartment house. Two hours later I walked over to see how he was getting along with the job, and discovered that the negro had not been to the place, and that he had walked away with my mower and yard tools. He disappeared in the city, and I have been unable to locate him. I furnished the tools for him to work with, and he appropriated them to his own use. You say that was a mighty sorry negro, and he was, but he was no more so than a human being who accepts the love and mercy of God, accepts health and wealth, and then walks away with it to appropriate these things to his own good. What we have in this life was given to us from God, and we have no right to appropriate anything to ourselves. Stealing God's tools.

Seeing a piece of pottery on a shelf, I looked it over and admired its beauty and perfection. It seemed to surpass other pieces of like pattern. I ventured to ask the price and found that it was valued at three times the amount of the vases of a like pattern. Of course I was curious to know why one was valued at five dollars and the other at fifteen. This is what I was told, "Because it has passed more often through the furnace." That was the difference. Does not God often send His children through the furnace of affliction, that He may bring us out with the stamp of an increased value upon our lives? The furnace of affliction will produce in us a priceless perfection when we often pass through with love, faith and trust in our souls.

New Farm Owners At All Time High In FSA Program

Chilton County has 101 new farm owners who have attained ownership as a result of their participation in the Farm Security Administration, Robert O. Williams, County Supervisor, announced yesterday. The announcement was made following a tabulation for the State of Alabama which revealed that one out of fourteen of the full farm owners in the State attained ownership through FSA.

The record shows, Mr. Williams said, that many tenant families are capable of owning and operating farms of their own if provided the opportunity of ownership. The FSA, through its rehabilitation and farm ownership programs, to the extent of its ability, he said, is providing this opportunity.

"These new owners are not confronted with the prospect of moving year after year," Mr. Williams said. "They are progressive, substantial citizens of their communities. They have attained success by following diversified farming programs. Their purchasing power has increased and has undoubtedly been reflected in the volume of transactions by virtually every business in the county."

CLANTON FFA INITIATES NEW MEMBERS

Eighteen new members were initiated into the Clanton chapter of the FFA last Tuesday night, October 2. The new members are as follows: James Hershel Blalock, Thomas Curtis Blalock, Fred Donovan, Robert Horace Foshee, R. C. McGee, J. E. Nickolson, Earnest Walter Oaks, Donald Gene Parrish, L. C. Activated sabadilla, an insecticide prepared from the seed of a lily-like plant native to the country surrounding the Caribbean Sea, is said by the manufacturers to be quite effective in controlling leaf hoppers, cabbage caterpillars, squash bugs, chinch bugs harlequin bugs and Mexican bean beetles.

Courteous As The Old South

Throughout the colorful history of the South, the word "Courtesy" has been given true expression. The L&N strives to continue that tradition as a living reality.

But the South itself, and this Railroad which has so faithfully served its interests for nearly a century, have changed greatly.

For over 95 years, the "Old Reliable" has aided the enormous development of the South and welded together a wide expanse of Southern territory. Its ever-mounting contribution in taxes in support of government, including schools and highways, its purchases and those of its 34,000 employes, its dependable service—all have accrued to the vast growth of the Southern region.

During the last four years, it has worked primarily to win the war. With glorious Peace, it is now undertaking to improve its facilities and service—its present improvement program is more than $28,000,000.

As constant as Southern courtesy, the L&N now strives to promote still greater Southern progress . . . to champion agricultural and industrial development. It hopes to merit continued public confidence and good will.

RECIPE FOR RECONVERSION

Home—happiness—and a job! That's the peacetime hope of our men in uniform. To make it a reality, America must get down to peacetime business—and plenty of it.

For the Telephone Company, this means the largest expansion program in the history of the telephone in Alabama.

It's a big order calling for the expenditure of millions of dollars to provide telephones for all who have been waiting for them. This is one of our first jobs! A greatly expanded telephone program for our farmer friends is also in process. Expansion of long distance service is being scheduled too. It will include the installation of coaxial cables to handle more calls with speed and convenience for you, and provide more facilities for that exciting visual art—television. A mass of construction is to be done and a new service to motor vehicles is also in the offing.

These expansion plans are being translated into reality as fast as materials become available. There will be work. And work means payrolls. And payrolls mean prosperity. The benefits reach everybody, the advantages make themselves felt in every home, in every family. For it's that friendly partnership between Alabama and the 3,700 men and women of the Telephone Company, working together for the advancement of their state.

There's every reason for confidence. What Alabama and the telephone people did in war, they can do in peace. There will be a marshalling of Men, Money and Materials, to build a more prosperous future for our state.

Iron Across Length

When ironing, press with the length rather than across the width of fabric wherever possible. But if a skirt, slip or nightgown is cut on the bias, then iron on a slant, along the grain or straight of the material. This will prevent the stretching and sagging which makes hems uneven.

MRS. ALLEN'S HUSBAND GIVES HER A SURPRISE

WEST MONROE, LA.—Mrs. Carl C. Allen of West Monroe, Louisiana, has an interesting story to tell about how she discovered Faultless Starch. Here is what she wrote:

"Last week my husband brought home a box of Faultless Starch. I decided to use it, thinking that all starches were about the same. You can imagine my surprise when I began ironing. My iron fairly flew and I was finished in no time. My clothes were so bright, with no rough starch blotches to mar their sleekness. I felt I just had to tell you how wonderful your starch is. My husband was just as proud as I when he saw his shirts. I wish all women could just try your product."

Now there is a thoughtful husband. That box of Faultless Starch really meant more to Mrs. Allen than a box of candy—and here is why:

SAVE 468 MINUTES A YEAR

Let's say it takes ten minutes to make hot starch when you have to cook it and stir it over a hot stove. But you can make hot Faultless Starch in a minute. That means you save nine minutes each time you make it. If you wash only once a week, in one year you would save 468 minutes, or seven hours and forty minutes. Would you rather have a box of candy or a box of starch that saved you better than seven hours a year?

SAVE 26 HOURS A YEAR

And that isn't all! Many people tell us that Faultless Starch makes it possible to save half their ironing time. Let's be conservative and say that Faultless Starch might save you half an hour each ironing day. In a year you would save twenty-six hours of hard ironing time! Which is best—a box of candy or a box of Faultless Starch?

Why go on starching and ironing the hard way when you can do it the easy way with Faultless Starch. Or, better still, ask your grocer for a box today. You deserve Faultless Starch, too.—Adv.

When Your Back Hurts—

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Youngsters' Party Delight—Ice Cream Clowns
(See Recipe Below)

Children's Party

How long since the youngsters had a party of their own? It doesn't have to be birthday time to celebrate, because parties for the younger set are fun to have, and essential for developing social poise.

Parties like this are easy on mother because refreshments must necessarily be simple. A little imagination and flair for decoration will do the rest.

Good wholesome food prepared attractively will go a long way toward satisfying the little guests. Add a few gay tablecloths and napkins, some easy but exciting games and you have all the ingredients for a successful party.

If you are serving sandwiches, cut them into shapes with animal cutters. A cool glass of milk, or hot chocolate with a frothy blob of whipped cream—now returned to the grocery shelves—will bring forth cheers from Jimmy's or Joan's friends.

The favorite dessert is cake or cookies with ice cream of course! Anything you can do to make this latter partyfied will all be on the credit side of the party.

Now that cheese and meat are easier to obtain, you can again have fun with sandwiches. Not too much seasoning, though, because youngsters' stomachs are sensitive. Here are some good suggestions:

Bologna Filling.
(Makes 15 to 20 sandwiches)

1 pound bologna
½ cup chopped pickles or relish
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon minced onion
Dash of tabasco sauce
3 hard-cooked eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup ground raw carrots
½ cup chopped celery

Grind bologna and mix thoroughly with relish, mayonnaise, onion and sauce. Divide in half and to one part add 3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped, and ½ teaspoon salt. To the other half add the carrots and celery.

Deviled Egg Filling.

4 hard-cooked eggs
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
4 teaspoons vinegar
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
4 tablespoons mayonnaise

Chop the eggs fine. Add other ingredients and mix well.

Deviled Cheese Filling.

½ pound mild cream cheese
1 small onion
3 canned pimientoes or chopped green or red peppers
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
4 tablespoons mayonnaise

Children's Party Menu.

•Assorted Sandwiches
Hot Chocolate
•Ice Cream Clowns
Popcorn Hard Candies
•Recipes given.

Fruit salads, which contain well-liked fruits, are a nice contrast to sandwiches at children's parties. This one will be high in favor:

Orange, Pineapple and Apple Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

3 oranges, peeled and diced
3 slices canned pineapple or 1 cup tidbits
1 unpeeled red apple, diced
1 cup seeded grapes, slivered
½ cup pitted dates, cut in small pieces
½ cup mayonnaise

Mix fruit with mayonnaise and chill very thoroughly. Serve on shredded lettuce.

During the cooler weather, it is often advisable to have a hot dish for the youngsters to start things off right. Now that cheese is again available, it might be a good idea to serve the following spaghetti dish:

Creamy Spaghetti.
(Serves 6)

4 tablespoons butter or fat
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
½ cup grated American cheese
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped pimiento
3 chopped hard-cooked eggs
2 cups cooked spaghetti (½ pound uncooked)

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt and pepper. Blend in milk, cheese, pepper and pimiento. Add eggs and spaghetti. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake 35 minutes in a moderate (325-degree) oven. Turn onto a hot serving platter and garnish with chopped stuffed olives or pickles.

Simple foods made to look pretty are a big hit at any party and doubly so if the foods are ice cream and cookies. In this dessert to top off the festivities, a plain cookie forms the ruff of the clown's suit, a ball of ice cream makes the head with raisin eyes and cherry nose and mouth. An inverted ice cream cone makes the clown's hat.

Ice Cream Clowns.
(Serves 6)

6 large cookies
1 quart vanilla ice cream
6 cones
Seedless raisins
Candied or maraschino cherries

Arrange cookies on a large plate. In center of each place a ball of ice cream. Top each ice cream ball with an inverted ice cream cone. Decorate each ball with raisin eyes and cherry nose and mouth.

Vegetable Dinner.

Remove the leaves from the cauliflower and cut off any bruised or dirty spots. Place it, top downward, in a deep bowl of cold salted water and allow it to stay there about half an hour to draw out dust and other impurities. Cook it whole in boiling water, uncovered. Cook 15-25 minutes until tender. Add about ½ cup milk to the water in which it is boiled—it will keep the cauliflower white. Lift out the cauliflower carefully and allow it to drain in a warm place.

Scrape the two small bunches of carrots, dice them and add them to briskly boiling water. Salt them and boil them until tender—about 10-12 minutes. Drain and butter.

Lynn Says:

Don't Ration Eye Appeal: Foods that look their best usually taste the best, too, because they've been cooked and served properly.

When garnishing daily dinner and luncheon platters, simplicity is the theme. A few freshened carrot tops, lettuce leaves, strips of green pepper or tomato wedges make the difference between the family's liking the food and merely eating it quietly.

Candles, simple flowers or a bowl of fruit add to the table immensely. They even seem to make the food more palatable.

Or, cut grapefruit rind into fancy shapes with a cutter and set them against a background of green.

TEMPERANCE BEGINS AT HOME

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 1:1-8; 3:14-15; Titus 2:1-4, 11, 12.
GOLDEN TEXT—As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.—Joshua 24: 15.

The influence of the home on the character of a child is the strongest factor in the development of high and holy standards in the life of the man and woman. "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6).

Emphasis is placed on temperance in our lesson, and it is clear that in the home real temperance principles may be built into the thinking of boys and girls. It is not easy for a young person who has been brought up right on this matter to go astray, no matter how severe the temptation.

I. Our Family Is God's Gift (II Tim. 1:1-5).

Paul, the apostle of Christ, addressed his son in the faith, Timothy, with affection and appreciation. He knew the good which was in this fine young man and saw the possibilities for service for God.

He knew that as the background of that faith, there was a godly line of ancestors, those with an "unfeigned faith." This young man, so precious to Paul and so successful in the ministry, owed a deep and abiding debt of gratitude to these godly women who had directed his steps aright, who had instructed and encouraged him in the right way.

Let those who are young recognize parents and grandparents who admonish and instruct them as God's gift. Let them not regard them as those who would restrict or restrain them unduly, but who for their own good and the glory of the Lord teach them the way to God.

II. Our Faith in God's Guidance (II Tim. 1:6; 3:14, 15).

The gift of God for preaching which Timothy had was recognized by the church, and he was sent forth to proclaim the gospel. But alas! the burdens of life and the pressure of service cause a man to forget or neglect his calling so there comes often the need of stirring up the gift of the Lord.

God gave it. He will bless us as we use it to its fullest possible extent. He wants us too, to stir it up—this blessed, divine gift and calling.

The admonition (v. 14) is to "continue" in that which was learned, to remain true to the Word of God. We show our faith in His guiding hand, as we resist by His grace, the ever-present temptation to get away from the only true foundation of a life of usefulness and joy.

What we have learned as children we should hold fast in spite of all the devices of Satan and every weakness of the flesh. Stand fast in the faith!

III. Our Fellowship in God's Gospel (Titus 2:1-4).

Old and young are to be united in a great communion of believers proclaiming the gospel of God's grace by a living testimony, by a life devoted to the things of God.

Sound doctrine is the only source of sound living. To be "sound" means to be healthy, vigorous, free from defects, suited to a purpose. That means that everyday Christian living must express the vigorous soundness of the gospel.

Men and women are to be "temperate," not given to excess, and particularly in mind here is the use of intoxicants. To be temperate in such a day as and land as ours can mean only one thing, and that is to abstain altogether. Christians ought to keep entirely away from intoxicants, and that includes beer and wine.

There is a positive side to the admonition, for soundness of life and faith shows itself in holy living, love, patience, the teaching of God's Word, and in fine fellowship among the people of God. We need to stress that side of the teaching of this passage.

IV. Our Faithfulness by God's Grace (vv. 11, 12).

God's grace has brought salvation to man through Jesus Christ and His atoning death on the cross. That grace calls for and calls forth from the believer a renouncing of that which is ungodly and lustful (and you can put intoxicants right in there!) and a determination to live right in faithful devotion to God.

That brings about right relationships to self, to others, and to God. The Christian is sober and self-controlled as to anything which could "intoxicate" him, whether it be liquor, or lust, or pride, or any other such thing. He also shows that grace of God before men in a life of righteousness. Then he finds his true place in a reverent devotion to God which makes him a worshiper "in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him" (John 4:23).

Faithfulness to our Lord will count more than our words in the great battle against intemperance. Let us stand true to Him and keep our witness clear and strong!

Cotton Damage

Most of the ginning damage to cotton occurs during the first three to four weeks of the ginning season. The cotton is "green" and damp because of the high moisture content of the seed.

Cotton Pickers

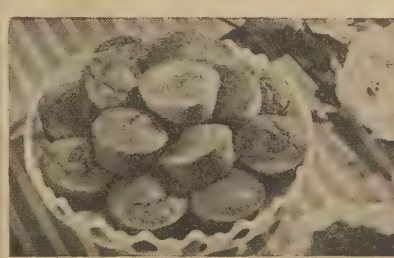
The leaves of the cotton must be removed by chemicals in order for picking machines to do the best jobs. Cotton is easily stained by green leaves and this makes dyeing of the cotton difficult.

Garden Superstition

As late as 1740, people in New England thought potatoes would shorten men's lives and make them unhealthy.

Towel Laundering

Increased use of towels means more frequent laundering. Hang towels straight on the line rather than by a corner. After using bath towels, spread them out on racks to dry instead of folding or bunching them. Never pile wet towels on the floor or in a laundry bag. Soggy towels can mildew overnight in hot weather.



Palm Wine

Canned Carp

A Minnesota manufacturer is about to can carp and market it, grated, tuna-style, under the name of "Lakefish."

Date-Bran Muffins, good as cake!

These delicious, NEW ALL-BRAN muffins made with chopped dates will have a big appeal for the "sweet toothers" in your family! They're so moist. And they're so tender—so good. That's because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is milled extra-fine for golden softness.

2 cups Kellogg's ALL-BRAN
1½ cups milk
1 egg
½ cup molasses
2 tablespoons melted fat
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped dates

Add KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN to molasses and milk and allow to soak for 15 minutes. Beat egg and add to first mixture. Add sifted dry ingredients and fruit. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) about 20 minutes. Makes 15 light, luscious muffins.

Good Nutrition, too!

ALL-BRAN is made from the VITAL OUTER LAYERS of finest wheat—contains a concentration of the protective food elements found in the whole grain. One-half cup provides over ½ your daily minimum need for iron. Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily!

MACEDONIA

Mrs. Jettie Smitherman and children, Alice Faye and Gerald of Randolph, visited Mr and Mrs F. C. Gibson and Mrs Bronzelle Langston the past week-end.

Mr and Mrs T. I. Ward and Mr and Mrs Jimmie Ward visited their parents Mr and Mrs Joe Ward last week.

Mr Brown Bolin, Mr Hoyt Freeman Mr Bice and Mr Royston Ingram were the Sunday guests of D. E. Moore.

Mr and Mrs Ermon Rasberry spent Sunday with Mr and Mrs W. A. Rasberry.

The singing here Saturday night in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Freddie Lowery was real good. Also the talk Rev. Lowery made. The following quartets sung: Rev. Lowery's Quartet; Macedonia Quartet and the Vickery Quartet. "If We Never Meet Again" was dedicated to Rev. and Mrs. Lowery and family.

Our hearts were sadened over the death of Mr. Davis Hodges. Our sympathy goes to the family.

Pvt. Robert Poole is home on furlough with his parents Mr and Mrs Doyle Poole and sister Mrs. B. P. Cooper.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Montgomery, Ala. — In a letter to the post commanders of all veterans' organizations in Alabama, State Service Commissioner C. C. Horton outlined briefly the scope of services to be rendered by the newly established State Department of Veterans Affairs. He requested that claims and inquiries of veterans be handled through the offices of county service commissioners rather than taken up direct with State headquarters, in the interest of greater efficiency.

In his letter to leaders of veterans' organizations, Commissioner Horton wrote:

"We are deeply concerned in all phases of rehabilitation work and in addition are rendering assistance in claims, pensions, compensation or other monetary benefits. We are also prepared to offer assistance to veterans in obtaining loans for homes, farms or business; employment; reemployment; readjustment allowances; education and training, and all other phases of the G.I. Bill of Rights.

"Your own county has or shortly will have a County Service Commissioner who will devote full time to the office, and will work under the guidance and direction of this department.

"I want to ask the fullest cooperation from the organization you command. It would be helpful to this department if you would refer veterans directly to the office of the County Service Commissioner and encourage others to do likewise.

"While we can handle and are handling claims sent to us directly from the veteran, it will be in the interest of a more efficient department if all claims or inquiries could come through the channel of the local County Service Commissioner, and thence to this department.

"The department has approved the establishment of a similar office in every county of the State, but unless a sufficient volume of work is developed in each county to justify retaining a full-time commissioner in each county, it will perhaps be necessary to consolidate some counties into districts. It is therefore in the best interest of the citizens of your county to encourage the fullest utilization of the office which we have established in that county, and we should be very grateful for the help of your organization in attaining that end."

A MESSAGE TO ALL BELIEVERS

Editor Chilton County News:

Will you please give me a small space in your paper to say a few words?

First, I want to say a few words about our W.M.U. Quarterly Meeting at Cane Creek October 3rd. We had a fine meeting. There were eight churches in the Chilton Association represented and we had our District Leader with us, also Miss Lucy Smith, a returned Missionary from China.

Mr. Jones from Cane Creek Church wanted us to write to both county papers and tell all of the churches in the Chilton Association what you are missing by not having a W.M.U. in your church and by not attending our Quarterly Meetings. So let me beg you, in the Name of Jesus, if you do not have a W.M.S. in your church, to please organize one at once, you will never regret it if you will.

Miss Smith spoke to us about China, about lost souls, the need in China and then she came back to the United States and told us how bad we need to know Christ; about the millions of lost people right here at home who need to know Jesus, our Savior and Lord. Five million each year are growing into paganism. We need some one to tell them of Jesus Who died for them and how to be saved.

O Believer in Christ, won't you help? I don't know any better way to help to carry the Gospel into all the world than to have a wide awaken W.M.U. in every church.

Miss Smith made us think about the Scripture which says: "For the time it came that Judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the Gospel of God?"

And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? Brothers and sisters in Christ, let us awake and do something for God. Go to our general association both days and then go to our district meeting at Thorsby November 2nd and get busy in the Kingdom work. Help to win lost people to Christ everywhere you go.

We have five Group Leaders, Vice-President and a President who will help you in any way we can to get a W.M.U. organized in your church. So if you will please call on us, I am hoping that the time will soon come that there will be a great awakening in our churches. So let's begin today, don't put it off, if you do it may be too late for some one.

Yours in the Lord's service,
MRS. C. L. WILKINS.

For an underarm coat lining repair, make shields of lining cloth. You can tack them in, and they'll do double duty. They will take the rub and will serve as patches to hold the frayed lining in place.

For the shallow drawer where you keep small kitchen equipment, use partions to divide the drawer into sections. Partions made of plywood are best, but heavy cardboard can be used.

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1945 — NUMBER 44

Veterans To Hold "Buddy Poppy" Day

The Chilton County Post 3193 has designated Nov. 10, 1945 as "Buddy Poppy" Day. This is the day before Armistice Day and there will be on the streets of Clanton and other towns of the county who will be authorized to sell these poppies. These ladies will be identified by wearing arm bands with "Wear A Buddy Poppy" on it. No other salesman other than the authorized one will be authorized to sell these poppies. They are authorized by the local Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

These poppies are made by disabled veterans of foreign wars and the proceeds from them are to be used solely for relief of disabled veterans. The public is urged to give as liberally as possible to this cause. Honor the dead by helping the living. Every man, woman and child in the reach of these salesmen and sales ladies should wear one of these poppies on that day. It is hoped that everyone will cooperate with these veterans in caring enough to share in this worthy cause. 442t

GRAMMAR SCHOOL P.-T. A.

The Grammar School P.-T. A. will meet November 6th. at 2:45 p. m. at the Grammar School.

HIGHLAND NEWS

Sunday was our regular preaching day. Brother Elbert Deason delivered two wonderful sermons. There was a large attendance. We welcome all of the visitors back.

We invite everyone to come to Sunday school every Sunday at 10 o'clock.

Rev. Paul Oden will preach at 11 o'clock Sunday morning and show pictures Sunday night. You are invited to attend both services.

We are glad that Sgt. Ed Langston is able to be out of the hospital and home on a 15-day furlough.

MRS. CECIL CARTER HONORED AT SHOWER

On Tuesday afternoon a lovely miscellaneous tea-shower was given at the home of Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway, honoring Mrs. Cecil Carter (nee Helen Cox). The rooms were lovely with bowls of chrysanthemums beautifully arranged throughout. In the dining room the lace-covered table was centered with a large bowl of mums and tall tapers of candles.

The bride was lovely in an aqua lace and net evening dress with a corsage of pink carnations.

Assisting Mrs Calloway with serving were Misses Esie White, Pearl Carter, Opal Acton and Hazel Taylor.

The Bride's Book was attended by Mrs. J. R. Cox.

Delicious block ice cream and individual cakes were served to more than forty guests during the afternoon.

MAE ANNIECE POLK WEDS CAPT. ALLAN BURNS COWART IN FORMAL CHURCH CEREMONY

Taking place at 6 p. m. last Wednesday at the Clanton Methodist Church was the marriage of Miss Mae Anniece Polk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Marcus Polk, of Clanton, and Capt. Allan Burns Cowart, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Claude Cowart of Montgomery.

Chaplain C. C. Collins, of Maxwell Field, officiated and the nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Percy Pitts, organist, and Mrs. Earle Ellis, soloist. Southern smilax banked the altar, where standards filled with white gladioli, tuberoses and chrysanthemums were used.

The bride, was given in marriage by her father, and wore white slipper satin dress made en train and featured a mousseline de soie sweetheart neckline. A tiara of tuberoses held the fingertip veil of illusion to the hair, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses, tuberoses and orchids.

Mrs. Jimmie P. Smith, sister of the bride, was the only attendant. Her dress was of pastel net, and her bouquet, tied with blue satin ribbon, was of pink rosebuds.

Lt. O. J. Cowart was best man for his brother.

Later in the evening, Capt. and Mrs. Cowart left for a wedding trip to the Gulf Coast, after which Capt. Cowart will report to Atlanta for temporary assignment.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cowart, Mrs. Claude Cowart, Mrs. O. J. Cowart, Montgomery; Mr. and Mrs. John Calvin Jones, Marion Smith, Jr, Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hendrick, Jr., Mrs. J. G. Hendrick, Greenville, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Vol Pearson, Sylacauga.

HOME COMING DAY AT PLEASANT GROVE

There will be an all day gathering, honoring our returned service men at Pleasant Grove Methodist Church 7 miles West of Clanton on the Clanton-Billingsley Road on Sunday, November 4, 1945. Several outstanding speakers will speak during the morning service. An opportunity will be given the service men to talk before preaching. Preaching will be at the regular hour. Lunch will be served at the noon hour.

The afternoon will be devoted to singing. Several outstanding singers have promised to come. We cordially invite everybody to come and take a part in this service, as we want our returning servicemen to have a good day.

ADULT CLASSES IN HOME ECONOMICS AND AGRICULTURE AT JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL

If you know how to cook,
And you know how to sew,
Then what else about the house
Do you think you'd like to know?
If you know to raise chickens,
And you know how to plow corn,
Then what about that garden
That you'd like your wife to plan.

You will have an opportunity to answer both questions on Monday evening November 5, at 6:00 at the Jemison School Auditorium. This will be the first meeting of the adult classes in Home Economics and Agriculture. Every person who is not in school is invited to attend these classes. Topics such as home lighting, care and repair of household and farm equipment, raising poultry and cattle, production, preparation, and preservation of the home food supply, care and repair of clothing and nutrition will be taken up.

The day and time for later meetings will be decided at the first meeting which will be Monday, November 5, at 6:00 in the Jemison School Auditorium.—J. C. Shields, Ag-Teacher. Hilda Smith, Home Ec-Teacher.

PILOTS ENTERTAIN KIWANIS

Last Tuesday evening the Pilot Club intertained the Clanton Kiwanis and a large number of friends in a program at the High School Lunch Room.

Miss Loula Dunn who has just returned from Europe, was introduced by D. P. Culp, as guest speaker. She gave a most interesting talk on her trip to England.

The program also included music by the High School Glee Club under the direction of Mrs. Raymond Mims.

NAVY REDUCES ENLISTMENT TIME TO TWO YEARS

Those interested in enlisting or reenlisting into the regular Navy may do so for two to six years, W. D. Paisley, Chief Petty Officer in charge of the Montgomery Navy Recruiting Station announced today. Men 17 years of age can now enlist for two or three years, but not longer than their 21st birthday. Men 18 to 30 inclusive can enlist for either two, three, four or six years at the option of the applicant.

Parents consent and applicant birth certificates are required for 17 year olds, whereas 18 to 30 years of age applicants only have to furnish their draft classification cards. Men that have been rejected by Selective Srvice are not eligible for enlistment, Chif Paisley stated.

Interested applicants should see the Navy Recruiter at the draft board each Monday morning in Clanton or visit the Navy Recruiting Station, 5th Floor Post Office Building, Montgomery, any week day.

MRS. EMMA DAVENPORT

Mrs. Emma Davenport, age 63, died in Mobile, Oct. 26th. Remains were shipped to Clanton, Oct., 27, for burial. Funeral services were held at Pate's Chapel Sunday at 11 a. m., conducted by Rev. Nix and Rev. Oden. Surviving are four sons: H. J. of Thorsby, Leyden of Jemison, Eric of Thorsby and Wilbur of Thorsby. One daughter, Mrs. Mary Ellen Baggett of Mobile. Seven grand children.

Pallbearers: Prat Crumpton, Hoyat Frum, Marvin Davenport, Philip Franklin Armon Rasberry and Chas. Childress.

Spigener Funeral Home in Charge.

CALFEE - RUSSELL

The marriage of Miss Alta Calfee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Calfee of Marbury, to Edward Russell, of Lubuk, Texas, took place at an afternoon ceremony on October 21, at the home of the brides parents with Rev. G. H. Bonnett officiating.

The bride wore a suit of royal blue and white with accessories of black. A graduate nurse of Anderson, S. C., she has been employed in several hospitals in the Carolinas', Georgia and Alabama.

Mr. Russell was recently discharged from the Army having served 3½ years, two years overseas.

Those attending the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Quinton White, Wetumpka, Mrs. Raymond Bonnett, Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCraw, Clanton, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Calfee, Birmingham, Mr and Mrs R. E. Calfee, Atmore, Mrs. Bill Peak, Marbury.

THORSBY FAIR POSTPONED

There will be no community Fair at Thorsby this year. The Fair Committee of the Civic Club decided that a longer period of time should be given so that adequate plans might be made on the part of the people taking part. The committee will recommend to the Civic Club that the Fair be held in October of next year. The Committee appreciates the response received from various leaders in the community and in the county.

COLLINS CHAPEL

There will be a Hallowe'en Party sponsored by the P.-T. A. at this place Friday night, Nov. 2nd. A short program will be sponsored by the school and after this the usual features of a wide-awake Hallowe'en Party. Everyone come. Plenty to eat and drink.

APPRECIATION

We wish to express our most sincere thanks to Rev. Grady Williams, Rev. Reubin Bearden, Elbert and Earlo Short for their kind assistance in helping Dewey Deason get his father some fire wood.

We pray that God will richly bless each one of you.—Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Deason and daughter Louila.

Vetenary Hospital Near Completion

Another step forward for Clanton and Chilton County is the very modern Animal Hospital that is nearing completion on Sixth Street. It is being constructed to care for large and small animals with various rooms to accomodate the animals, according to the ailment. Each room is equipped with heat controlled by a thermostat in norder to regulate temperature in each room There is hot and cold running water and sewerage sufficient to eliminate all waste. The hospital is screened upstairs and down. There will be a medicine room, fully equipped an operating room for small animals, a maternity ward, a distemper ward, a ward for dogs with contagious diseases and a miscellaneous ward.

The whole hospital is built so that it is fire proof and is equipped so that it will be kept immacuately clean.

Clanton hould be proud of this forward step taken by Drs. Parrish and hayes to give Chilton County on of the most modern vetenary hospitals in the state.

TEACHERS TO ATTEND STATE CONVENTION OF PROFESSIONAL SOCIETY

Six Chilton County teachers plan to attend the State Convention of Delta Kappa Gamma, National Society for women teachers, which meets in Montgomery next Saturday. The Whitley Hotel is headquarters for registration, meetings, and a luncheon.

Main speakers for the convention are Dr. Margaret Stroh, who is executive secretary of the national organization, and Dr. Houston Cole president of Jacksonville State Teachers College.

Local Alpha Beta Chapter delegates will include Misses Miriam Harvey and Charlotte Nichols of Jemison, Mrs. Ragnar Ekblad of Thorsby, Mrs. Curry Thomas, Mrs. Luther Little and Mrs. Edna G Kinney of Clanton

NEW AUTOMOBILES WILL NOT BE RATIONED

The government announces that the new automobiles soon to be on sale and War Production Agencies state that naturally some individuals will be inconvenienced by their inability to buy new cars immediately, however they ask that all dealers everywhere give special attention to unusual hardship cases.

The decision against rationing means that, except for any sales priority set up by dealers, new cars will be sold on a first-come-first-served basis. All records and certificates used in the car rationing program and now held by the trade or the public are valueless and may be destroyed, according to O. P. A.

DR. BARRON TO SPEAK HERE NOVEMBER 3RD.

Dr. George C. Barron, of Huntsville, is one of Alabama's oldest Gospel preachers and church organizers, and member of the Board of Directors of the "Old-Age Pension Association, Inc., will hold a pension rally in Clanton Saturday, November 3rd, at the courthouse at 10 o'clock.

Dr. Barron, will discuss the objectives of our National Pension Committee now before Congress and the relationship that Alabama State Committees of the Old-Age Pension Association has with the National Committee.

Nation Junior Red Cross Begins Enrollment

The National Junior Red Cross enrollment period begins Nov. 1st, and ends Nov. 15th. Last year every school in the County enrolled with the Red Cross. Each School has been receiving during the year magazines and other materials from the Red Cross.

For the first time in the history of the Red Cross used clothes are being collected. The Junior Red Cross is being asked to collect clothes for children from one to ten years of age. Any one having used clothes that can be used is asked to contact the school in his community. The Red Cross emphasizes the great need for clothes for the refugee children of the war torn countries

The Junior Red Cross sponsors from each school will meet November 15, at the county high school at 2:00 o'clock where reports from each school will be given and all clothes collected will be packed ready for shipment

COTTON GINNING REPORT

Census reports show that 7,084 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1945 prior to Oct. 18, as compared with 9,986 bales for the crop of 1944.—V. C McKee, Agent.

SARDIS

Health of this community is fine at present. Everyone feels greatly blessed by the wonderful sermons Bro Williams brought us during our Revival. Those who missed these services, missed a blessing.

We wish to thank everyone for their splendid cooperation at our dedication service Sunday, October 21st. Everyone enjoyed the day together and meeting old friends.

We are glad to see our boys coming back from the service of our Country with their discharges and we assure everyone that they will find a welcome here at Sardis to worship with us.

Our hearts were mad to rejoice by the large attendance and interest shown in the Sunday School last Sunday. Let us keep this interest up by attending every Sunday.

Our preaching days are the First and Third Sunday's and we invite everyone out to worship with us.

The tractor combine, disc harrow, the planter, grain drills and other machinery should be cleaned, greased and stored under roof, says J. B. Wilson, extension agricultural engineer, in advising that "these tools will be needed for a long time. It will pay to take proper care of this equipment."

Veterans' Administration Has Capable Leader

General Bradley Has Fatherly Interest in Veterans; Actions Show His Ability to Administer This Big Job

By BAUKHAGE
Commentator and News Analyst

WNU Service, 1616 Eye St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

I have just come back from a visit with the father of 15 million.

That isn't such a far-fetched figure to use in describing the tall, rangy Missourian, who is in charge of "the biggest business in the world," which is how they describe the Veterans' Administration in Washington.

To call Omar Nelson Bradley "father" of the service men and women isn't stretching it. Ernie Pyle once said: "If I could pick any two men in the world for my father except my own Dad, I would pick General Omar Bradley or General Ike Eisenhower. If I had a son, I would like him to go to Bradley or Ike for advice." Ernie was a pretty keen judge of human nature on the hoof. I thought of that when one of Bradley's co-workers in the Veterans' Administration, who is almost a decade older than the general, said "fatherly" was the way to describe the manner in which he was treated the first time they had a problem to straighten out with the boss.

And then I met the General.

I found a weather-beaten, wiry, long-legged soldier, whose eyes twinkled brighter than the four stars on his collar. Fatherly, yes—and I'll have a word about that a little later. But I found out something else. I found out why he ought to be able to run one of the hardest jobs in the government. And I'll admit, right off, it sounds almost too good to be true.

We had been talking about the details of the reorganization of the agency which is now going on and with which General Bradley is minutely familiar. Then I asked him what it was, if anything, in his military training and experience that he could use in his present position.

He said that he thought it was the same with all jobs such as this. And here is the theory on which he works:

"First, build your organization on functional lines. Second, get the right man to head up each function. Third, give him full responsibility to act on his own authority."

How, I inquired, does this fit in with your military experience, having had some of that branch of adventure myself—although running a platoon isn't running an army.

"It's a good deal like the army," he answered. "You have your staff. You have say 20 sections, each with a special function, working under your chief of staff. Sometimes, of course, you group some of the functions, but the organization is along functional lines."

And how, I asked, do you choose the men to head up these various activities? His answer came back without the slightest hesitation.

"I choose a man, first for his ability, second for his loyalty—and I count heavily on the loyalty. Get loyal men of ability and you've gone a long way toward solving your problems in any organization."

That sounded pretty good to me, but what about the present situation where, after all, there is always a Congress on Capitol Hill, a Congress with constituents who have votes and some of whom want jobs. I asked the General, what about politics? He didn't seem worried. He said that he hadn't had any trouble.

"I'm not a politician," he said. "I never intend to run for office." That was all he would say, but here is a story I picked up later at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

A certain Congressman got a hot letter from a constituent who had been fired from the Veterans' Administration. No doubt with due cause. He hot-footed it up to the General and spoke, as legislators often do to officials, with considerable vigor.

"I want the man re-hired at once," the Congressman demanded.

The General was polite but sorry. He stood by his decision.

"If you don't, I'll attack you on the floor."

"Go ahead," said Bradley, faintly recalling, I imagine, some of the attacks in Normandy.

"I'll block your bills," said the irate Congressman.

That was a horse of a different color.

"You will?" said the General. "All right, and if you do that, I'll go to the President with my resignation. He'll get that or find a means to stop you." (Period.)

We all knew about the General's war record—in Tunisia, on the Normandy beachhead, among the hedgerows, where he smashed a gateway at St. Lo which made Patton's lightning drive possible. But we didn't know much about the man. Most of us didn't know he was from Missouri and later some of us might have suspected that that was the reason why he was picked, although the President said it was because he wanted a World War II soldier to take care of the wants of World War II veterans. Now we have some other reasons for believing that the choice was predicated on wise advice and is going to prove itself a fortunate one.

On the horse-sense side, it is because Bradley has established a record as an administrator. He proved that in the army and had the acumen to see the chief fault in the veterans' organization and has set out to remedy it.

The trouble with the Veterans' Administration was that it grew so rapidly that it didn't have time to delegate authority. And there was another reason for this. It was built on what seemed a very sound theory. Let's take its services to the veteran. For instance, small hospitals were scattered all over the country, many in little communities where the veteran could get to them easily. But that didn't work out. It was hard to get expert medical men, good service and the latest equipment in the smaller communities and because the regional organization was spread so thin, it was necessary to have a strong hand in Washington. The result was that the grip of that hand was so tight that the whole system was cramped.

Bradley put his finger on the situation (with the help of well-chosen counsel) and reversed the former policy. Now it's "bring the veteran to the hospital." Bring him by rail or plane in an emergency, but bring him to a well-manned, well-equipped center whose size and importance will attract the best there is in medical skill, when he needs specialized care.

Hand in hand with this regional centralization of the medical facilities, the new organization has decentralized the authority. As soon as Bradley looked over the set-up he said:

"This is like having a 150 regiments under one man. In the army that would be unthinkable. We'd break it down into corps and divisions at least."

And so that is what was done.

But first he made a sharp cleavage between the medical organization and the rest of the activities. He created a new office, "Acting Surgeon General of the Veterans' Administration." And he appointed the best man he knew, Major General Paul Ramsey Hawley, who had been chief surgeon for the European theater and did an outstanding job.

And here I wonder if there wasn't one of those important unconscious childhood impressions which helped. Bradley's middle name, Nelson, is for a well-loved family physician. And Bradley's fatherliness is attested to in his interest in the physical welfare of his men. Again and again war correspondents mentioned the fact that he planned engagements so that his troops would suffer the fewest casualties possible. He has an instinctive understanding of the afflicted.

A lot of New Yorkers who had forgotten there were such things had to use stairs during the elevator men's strike. And this did more for the calves than if they'd taken the ceiling price off of veal.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I. Arthur, badly disfigured and not wanting to live, had the false report sent out. When he came to America he was employed by Spratt and soon became acquainted with the entire family. Elizabeth thought that she had met him some place, but his change and the name of Kessler made it impossible for her to place Kessler. He showed keen interest in Brian's collection of mounted insects, and promised to get and mount a bat for him. All the children became fond of him.

CHAPTER XV

Elizabeth turned to the desk and began writing an order for some tools needed for the Victory garden. She had finished this and several other notes when she heard Dick and Cherry come in. Going to her doorway, she watched them scamper up the stairs, enjoying the healthy windblown look of them. "Did you have a good time?" she asked.

"Oh yes," said Cherry. "The sea was just beautiful and we all had a hot dog and Dick ate two egg sandwiches besides."

"I don't know why you don't kill yourself," Elizabeth exclaimed.

Dick said he felt fine, which he evidently did. They said good night, and Elizabeth went downstairs. Spratt and Kessler should be finishing up their conference by now if they expected to go to work in the morning. They did appear in a short time, Spratt saying he didn't know why Kessler insisted on taking a taxi when he'd be glad to drive him home. Shaking his head with good-natured insistence, Kessler said,

"I'm sure Mrs. Herlong will agree with me. I can't drive, but it's one of my principles not to let my friends drive for me if I can help it. It may be convenient tonight, but there will be times when it isn't. Am I right, Mrs. Herlong?"

How sensible he was, Elizabeth thought, to accept his handicaps so frankly. "Yes," she answered, "though either of us would be glad to drive for you, in principle you're quite right."

"Thank you. And now, since I don't know where the telephone is, will you stop arguing and call a cab for me, Mr. Herlong?"

Spratt chuckled and complied. Kessler turned back to Elizabeth.

"Mrs. Herlong," he said earnestly, "I can't tell you how happy you have made me."

It seemed a great deal to say in return for a pleasant evening, but he sounded as though he meant it. "We were all glad to have you, Mr. Kessler," she answered. "You have quite won the hearts of the children."

"They are delightful, all three of them. What a joy it is to see a home like yours. Your mode of living is so clear that it leaves no room for doubts. No one who spent an hour here could go away asking, 'Are they happy? Are they free? Do they love each other?' The answers are obvious."

Elizabeth stood up to face him. "Are we really like that? Would you say it just to be pleasant?"

"Indeed not. You should be very proud of such an achievement."

"It hasn't been all mine." She glanced at Spratt, who was returning from the telephone. "I've had a great deal of cooperation."

Kessler's eyes followed hers, then came back to her. "Yes, that is easily seen. I congratulate you both."

Elizabeth and Spratt both smiled back at him gratefully. Elizabeth wondered at their talking like this to a stranger. But just now Kessler did not seem like a stranger. From being a newcomer among them, he had subtly changed into a friend who made her comfortable with the security of mutual understanding. Whatever memory he had stirred within her, it must be some old experience of peace. Since overhearing the children yesterday she had felt unsure of herself and of them, but now, hearing him speak, it was as though she had slipped back into some forgotten period not long ago when everything was safe and right. He was saying to them,

"Your children can afford to be cynical about themselves because they don't know how superior they are to most of their fellowmen. They believe in the obvious because they've found it good. When you see people deliberately clinging to a belief in abstractions they don't know anything about, you can be pretty sure they need to do it, because everything they do know about is unsatisfactory."

"How cheering you are!" exclaimed Spratt.

Elizabeth was looking up at Kessler. She asked,

"Mr. Kessler, have you and I ever met before?"

He started. For a moment he looked down. She looked down with him, and saw his hand tighten on his cane. She was to learn that he did this often, making an unconscious gesture toward his physical means of support when his spirit felt undefended.

But he hesitated only for a moment. His self-discipline had been learned in a long hard school. He answered,

"Before tonight? If we had, Mrs. Herlong, I can't believe I could have forgotten it. No, I am sure we have not."

He had looked up, and was regarding her steadily. Elizabeth did not know that letting his eyes meet hers just then was one of the hardest achievements he had ever accomplished in his life.

He did it so well that she nearly believed him. "Maybe I'm wrong, then," she said. "But tonight, as soon as you came in, it seemed to me that I had seen you somewhere and I couldn't think where it was."

"Maybe," suggested Spratt, sitting down and taking up the cigarette-box from the table, "you two saw each other at one of those big cocktail parties where you see hundreds of people and don't get to know any of them."

"Very likely," Kessler agreed readily, turning toward Spratt as though welcoming his suggestion.

"I have seen him before tonight."

"I've been forced against my will to attend several of those. Or possibly," he added, "you saw me at the studio. You come there now and then, don't you, Mrs. Herlong?" He glanced at her an instant as he spoke her name, and then became occupied with watching Spratt blow smoke-rings. "You might have caught sight of me talking from my bungalow to a projection room—chance glimpses like that sometimes tease our memories unmercifully."

"I suppose it must have been something of the sort," said Elizabeth. But she was still not satisfied. She continued, "But do you know, Mr. Kessler, when you came in I thought I knew you, and I thought you gave me a sort of startled look, as though you knew me too. You didn't?"

"If I stared at you rudely, I hope you will forgive me, Mrs. Herlong." He spoke lightly, almost humorously, as though it were a trifling matter. "I hope you will remember that I had been looking forward to meeting you, more eagerly than you realize. Attractive women have not been a great part of my life recently, or happy homes either. In the life of an exile they assume an importance that you do not understand, and I hope will never have to understand."

Elizabeth thought, "He protests too much," but Spratt was agreeing, "Yes, I should think they would. Is that your taxi pulling up, Kessler?"

"I believe it is," said Kessler. "Good night, and thank you both again."

Spratt walked out to the taxi with him. Elizabeth took a cigarette from the box on the table and stood looking down at the remains of the fire. When Spratt came in she turned around.

"Spratt, I don't care what that man says. I have seen him before tonight."

Spratt shrugged. "Wherever it was, you went there without me. I've been with Kessler every day for the past couple of weeks, and it never entered my head I'd seen him before. Probably a cocktail party, Elizabeth, or rambling about the studio."

"It wasn't. I tell you, I know him."

"All right, all right, you know him. He doesn't know you. He said so. I'm going to sleep on my feet. We talked and talked, and didn't get a thing done."

"You didn't? I'm sorry."

"His mind wasn't on his work. He kept bringing himself back from a great distance and repeating something he'd said fifteen minutes ago. I never saw him like that, he's usually sharp as a whip. Tired, I suppose—working all evening after working all day never is a good idea."

For several weeks Mr. Kessler did nothing about getting a bat for Brian, a reticence that both Spratt and Elizabeth admired. They had had experience of persons who wanted to move in on their lives and had started by trying to load the children with attentions. As they all liked Kessler she invited him to dinner again, and Spratt brought him in two or three times to have a drink on their way from the studio, so when Kessler had had time to be quite sure the Herlongs were accepting him as one of their friends, he brought up the subject of the bat again, to Brian's great delight. Two days later he telephoned that he had obtained the bat, and made a date for Brian to come to see him.

It was very kind of him, Elizabeth thought, and she was glad to see her children's increasing friendship with him. Kessler never patronized them, and he had a great talent for minding his own business. He rarely mentioned the war unless somebody else brought it up, and when he did refer to national affairs he refrained admirably from making adverse criticisms of the President and from telling them what he thought Americans ought to do about anything. In fact, he listened to them a good deal more than he talked, though none of the children realized it. "He's swell," they said of him.

Kessler said to Elizabeth, with a touch of wistfulness, "There is a great deal of you in all your children." Occasionally she wondered why he seemed more interested in finding her characteristics than Spratt's. He and Spratt were good friends and Spratt frequently said his work on the picture was proving invaluable. But when he came to their home it was primarily to see her, a fact that Spratt observed with a sort of proud amusement. He liked other men to admire his wife.

Brian and Peter Stern visited Kessler so often that Elizabeth was sometimes afraid they were going to be nuisances, though Kessler insisted they were not. Brian saw little Margaret and announced grudgingly that she was not bad, so Elizabeth suggested the party. The next time Brian went to see Kessler she went by to get acquainted with Margaret. Kessler's modest street-floor apartment was kept for him by a motherly woman who came in leading Margaret by the hand and telling her to speak nicely to the lady, which Margaret did. She was an intelligent-looking child, with big blue eyes and two fat pigtails, shyly polite; as Elizabeth rarely had any trouble getting along with children, their acquaintance began without difficulty. Margaret had learned the English language very well. Oh yes, she said, she went to school and she was learning to swim, and when asked if she would like to have a party with her school friends she nodded eagerly. When they had got that far in their conversation Kessler came in, having left Brian and Peter blissfully occupied with the bones of the bat. "I'm going to have a party!" Margaret announced to him.

Kessler looked down at her and smiled fondly. Again Elizabeth felt a flash of recognition. "I've seen him somewhere, I know I have," she thought. "Maybe he doesn't remember, but I'm sure of it." However, she did not mention the subject, for Margaret was talking, and by the time they had arranged the date of the party and other details she felt it was time to go.

On the way home she made up her mind that though he might think her foolish for persisting, the next time she happened to be alone with Mr. Kessler she was going to ask him to rack his brain and figure out where it was she had met him. There was no good reason why it should seem so important to her to remember, since it must have been a very casual meeting to have escaped her so thoroughly, but these occasional twinges of recollection teased her. Just for the instant when he had looked down at Margaret with a tender little smile, not only the expression of his face but his whole attitude had been so familiar that she had felt as though she was watching someone she had known for years. Then it was gone, and now she could not remember at all.

Since Margaret's party was going to strain their already overtaxed problem of household help, Spratt suggested that he bring Kessler over that evening, leaving him there while he drove Margaret and some of the other guests home, and then that he, Kessler, Elizabeth and the two older children go out for dinner. Elizabeth agreed gladly. She had managed to keep servants so far, but she wanted to give them no grounds for complaint. The party went very well, for Margaret was not shy among friends of her own age. They played in the pool, gobbled sherbet and cake without noticing that war exigencies had made it impossible to get ice cream, and were happily tired when they were finally coaxed back into their clothes and their parents began to arrive to take them home. Margaret came over to Elizabeth.

"Thank you for the party, Mrs. Herlong. We had a very good time."

Cloudless Skies

When Australia starts developing its infant film industry and decides to build a counterpart of Hollywood, it won't be able to set it up in central Australia. The weather's too dry there for film-making. Clouds needed for essential pictorial effects in the cattle-droving epic, "The Overlanders" were so rare that on one occasion they had to race 60 miles across a tableland to catch up with a herd of cattle and photograph them while the thin, fleeting clouds were still around.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A man's social position in Java is said to be determined by the number of spare tires he carries on his car. The more spares, the greater the owner's prestige among the natives.

Fliers can breathe easily at altitudes of 80,000 feet in a pressurized strato-suit developed by B. F. Goodrich.

If one wants to open a tire store in Amsterdam, Holland, he must pass an examination demonstrating his proficiency as a bookkeeper and an executive.

B. F. Goodrich made and sold the first tires containing synthetic rubber in June, 1940.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I, but who later appeared in Hollywood and secured a job from Spratt. Under the name of Kessler, and his disfigurements, he was not recognized by Elizabeth. He had Brian and Peter over and mounted a bat for them. They became regular visitors at his home. His ward, Margaret, was invited over for a swim and party. They were so surprised that she was not shy and fitted into the party and enjoyed herself. Elizabeth began to think that she had seen Arthur before, but could not place him.

CHAPTER XVI

Margaret was evidently glad to hear this. "Thank you, I'll tell him, Mrs. Herlong, may I pick one of those purple flowers on the fence?"

"Why of course. But the stems are strong—wait a minute and I'll get a pair of scissors." When she brought the scissors Margaret was waiting. "We can cut a lot of them if you like," Elizabeth offered. "There must be thousands of blossoms here on the fence."

"The yellow ones are the same sort of flower as the purple ones, aren't they?"

"Yes, and the deep orange ones too."

"The dark ones have yellow centers. That's pretty. What do you call them?"

"Lantana."

"Lantana," Margaret repeated. "I've seen a lot of them here, but I never knew the name. They bloom all the year round, don't they?" She gathered the bouquet into her hands. "You must like flowers," she suggested, looking around, "you have so many of them."

"I do like them. We used to have some beautiful beds there on the other side of the pool, before we put in the Victory garden. You enjoy flowers too, don't you?"

"Oh yes." Margaret nodded vigorously. "Do you like to put them under a microscope and see how they're made?"

"I don't think I've ever done that. Where do you have a microscope? At school?"

"No, at home. My father shows them to me. He knows all about flowers. We put lots of things under the microscope at home and we look at them. It's fun."

"Your father certainly knows a lot. But he was some sort of doctor in Germany, wasn't he?"

"Not exactly a doctor. He worked in the laboratory. But my real father was a doctor."

"Your real father? Isn't Mr. Kessler your father?"

"Oh no," said Margaret, her blue eyes serious across the lantana. "My real father died. And my mother too, and I was very sick. That was a long time ago when I was little. But I remember being very sick, and before I was well we left the hospital, late one night, and we rode a long way in an automobile in the dark, and I started to cry. I don't cry now, I'm too big, but I was little then and I cried, and he—you know, my father, Mr. Kessler—he said he would give me something to put me to sleep so I wouldn't be so tired, and he did and I went to sleep, and when I woke up he told me I was his little girl now. That's how he got to be my father."

Margaret had run ahead of her. As Elizabeth met them she was talking to Kessler.

"We had the best time! I can swim all the way across the pool, the short way, not the long way. And look, these are named lantana and they grow on the fence."

"I should have warned you," Kessler said to Elizabeth, "that Margaret would demand a sample of anything she saw that was unfamiliar to her. Either she was born inquisitive or I've infected her with my own curiosity."

"I like children who ask questions," Spratt commented. "How are they going to learn anything if they don't?"

"Margaret's been telling me," said Elizabeth, "how you encourage her with a microscope."

He laughed, and then said soberly, "I'm glad she enjoys that. In these days—or for that matter any days—we can't foretell what children are going to live through, but we can be pretty sure it won't all be pleasant. But nobody is utterly desolate if he's learned to appreciate the world around him."

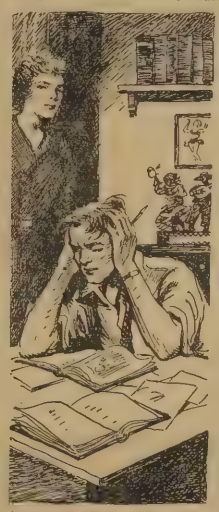
The garden had grown chilly. Spratt gathered up Margaret and several others whom he had offered to take home, and Kessler said he would occupy himself with a book while Elizabeth changed for dinner. She went through the den, where Dick sat by a table agonizing over his lessons. Dick was evidently in the throes of struggle. His papers strewn on the floor and table, he sat holding his head between his fists, his hair wildly rumpled and his forehead wrinkled with anguish. Elizabeth paused at the door.

"What's the trouble, Dick?"

He groaned without looking up. "Mother, did you ever get through physics?"

"Not very gloriously, and I'm afraid I've forgotten most of it."

"I liked physics in high school." With an effort Dick untangled his hands from his hair. "I still like it, but every now and then you get a problem that simply will not make sense—" He shook his head, looking at her through a fog.



"I wish I could help you!" Elizabeth exclaimed.

"Oh, I'll get it. It's always the same. You can't do the problem—you try everything and you can't make it, you go nuts, and then you see some tiny little detail you've already seen a thousand times but you never noticed it, and there it is, click-click like a safe opening, and the answer is so simple you want to kick yourself around the block for not having seen it in the first place." He laughed at himself. "Then when you go to school the next day you say, 'That third problem was a humdinger, wasn't it?' and the dumbest guy in the class says, 'Why, that's the only one of the whole bunch I could work.'"

Elizabeth laughed too. "I remember it used to be like that with Latin translations. Why don't you stop till after dinner? We're going to Romanoff's."

Dick gave his head a violent shake as though to stir up his brain. "Think I will. Evening paper come? I'll read the funnies."

"It should be here. I'll see." She went out to the front lawn, Dick following her. In front of the house

"Mother, did you ever get through physics?"

Spratt and Kessler were shepherding the little girls into the car. Dick picked up the Hollywood Citizen-News from the grass and moodily began to open it. Black warheadlines went across the front page. Elizabeth glanced around, thinking how little Beverly Hills had the look of being in a country at war. The dancing flowers, the damp odor of grass, the noise of carpenters repairing the house across the street, all seemed so ordinary. Margaret, about to get into the car, paused and looked up at Kessler.

"Why do you see those men hit with the hammers before you hear them?"

He smiled at her. "We always see things before we hear them, because the noise comes to us by sound-waves and the sight by light-waves, and the light-waves get to us faster."

Margaret frowned, puzzled.

"I'll explain it better when I get home after dinner, if you're still awake—" Kessler had begun to say, when Dick shouted, "Holy Jerusalem!"

He had shoved the paper untidily under his arm and was laughing at their astonished stares.

"It's that physics problem. It's about sound-waves and I was figuring with the speed of light. Oh, such a dope, such a dope—thank you, Margaret!" He was off into the house.

"Are you tired?" Kessler asked. "Wouldn't you like to rest for a minute before going up to dress?"

"I'm not really tired, just a bit breathless. But it might be pleasant to sit down for a minute or two. What shall we do?"

"It's about time for a news broadcast."

"I'm losing courage to listen to the radio," Elizabeth confessed. "All it brings is news of more calamities."

For an instant Kessler did not reply. She had said nothing to him about her dread of Dick's going away, but she saw him give a glance toward the house and suspected that he had guessed it. Leaning heavily on his cane, he turned back to her, saying, "Mrs. Herlong, will you forgive me if I tell you something?"

"Certainly." Then, as she saw the gentle gravity of his eyes, she added, "If it's a rebuke, go ahead. I deserve it."

"Yes," answered Kessler, "you do." He smiled, and went on, "Mrs. Herlong, talking about one's personal troubles is unforgivable unless one has learned something from them that is worth passing on. You and your family are so kind about ignoring my handicaps that I feel almost unkind to refer to them. But I have learned something from them."

"Yes, go on," she said earnestly. "I know you've had to face life in a way that I haven't. Tell me."

"It's simply this," said Kessler. "There is a rigorous joy in facing a battle even when you have very little chance of winning it. The worst experience on earth isn't tragedy that comes from outside. That may be dreadful, and it frequently is, but it's almost pleasant compared with the experience of being ashamed of yourself."

Elizabeth lowered her eyes. They showed her his thick right hand grasping the cane, and she looked up again. "You can tell me that better than anyone else I know," she said in a low voice, "because—well, you've never said anything to me about your past life, and I'm not asking you, but I know you aren't referring only to physical distress. Such a disaster as yours doesn't just change your bodily powers, but everything else. You had to face spiritual tragedy as well, didn't you?"

"Yes, I did."

"And you did face it," she went on. "Instead of becoming resentful and bitter, you became so wise and kind and understanding that everyone who sees you feels the presence of a great man. You have suffered terribly, but you have no reason to be ashamed of yourself."

"Neither have you, Mrs. Herlong."

"How do you know?"

"You haven't told me anything about your past life either," he returned smiling. "But as soon as I came into your home the first time, I knew I was meeting a mature and courageous woman. It's impossible for anyone to live as long as you have—"

"Forty-four years," she said with a little laugh. "I'm not sensitive about the passage of time."

"Very well, it's impossible for anyone to live forty-four years without experiencing a good many unpleasant events, things you either have to face or run away from. When you meet a woman whose husband adores her, whose children are intelligent and uninhibited, whose domestic affairs run like invisible clockwork, and who goes about with a serenity suggesting that all these things just happened that way—you can be sure that she achieved it by meeting each crisis as it came. Some people's lives are like wastebaskets, so cluttered up that nobody can find anything there but trash that should have been disposed of long ago."

"I have tried to keep things clear," she answered simply. "I can't say I've always been successful. But looking back, I can say I've tried."

"When I left your home that first evening, I told you that being there had made me very happy. Perhaps you thought I was too intense in what I said. But I had seen so much clutter, so much wretchedness that could have been avoided, that it did make me happy to see so much unobtrusive richness of living. I had hoped I should find you like that."

"You had hoped? Why did you care what you'd find?"

He bit his lip as though he had said too much. But he answered, "Was it too much to hope for? I had left a continent of torture and despair, for one thing; for another, I liked and admired your husband, and he had shown me your photographs. You have a good life, Mrs. Herlong, because you have made it a good life. Don't lose it now by being afraid."

"How can I help being afraid?" she exclaimed. "Yes, I have a good life. I've said so myself a thousand times. And I have worked for it. As you said, there are plenty of occasions in anybody's experience when he's tempted to sit down and quit trying. But when you do achieve a good life, when you feel that now at last you have what you want and can enjoy having it, and then when you see it about to be blown to pieces by circumstances you aren't responsible for and can't control—how can you help being afraid? I'm sick with fear. I look over it all—Spratt bothering about his pictures, Brian with his bats and bugs, Cherry excited about a party dress, Dick struggling with his lessons, and I think, 'How much longer?' I love them so, I've been so proud to know I was important to them—but now!" She stopped. "Why on earth am I talking to you like this? It's the first time I've been so frank about it to anybody."

"You couldn't talk to anybody who'd be more interested," Kessler answered. "It's good now and then to confess our fears. Of course you're frightened. You see the war coming closer, you don't know what it may bring—"

"I do know," she interrupted sharply. "I don't live in a tower looking down on two conflicting ideologies! Oh, it may be a noble struggle, fought for a better world, but I don't see it that way and I can't. I don't see it in terms of anything but my son."

Small Business Aid

The small business division of the U. S. Department of Commerce is taking particular interest in veterans who are returning from the wars with the intention of entering the small business field.

The small business division has given the subject considerable time and thought and now has available for veterans a booklet, "Veterans and Small Business" which answers numerous questions in the minds of the returning soldier.

The booklet covers many facts of the highly competitive small business field and covers subjects such as, "Postwar Plans for GIs"; "Industry's Job to Place Servicemen"; "The GI Bill and Small Business"; "What About These Veterans' Loans?"; "Factors in a GI's Business Success"; "Getting Started in Your Business"; "How Long Can I Stay in Business?"; "Survival Chances of Retail Stores"; "Risk-taking in a Postwar World"; "Training Program for Small Business"; "Marketing Facts On a County Basis"; "Small Town a Most Important Market," and seven other factors or subjects.

These chapters were written by experts and information contained will be invaluable to the veteran contemplating entering the small business field.

These booklets are available to veterans by writing to the "Small Business Division" of the United States Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Questions and Answers

Q. Can a mother who is all alone and in poor health, have a son released from the Army if he has been in since Jan. 25, 1943, and in the South Pacific since June 19, 1943, and has never had a furlough? Mrs. D. W., Greenwood, Wis.

A. The War Department says that the fact the mother is all alone and in poor health would not necessarily bring about the son's release. If the case can be considered a "hardship case" release might be given, but each case must be decided upon its merits and be recommended by the commanding officer. If your son, however, has been in the army since the dates you give, he possibly has enough points for his discharge now, or at least in the very near future. Without points for battle stars or decorations, which count five each, he has approximately 68 points. He is eligible for application for discharge now at 70 points and the number is fixed at 60 points November 1.

Q. My daughter wishes to know whether she will be entitled to services of a doctor and hospitalization benefits when her new baby arrives, if her husband who is now in the navy is discharged under the point system before the baby arrives?—Mrs. W. A. L., Mill Iron, Mont.

A. The Navy Department says that if she is now receiving navy medical care to which she is entitled, the navy will do everything it can to help her provided she does not move from the area where she is under treatment and the pregnacy is in the later stages. Suggest she contact the nearest navy hospital or dispensary for specific information.

Q. Is there a course of study in fire fighting listed in the educational program for veterans and are there any books available on this subject? —G. E. D., Philadelphia.

A. Many schools approved by State Boards of Education have instructions in fire fighting. For instance, the University of Maryland, College Park, Md., and Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., have such a course. It may be possible that the University of Pennsylvania has such a course. Suggest that you write one of these schools.

Q. Will a soldier who has been in service for two years and 11 months in the States and 13 months overseas receive mustering-out pay if he is given a dependency discharge?—Wife, Trelour, Mo.

A. The War Department says that if his dependency discharge is honorable he is entitled to mustering-out pay.

Q. Please advise if an ex-serviceman can obtain a loan to join up in an open shop in one or more unions?—J. C., Coffeeville, Miss.

A. Can find no regulation which provides for a loan to join a union.

Honor Caesar

The month of July was named after Julius Caesar. Caesar was born during the Roman calendar period, "Quintilis," changed to "Julius" the year after Caesar's death and since perverted to "July."

Biological Desert

A virgin forest has been called a biological desert because it does not produce enough feed to support animal life in abundance.

Operators Advised to Use DDT Killer With Care

No one can be too careful in applying DDT, the insect-killing chemical which is attracting so much attention. When the material is used in barns, poultry houses, and similar places, all feed should be removed so that it will not become contaminated. He reminds that all drinking cups and salt licks should be covered while the DDT is being applied. The spray must be allowed to dry thoroughly before animals are permitted to return to the premises.

Operators applying DDT spray or dust are urged to avoid getting any more of the material on themselves than is absolutely necessary and the same precaution applies to inhaling the material. Operators should be especially careful with DDT and oil mixtures because the oil penetrates the skin of humans much more readily than water and, therefore, is much more dangerous to handle.

General use of DDT is not advised because there still is considerable research work to be done on insects and crops. It has been used safely as a spray for fly, bedbug, louse and roach control in dairy barns and poultry houses, as a spray in combination with bordeaux mixture for the control of flea beetles and leafhoppers on potatoes, and as a spray or dust under certain conditions for various household insects.

Fattening Lambs

One help in putting weight on lambs is to keep sheep and lambs free from parasites, especially nodular worms and stomach worms. Infestation with parasites holds back growth and increases feed costs. Serious losses from parasites can be prevented by providing clean pacture, by the use of phenothiazine, and by taking other precautions.

Iron Across Length

When ironing, press with the length rather than across the width of fabric wherever possible. But if a skirt, slip or nightgown is cut on the bias, then iron on a slant, along the grain or straight of the material. This will prevent the stretching and sagging which makes hems uneven.

Launder Bath Towels

New bath towels should be laundered before they are used to make them absorbent.

Hands Kept Dry

A small bag filled with cornstarch when dusted on the palm of the hand will absorb perspiration and prevent soiling when sewing on white or light-colored fabrics.

Cleaning Diamonds

To clean diamond rings, cover them with wood alcohol and let stand for five minutes. Remove and polish with white tissue paper.

Where they are and How they are

Let's begin our column this week by mentioning the names of boys we know that have come home. Maybe we've mentioned them before but we are so happy to have these boys home again to stay, that we don't think they'll mind.

They include "Shorty" Headley "Bottle" Alred, Frank Cox, J. P. Rasberry, Cecil Carter, Joe E. Gowan, James McKey, Chester Messer of Verbena, Howard Baker, Louis "Pig" Headley, Raymond Mims, Richard Palmer, Billy Moates, Oliver Headley and many, many more that we do not know of and we hope all the others will be home real soon. And oh yeah, Hershel Littlefield is home too.

These boys that are home are ready to resume their places in our community as good citizens. Everything and everybody has changed while they were away, so let's do our part in helping them get acquanted again.

We had a very interesting letter from Wash Jones this past week. He is in Manila and is ready and anxious to come home. He writes that they have enough land and sea power in Manila to move 500,000 troops a month but only a mere trifle are on their way home. Wash says that in addition there are 1000 B-29's over there and he estimates that 80 men could be flown in each plane and making three round trips a month they could bring 90,000 men home each month. He says they have other planes over there too, and lots of them, namely: bombers, transports, cargo and carriers. What Wash doesn't understand is, why they can't get started home now that they have finished their job over there. He says not one of the boys would mind any discomfort if they could only get started home.

He asks us to see what we can do about it. Drop him a line, maybe it will make him feel better. His address is: Pfc. Robert (Wash) Jones, 3912th Sig. Base Depot Co. A.P.O. care Postmaster, San Francisco, Cal.

James H. Kincaid, Sr., of Thorsby, was one of sixty-five new officers who received their gold bars after completing a seventeen week course of training at the Armoured School in Fort Knox, Ky., Following advanced training the officers will be assigned to armoured or tank destroyer units as platoon leaders.

Charles E. Mims, of Clanton, Route 2, came back to the states on his ship the U. S. S. Langley, in time to take part in the observance of Navy Day. Charles, along with his shipmates had helped the Langley to amass a total of eleven battle stars for major engagements in the Pacific.

S-1C James Willie Easterling, of South Clanton, was one of the boys of an amphibious task force that put American occupation troops ashore at Wakayama, Honshu, Japan, following the surrender of Japan.

From Keesler Field in Miss., we learn that Otis T. Lecroy, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Lecroy and husband of Louise Lecroy, of Maplesville, has begun his basic military training at the A.A.F. Training Command's Basic Training Center, there. Upon completion of this training he will be assigned to duty or sent to one of the Training Commands technical schools.

We received a delayed release from the Battleship U.S.S. Tennessee, that our own Griel Popwell took part in the climax of his ship's role in the war with Japan, a role that included every major operation in the Pacific, when occupation forces were landed from "The Rebel" at Wakayama, Japan.

James Duke Heflin is home on furlough from his post in Datona Beach Florida. He will visit with friends and relatives while home.

Cpl. Guy Alred of Wright Field, is spending a few days with relatives in Clanton and Mitchell Dam.

From Calcutta, India, comes a release that Henry E. Wilkins,, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Wilkins, of Ver-

PLENTY OF SHOTGUN SHELLS ON HAND THIS FALL

Duck, pheasant and other small game hunters will have plenty of 12-guage shotgun shells on hand this fall for their favorite sport, according to an announcement just issued in Washington by the Office of Surplus Property, Department of Commerce.

Over forty million rounds of twelve-gauge shells, frozen for military use since the start of the war, will be sold this month to dealers throughout the eleven United State Regional Offices of the Office of Surplus Property.

The sale will begin October 13, 1945.

Supplies of shotgun shells for civilian use have been extremely short and the return of this ammunition to dealers shelves in time for the hunting seasons will be welcomed by sportsmen the country over. The shells will also be useful to farmers and ranchers for crop and livestock protection.

The ammunition being sold is of the standard commercial type used by hunters and includes both "birdshot" and "buckshot."

The major quantity of the shells are loaded with "birdshot" or one and 1-8 ounce No. 8 chilled shot, with a standard powder load of three drams. The remainder are loaded with 00 "buckshot"—9 pellets longrange powder load of three 3-4 drams.

Wholesaler — $25.93 per 1,000 shells.

Chain and mail order house — $28.52 per 1,000 shells.

Retailer — 32.41 per 1,000 shells.

OPA retail ceiling $42.80 per 1,000 shells or $1.07 per box of 25 shells.

Wholesaler — $33.42 per 1,000 shells.

Chain and mail order house — $36.76 per 1,000 shells.

Retailer — $41.78 per 1,000 shells.

OPA retail ceiling $55.20 per 1,000 shells or $1.38 per box of 25 shells.

To effect equitable distribution minimum and maximum quantities which may be purchased have been established.

Dealers can obtain full information on details of this offering by contacting the Office of Surplus Property, 105 Pryor Street, N. E., Atlanta, Ga. This is the regional office serving the states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

When you hang out your freshly laundered garments, smooth everything as much as possible. It will help in ironing.

Starved Allied Soldiers Freed

The physical condition of these two members of the British Royal artillery, is representative of thousands of Allied soldiers freed from Japanese prison camps by American troops. They are shown relaxing on the hanger deck of the USS Black Island, one of the liberation ships that has been set aside to see that former prisers are rushed home.

Dickie Gives Toots a Pedicure

"Dickie," eight-months-old pet parakeet, perches atop her canine playmate, "Toots," six-months-old puppy, as they frolic on the rug in the home of their owner in Detroit. "Dickie" seems to be giving "Toots" a pedicure by the simple expedient of pecking at "Toots'" claw. This is a daily job which the parakeet has taken over for his pal.

Went Into Business for Himself

Nicholas Kocheck, was given a gun and went into business for himself. He was given credit for knocking out more tanks and killing more Germans than many divisions, while he was AWOL and serving with the French underground. He is shown wearing the French beret. He said he deserted army as he did not like to peel potatoes. Court martial cleared him of charge.

Wake Hero Father And Proud Son

Lt. Col. James P. S. Devereux, hero of Wake Island, returned to Washington, D. C., and is shown with his eleven-year-old son, "Paddy" James Patrick, as they left the station. It was their first meeting in four years, during which time Colonel Devereux, a prisoner of the Japs was unable to send or receive word to his proud son.

Kachin Hero Home

Capt. Charles Coussoule, leader of the famed Kachin rangers, which snaked through swampy Burma jungles to beat the Japs at their own game, is shown upon his arrival in New York City.

Musician Hath Farm

Paul Whiteman, insert, and entrance to the farm of the erstwhile "King of Jazz." Whiteman has made a paying proposition out of his farm, which he has stocked with purebred cattle, horses and poultry. He does much of his own work.

Enroute To Husbands

Some of the hundred and twenty brides and twenty brides-to-be of members of Royal Australian Air Forces are shown as they arrived in Seattle enroute to San Francisco. The delegation will embark for Australia to join their husbands and fiances whom they met in Canada.

ATOMIC BOMB CREATES SUPER-SPY SYSTEM NEED

WASHINGTON—Major General Wild Bill Donovan bowed out of the first real American intelligence service (OSS) with a somewhat cool-sounding response from President Truman to his idea of developing his line of effort further for peace. Mr. Truman cut up OSS, sending part to the War Department, but most to State. The Donovan notion of hiring someone like Sumner Welles, the ex-diplomat, to keep intimate and independent watch on the inner international world, was left hanging in air—somewhat foggy air.

General Donovan has never been a glamour boy. He is a rather crusty soldier-lawyer. Those who know what he did in the confidential special agent part of the war say his work in the Balkans particularly was excellent and could have been done by no one else as well. Into his organization, however, crept a number of persons who did not fit the best nature of the endeavor and gave it distaste with Congress. I think this fairly sums up OSS. It did great work, but was not popular. (I can never learn what accomplishes popularity in this era when a bank robber can possibly attain it by merely being for the 30-hour week or some such social innovation.)

In the wake of this peculiar condition, congressmen are arising to shout "There will be no American Gestapo," and I assume also they mean no OGPU or NKDV. Indeed there will not. But there is a grave danger that the first vital necessity for a secure postwar world will be ignored and shunted aside by muddleheaded political thinking about it.

If you thought Pearl Harbor a surprise and blitz warfare sudden as lightning, you are already old-fashioned and obsolete in your thinking. The next war will start like a flash—the brilliant blinding flash of the atomic bomb. If our defenses were archaic last time, they will be pitiful next time unless our officials know everything going on in this world. Advance knowledge is more essential to defense in a future world than a superior air force, an army or fleet.

Not the Fascists or the Communist nations, but the British, a democratic nation, have the best world intelligence. It was built up through generations. Their survival depended upon it, because their little islands had absolutely nothing to justify their superior position in the world, except an awareness of the facts of national existences and a superior shrewdness in using them. That is what we need—only a better one.

It cannot be an army enterprise because the army covers only one phase of world facts influencing peace and security. It cannot be navy, marine corps, or merely all three together, because diplomacy must be founded upon such information. (The British even move commercially from such realistic ground news.) It cannot be split, or you will have each department performing again the coordination they showed about Pearl Harbor—namely none.

INDEPENDENT BUREAU NEEDED

Consequently it must be an independent bureau covering at least these government elements and probably more (Justice Department and FBI.) Furthermore, the head must be a man whose character and personality guarantee full pursuit of the business to be done, and a complete disavowal of any political implications in the work. He must not be a leftist or right or even a professional Democrat or Republican. That service must lean over backwards to keep itself politically inviolable, and beyond even the faintest suspicion of political use. (The British know how to do it.)

The only limit on its appropriations should be our need of information. If we need the information—get it. If the spenders want to let Treasury money loose, here is one place where they could get something out of it. Some interested parties wish to limit the scope of activity to foreign information. It should be limited only by need. If it is found counterespionage in this country it requires action, no political softpeddaling considerations should be allowed to stand in the way of getting it.

THE CHURCH AS A FELLOWSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12:3-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be kindly affectioned one to another . . . in honor preferring one another.—Romans 12:10.

The greatest and most important institution in the world is the Church. The home, which we have been studying in recent weeks, is the primary unit of society, but its relationships are primarily of a personal nature. In the church there is an organized fellowship within a God-made institution, the living organism through which the Lord brings such blessing to the world—the Church.

Here, in God's house, among God's people, the believer finds strength and joy. The Lord's people are:

I. Different Yet United (vv. 3-8).

God is not interested in uniformity, but He does want unity. In the Church are all types of gifts and personalities, each one useful to God. He does not want them all reduced to that drab uniformity which characterizes so many man-made products.

Prophecy, ministry, teaching, giving, ruling — yes, all the various works to which God calls men should be done diligently for His glory. No man is to think of himself as more or less useful to God. His work is different, but it is God's work, and when all serve as they should there is unity and efficiency in the accomplishing of His blessed purpose.

The unity of believers in Christ (v. 5) is something which needs emphasis in our day. The forces of Protestantism are so divided as to be largely ineffective in many important fields.

Not only are they divided but there are almost endless divisions within denominations — yes, and even in local churches. Sometimes there are issues which cannot be met except by separation, but there are also many unnecessary divisions, dishonoring to God and weakening to the Church.

Let's remember we can be different (God wants us to be!) but we can still be united! God wants that, too!

II. Active Yet Kind (vv. 9-11).

God puts no premium on laziness or indifference. We are not to be "slothful," but "fervent" in spirit. Sometimes one feels that the Church has gone sound asleep. It is alive but inactive. It professes to have a zeal for God, but if there is any fervency of spirit, in most places it must be well hidden. But that is not possible, is it?

How much we need a stirring revival in the Church to bring the people of God into active service for Him. If your church as a whole does not respond to the Lord's Word, why do you not as an individual ask God to rekindle His fire in your heart?

There is to be a humility (v. 10), a fine cleanness of thought and life (v. 9), an unfeigned love for the brethren (v. 9), along with all the fervency of spirit and zeal for service.

There is much talk of uniting Christendom and no little danger of compromise for the sake of an outward unity. Such schemes are destined to failure, but unity in Christ, which recognizes Him as the divine Head of the Church, that we do desperately need and should seek for His glory, for the good of the Church and for the blessing of a world lost in sin and strife.

III. Troubled Yet Peaceful (vv. 12-18).

The Church of Christ is in the world to witness for and to serve Him. Hence, it must face all the persecutions and trials which an unbelieving world will bring upon it. Christians are not exempt from the troubles and sorrows common to all mankind.

Therein we find one of the great opportunities for effective witness, for as the Christian and the Church rightly meet such difficulties, they testify to the grace of God which can give peace in one's heart in the midst of turmoil and distress.

Read the verses. Persecuted, but not embittered thereby; weeping but also rejoicing; meeting evil with good and crookedness with honesty; meeting pride with humility and division with unity; yes, living at peace (as far as it is possible) in a belligerent world.

There is something essentially fine and noble and inspiring about the Christian Church wherever and whenever it lives up to the Lord's purpose for it and its members. There is something dismal and discouraging about the Church when it fails the Lord and His mighty cause.

Some feel that the Church is in just such a state of failure and impotence in our day. If it is true of your church, why not pray and work for a revival which will sweep all the deadness out and bring in a new refreshing breath of power from the very throne of God? Do it now!

Book Appreciation

Teach children to wash hands thoroughly with soap and water before using school or library books. This will develop habits of cleanness and appreciation for books at the same time.

Air Conditioned Trolleys

A fleet of new street cars in Atlanta, Ga., has been equipped with refrigerating units. This will be the first time that passengers can enjoy the benefits of air conditioning.

Bike Passenger

You invite disaster when you carry another person on your bike.

Stubborn Stopper

To remove an obstinate cork, dip a piece of cloth in boiling water and wrap around neck of bottle. The heat expands the glass and the stopper comes out easily.

MRS. JACK TRACY IS HAPPY NOW

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Mrs. Jack Tracy, 1632 Martin Mill Pike recently wrote this letter to Faultless Starch Company:

"I am writing you just a line to express my happiness after starting to use Faultless Starch. It makes my wash turn out lots better on ironing days. I am very grateful for this wonderful starch. I will use no other starch as long as I can get Faultless Starch."

Have you ever used Faultless Starch? It is a different kind of laundry starch. And as Mrs. Tracy says, "It makes my wash turn out lots better on ironing days. I am very grateful for this wonderful starch." Special ingredients mixed into Faultless Starch make this wonderful difference.

Save Starch-Cooking Time

One big difference in Faultless Starch is that you don't have to cook it to make it turn clear. Just cream Faultless Starch with a little cool water. Then add boiling water while stirring. That's all. This advantage alone can save five to fifteen minutes of hot, tiresome work each busy washday.

MAKES IRONING EASY

Another big difference in Faultless Starch is that it makes ironing smooth, easy, beautiful. Here again special ironing-aid ingredients do the "work" for you—saving you the pulling and pushing that comes with a "sticky" iron. Your iron goes smoothly along—makes ironing a joy, not a job.

You want your wash to look clean, fresh and beautifully ironed. So let Faultless Starch help you. You deserve the advantages of Faultless Starch. Start using Faultless Starch now — and you will probably say, as Mrs. Tracy says, "I will use no other starch as long as I can get Faultless Starch." So ask your grocer today for Faultless Starch.—Adv.

DON'T FEEL WELL?

It may be due to unelliminated waste matter in your system

Unelliminated waste matter may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless relieved when necessary, can finally impair the health. This condition often causes loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired rundown feeling, mental depression, headaches, dizziness, anemia, gas formation, acid indigestion and skin eruptions.

No matter how many other medicines you have tried for the relief of these conditions due to unelliminated waste matter in your system, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you excellent results or your money back. Try a bottle of B-L PREPARATION and see if you don't feel like a new person. Caution: Use only as directed.

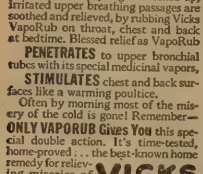
Squeezing Grapefruit



You can squeeze large grapefruit on an ordinary orange juice reamer if you cut the fruit in half lengthwise (rather than crosswise), halve again, squeeze each quarter on the reamer, pressing cut side against point of juicer. Smaller grapefruit can be cut in halves like oranges, juiced on regular reamer.

Butter Substitutes

Adding salt and sugar to oleo or other butter substitutes makes it more palatable.

LABOR CRISIS TESTS TRUMAN

The fast-growing labor crisis presents Harry S. Truman with the first big problem he has faced on a hitherto well-charted Roosevelt sea. Up until now, most policies, especially those dealing with war and peace, had been pretty well established by Truman's predecessor. In settling the current labor turmoil, however, Harry is completely on his own.

For some time, labor advice from White House insiders has differed. Truman's labor department has argued that labor troubles after wars were inevitable, that both Wilson and Harding had to call out U. S. troops after the last war, that labor has been in a strait jacket since Pearl Harbor, is bound to feel its wild oats now; finally that big business was equally in a straight jacket and equally willing to row with labor especially if it could get labor in wrong with the public . . . advice to Truman: Don't stick your neck out; let both sides battle it out for a while.

Opposite advice came from another wing of the White House . . . while admitting that all the above is true, other advisers urged that both labor and industry needed guidance. For four years both labor and industry have had the Little-Steel formula as their guide. They were supposed not to go above this . . . Now labor finds itself losing its overtime wages, with take-home pay dropping way below lush war days, yet with the cost of living still high. Therefore, Truman was urged to step forward and set a national policy, suggest a wage increase which would partly offset the drop in take-home pay . . . It is this group of advisers which Truman finally has decided to follow.

FARMERS VS. LABOR UNIONS

Last week Florida citrus growers came to Washington, worried sick over the future market for grapefruit and oranges. They feared a return of the old days when their fruit was dumped into Florida rivers . . . The army has just cancelled orders for several million cases of orange juice. Simultaneously it has turned back on the civilian market several million more surplus cases. This backlog is bound to have a depressing effect on citrus fruit . . . Citrus fruit growers know that with wages dropping, the civilian demand for oranges and grapefruit will also nose-dive. When workmen get paid less, first thing they quit buying is fruit . . . Cattlemen also figure on a drop in prices. Not only will the army buy less, but workmen eat less meat, when wages are cut . . . Same is true of many other farm commodities, including dairy products . . . Never before has the average American eaten so well—despite rationing—as during the war years, largely because wages were high . . . Seldom before also have farmers been so prosperous . . . Seldom before, however, have farmers been so sore at labor unions. They were looking forward to buying new autos, new farm machinery. Now all this is delayed by strikes. Also they were looking forward to the return of cheap labor from cities to farms. So far this hasn't materialized.

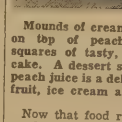
UNIONS LOSE MONEY

Big industrial unions naturally don't want any trek back to the farm. It means loss of dues. The United Auto Workers' 1,000,000 dues-paying membership has now dropped to about half of that. The drop was so severe that the cost of running the union went in the red . . . UAW chiefs are going about their wage protests in an orderly, fair-minded manner, have done their best to stop the Kelsey-Hayes wildcat strike . . . But some union leaders prefer strikes. It helps increase their power in the union . . . In Schenectady, General Electric's Charles E. Wilson long has advocated higher wages. He says it helps him sell electric refrigerators, electric irons, etc. He has been ready to make upward wage adjustments voluntarily, just as wise Standard Oil of N. J. increased its pay immediately and automatically at the end of the war.

However, certain CIO Electrical Workers seem more interested in a strike than a voluntary or negotiated wage boost . . . some labor leaders, unfortunately, seem deliberately looking for strikes—among them John L. Lewis. They bring disfavor on the heads of other labor leaders, have given the entire labor movement a bad setback with public opinion . . . Public opinion in some areas is now so anti-labor that Truman would get thunderous applause if he called out U. S. troops as strike-breakers.



Sugar Restrictions Prevent Solution Of Dessert Problems

Mounds of creamy ice cream ride on top of peach halves set on squares of tasty, hot milk sponge cake. A dessert sauce made of the peach juice is a delightful foil for the fruit, ice cream and cake.

Now that food rationing has loosened up in most of the eatable goods, and we are once again able to get back on a prewar standard, cooking problems need not be pressing. However, in spite of this lifting of restrictions, we still have at least one major problem—that of sugar.

Little relief is in sight right now, and the situation will probably prevail for some months. What shall we do about dessert?

Well, first of all there are fruits which can be dished up in any number of perfectly delightful ways. There's whipped cream and ice cream, and, of course, sugar substitutes.

One cup of sugar or less is a good rule to follow if you are using recipes calling for this sweet but scarce commodity. If your cake calls for 1½ cups of sugar, use ¾ cup of sugar with ¾ cup of corn syrup. In this case you must use 2 tablespoons less milk than the recipe calls for and 2 tablespoons of flour, additional.

The fat scarcity also limits us to some extent on the baked goodies we want to make. That's why sponge cake will be popular, as in this following recipe:

Peach Sponge a la Mode.
(Serves 8)

Sponge cake
1 No. 2½ can peach halves
1 quart vanilla ice cream
Dessert sauce

The cake used uses 4 eggs and is made with scalded milk to give it a fluffy texture:

Sponge Cake.
2 cups sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
4 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 cup milk, scalded
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons butter, melted

Sift flour and measure. Sift three times with salt and baking powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater until thick and lemon colored. Add sugar gradually and beat until fluffy. Fold in flour mixture, then milk, flavoring and melted butter. Fold until well blended. Pour into square cake pan lined with waxed paper. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 minutes. Cool in pans.

Dessert Sauce.
Liquid from peaches
2 teaspoons granulated sugar
Remaining peach halves, chopped
¼ cup salted almonds, slivered
1 tablespoon brown sugar

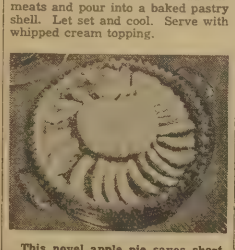
Cook the peach liquid down to ⅔ cup. Stir in the granulated sugar and chill. Serve over the peach halves a la mode and top with nuts mixed with brown sugar.

To serve, arrange a peach half on a square serving of cake. Top with a mound of ice cream and serve with the dessert sauce.

If it's apples you want, then you will like this pie which is easy on fat because it does not have to have a top crust. It uses an egg for richness and flavor:

Open-Faced Apple Pie.
(Serves 6 to 7)

3 cups sliced apples (about ¼ pound)
1 egg, well beaten
¾ cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons melted butter
Plain pastry for 1 crust (about 1 cup flour)



Line pie pan with pastry, building up the edge. Fill with sliced apples. Add remaining ingredients to beaten egg; beat well. Pour batter over apples. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

Apples which are best to use in this type of pie are Rome Beauty or MacIntosh.

Black walnuts can lend a distinctive flavor to pie when fruit supplies dip to a low during the cooler weather as in this recipe:

Black Walnut Pie.
2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons flour
2 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 teaspoons butter
1 cup black walnuts
Baked pastry shell
Whipped cream

Make a custard of the milk, sugar, flour and egg yolks, cooking until thick in a double boiler. Add salt, vanilla and butter. Cool. Add nutmeats and pour into a baked pastry shell. Let set and cool. Serve with whipped cream topping.

This novel apple pie saves shortening by using just one crust. For delicious flavor and good, old-fashioned heartiness, add an egg to the apple mixture.

The old-fashioned puddings are always popular because of their molasses sweetness and fragrant spices. Suet is usually used for the base, but one of the fats may be substituted if it is unavailable. Buttermilk is used to give that fluffy texture which is so appetizing.

Quaker Pudding.
(Serves 10)

2½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1½ cups buttermilk
1 cup ground suet
1 cup molasses
1 cup raisins or other chopped dried fruit, or candied fruit
¾ cup rolled oats

Sift flour with soda and salt. Add all other ingredients in order given and mix thoroughly. Pour into two one-quart greased molds. Cover and steam for 3 hours. Serve with Foamy or Orange sauce.

Stuff green peppers with creamed chicken or turkey and rice. The peppers should be parboiled first, and after stuffed, they may be heated for 10 minutes in a moderate oven.

If you like stuffed green peppers, try them with a stuffing of corned beef hash mixed with onion. It's mighty good.

Like sweet potato pudding? One way to make it is to mash six cooked sweet potatoes with 6 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons grated lemon rind and 1 cup of orange juice. Bake this mixture in a greased casserole in a moderate oven for 15 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Make Meals Good: No family enjoys eating the same, same foods every meal. It's a good idea not to repeat dishes more than once every three or four weeks. Even favorite foods get monotonous when served too regularly.

To get contrast in every meal, follow the basic seven charts to see that you get in all different types of foods.

In planning a meal, have some things crisp, others soft, and still others hard. For example, meat can be the "soft" food, while broccoli or salad add the crispness, and rolls are the "hard" part.

Try to combine colors, too. Cauliflower, potatoes and creamed chicken may all be good, but they don't stimulate the appetite. However, consider the colorfulness of creamed chicken with french fried potatoes and peas with carrots.

There should also be a combination of hot and cold dishes. Even with a salad luncheon, the hot foods can be soup and coffee.

Some cooked, some raw is another good rule. Be sure to have a salad—a big one, too, if you are having roasted meat, cooked vegetables and pie or pudding, which are all cooked.

Tarragon Vinegar

Tarragon vinegar is a favorite in dressing summer salads. The dark green leaves of tarragon are used for seasoning the vinegar. They are used both fresh and dried. This herb needs a little covering of litter and leaves for winter protection.

Cage Crickets

In the Orient the chirping noise of the house cricket is highly appreciated and many households keep them in cages, the cages often elaborately wrought and decorated.

Two-Headed Stream

The Rhine river rises as a two-headed stream in southern Switzerland, enters the Boden See (Lake Constance), and emerges to continue its winding 850-mile course to its multi-mouthed outlet in the North sea. In its oceanward journey it picks up several important tributaries, such as the Lahn, the Neckar, the Main, and the Ruhr from the east, and the Mosel from the west. In some stretches the river is an international boundary. It is a frontier between Switzerland and tiny Liechtenstein, between Switzerland and the old Austria, between Switzerland and Germany, and between France and Germany. Through Germany the river flows in a general northwesterly direction, turning sharply west at the Netherlands line to enter the North sea.

Freshen Grass With Fertilizer in Fall

Late August or September is the best season to give lawn grass a "lift." After the hard summer season, some refreshments in the way of fertilizer, and possibly lime, is called for. Thin stands of grass are particularly in need of help. If your lawn has not been limed in the last few years, it is suggested that you apply 50 to 75 pounds of ground limestone per 1,000 square feet. This will sweeten the soil and make it possible for the grasses to respond better to fertilizer treatment.

The addition of 10 to 20 pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of lawn will do wonders. Fertilizers such as 5-10-5, 4-12-4 or those of similar ratios are well adapted for thickening lawn grasses. Uniform distribution can be obtained by spreading the material in two directions. Measure out half of the fertilizer needed for the lawn and spread it in a north-south direction. Then spread the other half in an east-west direction, and there should be little difficulty in getting even coverage.

Lawns given a tonic in the manner described soon will assume a good healthy color and develop a dense stand of grass. Lawns composed of dense turf will resist invasion by undesirable weeds such as crabgrass, buckhorn and dandelion.

Combustionible Hay

Experienced farmers know that hay, if incompletely cured at time of storage—meaning that it has a moisture content of 25 to 30 per cent — is subject to spontaneous combustion.

Perk Up Potato Salad

Potato salad will taste better if placed in the refrigerator to chill several hours before serving time. This gives the onions and seasonings a chance to permeate the salad, making it uniformly delicious.

Trail-Makers

The first trail-makers in America were buffaloes.

Postwar Agriculture Demands

THE RIGHT TRACTOR FOR THE PARTICULAR JOB

THE proverbial Jack-of-all-trades was master of none. The modern world of science and technology passed him by.

The same principle applies to farm tractors. The tractor that does a wide variety of jobs unsatisfactorily can't possibly produce the greatest results at the least cost in any job.

But that's what the farmer—particularly the small operator—has got to do to meet postwar competition: he's got to produce the most food possible with the least effort and, consequently, at the lowest cost.

The farmer with 10 acres in truck crops needs one kind of tractor. The farmer with 100 acres in wheat alone needs another kind—or, as is usually the case, two or more different tractors. The tractor which does a good job on the Great Plains may be useless in the rice territory. And so it goes.

Conditions of climate, the lay of the land, and the character of soils in the different parts of this vast country, together with wide variations in the nature of crops and the size of operations, combine to produce wide differences in the requirements for tractors. Harvester's policy is to meet all these requirements.

That is why Harvester's postwar line includes a great variety of Farmalls and other specialized tractors and attachments rather than a single tractor with a single system of tools. Every tractor in the line was developed after scientific research and testing under actual operating conditions showed the specifications needed for efficiency and economy.

Every Harvester-built tractor is the right machine for its particular job.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8th, 1945 — NUMBER 45

3 YOUTHS ROB CHEVROLET PLACE

Three youths from Indiana and driving a car with an Indiana tag forced their way into Hayes Chevrolet Company Sunday night about 11:30 and made off with more than eight hundred dollars in cash, checks and securities.

They were caught Monday at Enterprise, Ala., in Coffee County, after robbing the Ford place at Troy and a Service Station at Brundidge. Highway patrolmen suspicioned them after finding them asleep in their parked automobile.

Dick Hayes, owner, and Sy Foshee, employee, drove down to Enterprise Monday and identified the suspects by checks, a ring taken from the safe and other articles belonging to Mr. Hayes.

The accused are now lodged in the jail at Elba, Ala., and will probably have to answer to a charge in Pike County before being brought here for trial.

Two Girls Sentenced In Theft

The California "Kids" who were arrested in Birmingham several weeks ago and brought back to Chilton County for trial in connection with robbery of several residents here were sentenced in Judge Arthur Glover's Court Monday.

They were: Beverly Steyaert, Erma Lee Schock, Donald Montello and Harvey Baldwin. The two girls drew two years and two days each, but according to reports from the Circuit Clerk's Office sentence has not been passed on the two boys. Judge Glover will impose sentences at a later date.

Mass X-ray May Aid Well To Keep Health

(By William J. Conway)

X-ray science, used for half a century to aid the ailing, is looking ahead to a time when it will serve all—those who are healthy as well as those who are ill.

The 50th anniversary of the discovery of the X-ray on November 8th, 1895, provides an opportunity to appraise the wonders it has wrought in the past, and to envision its progress in the years to come.

Radiologists report the possibilities include:

1. Eradicating tuberculosis and controlling cancer through nation-wide mass X-ray examinations so the disease could be detected and treated in the early stages.

2. Closing the door on certain types of imported infections through X-ray examinations of immigrants and visitors to the United States.

3. Transmitting fluoroscopic X-ray pictures by television so a doctor with a patient in one city could show the pictures to a consulting specialist in another city.

"Examinations of persons who are apparently well, in order to detect the earliest and therefore least systematic signs of disease, will be an essential part of preventive medicine. Total population surveys with X-ray for pulmonary tuberculosis and other diseases will be the order of the future."

Dr. Allen is chairman of the American College of Radiology's committee for the observation of X-ray's golden jubilee. The college, a society of physicians who specialize in radiology, has designated November 5-10 "X-ray in Health Week." The purpose is to honor the discoverer, Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen, and to put before the public the saga of X-ray's contribution to the well-being of uncounted millions.

The story begins November 8th, 18-

THE STUDY CLUB HEARS BOOK REVIEW

The monthly meeting of the Study Club was held November 2nd, with Mrs. W. C. Golden as hostess.

The President, Mrs. Norman Roberts, opened the meeting with the Club Collect and a half hour's business session followed.

Mesdames J. Renfro Mullins and Omar L. Reynolds were program directors. Mrs. Reynolds presented the guest speaker, Mr. Omar Reynolds who on two previous programs gave timely book reviews. He held the rapt attention of his audience as he reviewed Henry A. Wallace's "Sixty Million Jobs."

Miss Mary Elizabeth Mullins gave two delightful piano selections, "Indiana Sunset," and "Spanish Dance."

The hostess, assisted by her young daughter, Louise, served a delicious salad plate to members and the following guests: Mrs. Hester, Mrs. A. B. Foshee, Miss Mary Elizabeth Mullins and Mr. Omar Reynolds.

NOTICE

The Bus Station, Cafe and Soda Fountain will be closed all day on Sundays, effective November 11, 1945, until further notice.

Bell Hardware Brings First Kelvinator

The Bell Hardware Co., through the progressive spirit that has always marked them as outstanding, has brought to Chilton County the first post-war Kelvinator.

More modern than ever and the last word in electric refrigeration, the new Kelvinator is on display at the store this week. Mr. J. D. Bell, owner and operator of the Bell Hardware Company has had a beautiful display of the Kelvinator in his window for the past several days.

According to Mr. Bell, within the near future delivery will start on the many orders already received, and he urges all to get their name on the order list at the earliest possible moment.

A.A.U.W. WILL MEET ON THURSDAY, NOV. 29th

The Chilton County branch of the American Association of University Women will meet on Thursday, November 29th, at 3:30, in the Home Economics Building of Chilton County High School. This change was made bby the chairman of the program of this month because the fourth Thursday is Thanksgvng day. All members please notice this change of date.

ALABAMA MILLS SCHOOL MADE VISIT

The Third and Fourth grades of Alabama Mills School wanted to visit the Chilco Freeze Plant.

We wrote Mr. Jackson and asked his permission to visit the plant.

On Friday, November 3rd, we made the visit. Before leaving the school, we discussed with our teacher, Mrs. Haywood, the need of a freeze plant. We talked about the old way of butchering and curing meat and compared it to the Chilco Freeze Plant way. When we reached the plant Mr. Jackson met us and took us to every department of the plant.

We liked best the room that had hams and bacon hanging from the ceiling. After the visit we thanked Mr. Jackson and started back to school.

On the way back to school we stopped at a store and Mrs. Haywood bought us an ice cream cone.

It was the best trip we have ever taken.—Janice Neeley.

TO PREACH AT NEW SALEM

We wish to announce that next Sunday, November 11th, Foster Bean will preach at this place. We want to give this young man a hearty welcome in our midst. We invite all who can, come out to hear him. This is another one of our home boys.

Veterans Are Urged To Qualify As Voters

A very important bit of business awaits every boy or girl, man or woman, discharged from any of the services, who is returning home to Alabama.

That is to register and qualify as a voter.

It will cost nothing, but will mean a great deal in the future.

Here is what a veteran has to do to become a qualified voter, and to claim exemption for all time, from payment of poll tax:

1. If already registered, take the discharge certificate to the probate office at the courthouse, and claim his exemption.

2. If not, register when the county board of registrars visits rural precincts for this purpose, or meets at the courthouse and then claim poll tax exemption.

The May primary is only a few months away. Other elections will come later. Now is the time for every veteran to attend to preparing for full citzenship by qualifying to vote in the way prescribed above.

The American Legion and other veterans' organizations can do no better than to impress upon all returnees that now is the time to register and claim poll tax exemption.—The Huntsville Times.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL P.-T. A. MET TUESDAY

The Clanton Grammar School Parent-Teachers Association met Tuesday of this week at the Grammar School. The devotional was given by pupils of the third grade. "When and How to say, No," was the leading discussion, led by Mrs. Glasscock and participated in by Mesdames Moliston Bell and Hocutt. Next discussion was, "How To Know Your Child." The leader was Mrs. Roberts; helpers were Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Sexton.

Mrs. Warr's room won the prize for the most mothers attending Tuesday's meeting and also the prize for getting the most P.-T. A. members during he membership drive.

P.-T. A. MEETING AT HIGH SCHOOL

There will be a Parent-Teacher meeting in Clanton November 15th at the County High School, beginning at 9:30. Every officer and chairman of all committees are urged to attend this meeting. Mrs. Harry Nelson from the State Parent-Teacher Office, and Miss Martha Smith from the State Education Office will be in charge. The duties and work of each officer and committee will be discussed. There will be a change for questions and discussion of problems.

There are around 18 P.-T. A.'s in the county. It is hoped that every officer and chairman of all committees will be present in order to get information which will strengthen the Associations.

CCHS P.-T. A. Meets November 13th

A special invitation is extended to all new residents of the community to attend the regular meeting of the Chilton County High School P.-T. A. on November 13th, at 3 o'clock, in the school gymnasium.

Mrs. Joe Mullins, program chairman, will present Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin, teacher of English at CCHS, who will speak on the subject, "Now That G.I. Joe Is Marching Home," a discussion of the returning soldier as he goes from war to peace. The topic will be viewed from what has happened to the soldier in our country after four years.

All members and interested patrons are requested to attend this meeting.

COOPER - SIPILA

The marriage of Miss Nell Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cooper of Clanton, to Marvin Sipila of Detroit, Mich., took place Sunday afternoon, November 4th, in Montgomery with Rev. . W. Frazier, officiating in the presence of relatives and close friends of the bridal couple.

The bride wore a costume of sky blue in smart mode and her hat in matching tone, with feather-trimmed and worn with a veiling. Other accessories were in fuchia, and the bride's flowers were white carnations in corsage bouquet.

Horace Wright was the groom's best man.

Following a wedding trip to Niagria Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Sipila will reside in Detroit. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M Sipila of Detroit, and was recently honorably discharged after serving as a bombardier with the Army Air Forces in England

BILLINGSLEY CHURCH TO ORDAIN DEACONS

Sunday, November 11th, the Billingsley Baptist Church will ordain Deacons, and all nearby churches are asked to send deacons to help in the services.—W. Y. Seymour, Pastor.

MT. PLEASANT P.-T. A. WILL MEET NOVEMBER 13TH AT SCHOOL

The Mt. Pleasant P.-T. A. will meet next Tuesday, November 13th, at the schoolhouse at 7 o'clock.

There will be a picture show shown for the benefit of all who will attend. All parents, mothers and fathers, are urged to be at this meeting. At the last meeting Mrs McKee showed pictures which were enjoyed by everyone.

Era's Beauty Shop Under New Ownership

Mrs. Grace Windham and Mrs. Cilla Adkins have purchased the Era's Beauty Shop and have assumed management. The location will be the same and Mrs. Era Wyatt, former owner, will continue with the business. Other operators will be Mrs Cilla Adkins, Mrs. Agnes Carter and Mrs. Willie Mae Milstead.

The new management invites all their friends and customers to visit them and assures them complete satisfaction on every job. Their advertisement appears on another page of this issue.

MR. W. L. NIX HONORED ON SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Lawrence were hosts at a surprise birthday dinner given on Sunday, November 4th, honoring their father, W. L. (Papa) Nix, on his seventieth birthday. He was the recipient of many useful and beautiful gifts.

Those present for the occasion were: (Wife) Mama Nix, Mrs. Hollis Calfee, daughter, and children Elizabeth and Dewey; Mrs. Nell (Lawrence) Agee; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lawrence, Jean Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Van Smith and Miles.

Afternoon visitors were: Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Baker and Sybil; Mrs Gordon Thompson and Jean, and Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Glenn, Jr., and Patsy. All were present except one son-in-law, M 3-C Hollis Calfee, somewhere in the South Pacific, and one grandson, Cpl. William L. Agee, now in Algeries, North Africa.

National Junior Red Cross Enrollment Began Nov. 1st

The National Junior Red Cross enrollment period is in progress in the schools. $283.57 was raised during the enrollment period last year. Some money was spent for presents which went into a number of Christmas boxes for children overseas, materials for writing boards, writing port folios, wool thread for orphans and other articles made by the Junior Red Cross last year. Mr. Heflin, the County Treasurer shows a balance in the Junior Red Cross Treasury of $167.69.

It is hoped that the amount above the enrollment fee this year may be given to the National Children's Fund for help among refugee children. The teacher-sponsors will decide how the money will be used at their meeting at 2:30, November 15th, at the high school.

LITTLEJOHN - ARANT

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Littlejohn of Clanton, Ala., announce the marriage of their daughter, Evian, to Edgar Arant of Wetumpka, Ala., October 27.

Mesdames A. L. Cox, Spurgeon Calloway, Raymond Cox and Miss Hazel Taylor were in Birmingham Tuesday visiting relatives.

Our Job Is Difficult Or Easy — It Depends On Us

Large things are more easily understood if reduced to small proportions. In the war we had four essential elements of people, the government, the service man or woman, the war worker and the general public and there was another element, the enemy.

Now, let's reduce these to five people, viz.: The government, we shall call your friend, and the war worker we shall call your neighbor: the service man or woman is your son or daughter, your nephew or neice or a very close friend. The enemy is an individual who has set out to deprive you of your life or liberty and there is yourself

Now, this vicious enemy is on the march, he is loaded with every kind of weapon and he is bringing sorrow and suffering to you and your home and liberty are at stake. The service man says, "I'll whip this enemy if I can get the weapons. The war worker says, "I'll make the weapons if I can get the material." The government says, "I'll buy the material if you will loan me the money." All of this makes sense to you, so you loan the government the [illegible] Bonds)

The government buys the material and pays the war worker, the war worker makes the ammunition, the ships, the planes and provides the transportation. The service man uses these weapons and he has whipped the enemy; he has given him a beating the like of which the world has never seen. Now, you are a free man, your enemy has been destroyed, but are you done with your job? Where is the service man? Has he been injured? Has he lost an arm, a leg, or is he sick and in the [illegible]

Yes, we know that this condition is true in many cases and we know that many of these [illegible] the enemy are still on foreign soil. What will you do? Will you abandon him? The answer is no. We will loan the government our money. (Buy Bonds). We will tell them to provide for this service man, to give him hospital treatment, to transport him back to his home.

Every time it has been necessary to provide the money to carry on the war, we have responded. We will not fail now in this eighth and last drive. At the beginning of the Seventh drive there were two States in the USA in which every County had made every quota every time.

At the end of the Seventh drive there was one State in which every County had met every drive every time. That State was Alabama, the only State in the USA in which every County has made every quota every time. Will we maintain this excellent record and make the quota for the Eighth drive. I believe we will.

It is now a matter of State and County pride and we must not fail. It is your duty and your opportunity. Do everything that you can to help make this quota, buy bonds, sell bonds, talk bonds and let's preserve the best record ever made in the history of America. It will be easier down through the years to say, "We met every quota," than to try to explain why we did not. Our job is before us, it will be easy or difficult depending on ourselves.

Respectfully,
J. L. HOLLIS, County Chrm.

MT. PLEASANT HALLOWE'EN PARTY GREAT SUCCESS

The Mt. Pleasant Hallowe'en Party last week was a grand success.

The most popular pupil of the school cake was won by Miss Janette Mims. The pretty girl cake was won by Miss Lois Barnes, while the ugly man and woman cakes were presented to Mr. Clarence Oakes and Mrs. Fox.

A large crowd was present, a good time was had by all, also a fine sum for the P.-T. A. treasury was received.

The ladies wish to thank each one who participated in any way toward making the party a success.

Wife Worry

Hi — What makes our neighbor pace up and down in front of his house like that?

Si—He's awfully worried about his wife, poor chap.

Hi—Why, what's she get?

Si—The car.

Nobody Home

Wife—Say, John, the census taker is at the front door.

Hubby—Just tell him we lost our census several years ago.

Household Cares

Hubby—What kind of a disposition does the new cook have?

Wife—She has a very even temper—always mad.

Way Off Base

Jerry—That was just a bunt.

Sounds Good

Father—I want no more of that standing on the porch with that young man.

Daughter—I only stayed for a second.

Father—I distinctly heard a third, fourth and fifth!

Stationary

Cora — The school principal says you have a model brother.

Dora—Too bad he isn't a working model!

Advice to Lovelorn

WAC—Do you believe in long engagements?

Sailor—Yes, I think young people should be happy as long as possible.

Home Sweet Home

Wifey—And what would you be now if it weren't for my money?

Hubby—A bachelor.

Kathleen Norris Says:

The Business of Being an American

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

It means saying to the ambitious boy, "we can give you your year or two of medical school, anyway."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

EVERY woman who manages a house and a family knows the value of a plan.

No matter how tangled the problem is, if she can sit down with a pencil and paper and plan it all out, she feels a great relief in her troubled soul, and she knows all will go well.

Perhaps her plan runs something like this. "Dave and Mary come down with Joe in his car. Susan is coming with Aunt Alice. The Fosters will have the guest room, Alice comes in with me, the two children on cots in the old playroom—" and so on.

Or perhaps, it is this sort of planning; "I'll combine celery and have a good soup—that's Saturday night, and with the corned beef hash and cabbage and biscuits that'll do for supper. That leaves all those sausages for Sunday morning—and a picnic lunch. Well, now I have only to make a dessert or two and I'm all fixed."

And so with the children's school outfits. And so with the proposed visit to the mountains or the seaside. Think it all out, settle the details, tell everyone just what he or she has to do—and all anxiety and uncertainty are gone.

World Problems to Solve.

Now we have a bigger job than week-end meals or picnic and house-party plans to work on. Now we have world problems of feeding and housing to settle.

"World problems!" We are accustomed to this phrase now, and we dismiss it as too big to handle. It dimly means straitened markets at home, great ships loaded with medicine and food moving to foreign ports, hordes of hungry, frightened, homeless folk waiting for that food.

We have nervous sense that this winter will be hard on us all, but that we'll weather it. And then afterward—

The "then afterward" is what ought to concern us now. We'll get through this winter on limited meat and fuel; we'll get through the next and the next, and we'll slowly work our way out to that prosperity and plenty that nothing can keep away from us.

But then? Then comes the time when everyone will want a little money. Ten thousand, 12 thousand, 20 thousand dollars in 1950 are going to spell the simple word "fortune." Opportunities will be everywhere; you may have what you want in 1950, if you plan for it today.

To buy things now—homes, furniture, rugs, cars, is not thrifty, because of high prices and scarcities. Also, qualities are not what they were, and what they will be again. But to get through these next few years quietly, thriftily, means that you can buy that hillside farm, with the oaks and the creek, some day. It means saying to the ambitious boy, "we can give you your first year or two of medical school, anyway." It means an investment in some growing industry that will bring you and your husband a comfortable and secure old age. It may mean travel. It may mean helping a beloved daughter through the hard years when her nursery is small. Money is going to be just as important to you in 1950 as it is today, and worth twice as much.

Invest in Government Bonds.

My answer to this problem is to invest in the last government bonds; the bonds that mean victory, rehabilitation, the beginning of a new world. This is not government propaganda; I have not been asked to do it. I am saying it because I consider it an extraordinary opportunity. If in the dark war years there was ever a question as to how America was going to come out of this world agony, there is no question now. She has emerged gloriously, convincingly, unequivocally on top. We who bought bonds when German buzz bombs were besieging London, when Japanese suicide planes were sinking our ships, may have shown some little faith and patriotism in the act.

But not now. Now there is no doubt that an investment in America, as she makes her last great effort to clean up the remains of the war ruins everywhere, and get her own wheels started again, is the safest investment in the world. When I say "save, and scrimp if you must, and cut down, and sacrifice — but lay away victory bonds, and bonds, and bonds," I am talking not for America, not even for the soldiers and sailors and airmen for whose benefit this great drive is opened, but for you—yourself—and those you love, and your brighter tomorrow.

FOR A HAPPY FUTURE

Although the war is over, many grave problems remain with us. We can't do much about the hardships of Europe or Asia, excepting to contribute what we can to relief agencies. But in our own sphere, we can do a lot.

Shortages will be with us for some time. Fuel and clothing will not be plentiful this winter. Some foods will still be hard to get. Nevertheless, there should be no real suffering in this country, and we can look forward to a better year than we have had in a long time.

This is a time to think of the future. Right now most people have considerable money saved up and they have good jobs. There is a great temptation, now that the restricitions of war are being removed, to go out and buy all those things you have had to do without for so long, even though prices are right and quality poor. The time for sacrificing and doing without is not yet over, Miss Norris warns. This is the great opportunity to put away a tidy sum for the next few years.

The best investment, aside from any patriotic motives, is in government bonds, Miss Norris says. For safety and high yield these victory issues cannot be rivaled. Every one should buy all he can to assure a happy future.

TASTIER SCHOOL LUNCHES

School days mean lunch-box days. Here are some suggestions to make lunches "go over in a big way."

Use enough waxed paper to cover sandwiches, fruit and cake completely so that the food does not dry out. And use paper cups with lids to keep raw vegetables crisp.

To keep lettuce from wilting long before lunchtime, wash the leaves, dry them well, and wrap them separately in waxed paper. Then the leaves can be added to the sandwich just before eating.

Save for a brighter tomorrow.

Surplus Property Sales

Sweeping revision of surplus property regulations in favor of World War II veterans has been announced by W. Stuart Symington, administrator, after a personal investigation which indicated that some disposal agencies were giving veterans "the run-around."

The changes include elimination of the $2,500 limit on preferential purchases and within reasonable amounts, there will be no limit;

Permission for a veteran entering the retail business to purchase an initial stock of goods for resale. Hitherto, under interpretation of the G.I. bill, a veteran could buy materials to establish a store, but could not obtain preference on stock for sale;

Permission for veterans to deal directly with disposal agencies such as the department of commerce and Reconstruction Finance corporation;

Special permission for veterans to buy automotive or other equipment required by his employment. It is said that few autos are available, however;

Provision that credit may be extended to veterans under terms and conditions established by the disposal agency which sells the goods. Thus, it will be possible for veterans to obtain loans from commerce department and RFC as well as the Smaller War Plants corporation. Information now is that the RFC will soon take over all disposal from the commerce department, which only recently assumed sale of consumer goods from treasury.

Questions and Answers

Q. When my twin brother entered the service he designated me beneficiary of his insurance. After a hasty marriage he made, he informed me and my parents he had not and had no intention of changing the beneficiary. After his death I was notified by the insurance department that I was his beneficiary. His wife has made some sort of claim for the insurance and has held up settlement for 16 months. Can anyone but the insured change the beneficiary or can the insurance department decide who is to get it?—J. F. K., Palo Alto, Calif.

A. No one can change the beneficiary but the insured. If you are named the beneficiary in the policy, then you are entitled to the insurance and the Veterans administration says the wife or no one else can hold it up 16 minutes. File your claim for the insurance with the Veterans administration.

Q. With reference to sale of government surplus property and the $2,500 amount sold to an individual, I am much interested in further details on this matter and any information relative to location of these surplus property boards will be much appreciated.—J. A. V., Hingham, Mont.

A. The $2,500 limit has recently been removed. Your nearest Smaller War Plants Board is at Boise, Idaho, 210 Capital Securities Bldg. Your nearest department of commerce board is at Denver, Region Nine, 1030 15th street. Suggest you write to these boards for further details.

Q. I want to know if a man 27 years old, who has been in the navy almost two years and has two kids, the oldest four years and the baby can't walk, can get a discharge on this condition soon.—Wife, Coweta, Okla.

A. No, the minimum number of navy points for enlisted personnel as of November 1 is 41 points. From your letter, your husband has only about 36 points, if he has had no overseas duty.

Q. My husband is a seaman in the navy. I have asked assistance of the Red Cross to pay my hospital bill for an operation. They said "No" and recommended the Navy Relief. I wrote them stating conditions; their answer was to loan me the money until I could work to pay it back. Wasn't I entitled to medical care?—Mrs. E. D., Taylorville, N.C.

A. The navy department says you were definitely entitled to medical care if you applied to the navy medical dispensary before your operation. Suggest you apply to the nearest medical dispensary and they will inform you as to your status.

Q. I was discharged from the navy under honorable conditions. The discharge reads, "BuPers-Bu-Med Joint Ltr." Could you please tell me what this means?—R. J. A., Hawthorne, Calif.

A. It means Bureau of Personnel-Bureau of Medics Joint Letter, the authority under which your discharge was given.

Q. Is it true if a boy enlists in the navy reserve at 17, that he is automatically released one day preceding his 21st birthday?—Mrs. E. R. M., Tule Lake, Calif.

A. The navy department says yes.

SURPLUS ARMY GOODS TO GO ON SALE

Dealers from all sections of the United States are expected at Atlanta October 25 and 26 to bid on construction and farm machinery offered for sale by the Office of Surplus Property, U. S. Department of Commerce, in the lobby of the building at 105 Pryor Street, N. E., according to Joe Haslett, officer in charge of machinery sales.

The two-day sale will include tractors, bucket drag lines, air compressors, trenching machines, road rollers, scrapers, graders, hay rakes, mowers, spreaders and pumps. Haslett urges dealers to inspect this equipment before the sale at any of the following locations:

Fort McPherson, Ga.; Camp Sutton, Camp Le Jeune and Camp Davis, North Carolina; Southeastern Shipyard, Savannah, Ga.; Clinton Engineering Works, Oak Ridge, Tenn., Army Service Forces Depot, Memphis, Tenn.; and at the McClecky Company, Hooker's Point Shipyard Tampa, Fla.

Other machinery to be sold is located at Engineer's Dedistribution Centers at East Point and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.; Columbia, S. C.; Palatka, Fla.; and Birmingham, Ala.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting the machinery division, Office of Surplus Property, Department of Commerce, 105 Pryor Street, N. E., Atlanta, Ga.

MEAT ANIMAL PRICES EXPECTED TO BE GOOD

In spite of less military buying, prices of best grades of hogs, cattle and lambs, are expected to hold up well this fall and winter.

This is the information reaching marketing specialists of the Alabama Extension Service from the United States Department of Agriculture Here is how the economists sum up the situation:

Hog marketing will run moderately and considerably less than two years less this fall and winter than last ago. Except for maybe a temporary decline in December or January when hog marketings reach top numbers, hog prices are likely to stay at the ceiling.

Lambs are fewer than last year, so there will be less lamb on the market, and prices of lambs will probably go up about as usual during the winter and early spring.

With cattle the story is a little different. With a record number of cattle now on farms and ranches, cattle marketings are running large this fall, especially the marketing of grass fed cattle. While that movement is high, prices of lower-grade cattle may go down more than usual. On the other hand, prices of well fed grain cattle will probably continue high, as the demand for the better grades of meat is likely to run well beyond the supply.

Just how much meat will be needed for shipping to Europe is still uncertain. In any case, the economists expect the over-all demand for meat will keep prices for most meat animals near present levels.

MEMBERS SUPPORT EFFORTS TO REPAIR MT. NEBO CHURCH

The improved appearance of Mt. Nebo Church is a thing of satisfaction to many of its members and others who contributed generously to pay the cost of the renovations and repairs. Such response, which is very vital to the continuation of active church activitieis, is to be highly commended.

FARM BUREAU RECORD OF MAJOR ACHIEVEMENTS 1941 To 1945

1. Sponsored laws which place a floor under prices of farm products at not less than 90 per cent of parity. (Results: The price of cotton for 1945 is 13 cents per pound above that in 1940, price supports are in effect for peanuts, hogs, and many other farm products. These Bankhead-Steagall laws have added millions of dollars to farm income.)
2. Helped get Bankhead - Brown amendment which added at least $5.00 per bale to the price of cotton in 1944 and 1945.
3. Helped defeat laws that would have crippled T. V. A. Program.
4. Supported continuance of Tenant - purchase program under Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.
5. Supported legislation establishing Agricultural Experiment Stations in the Piedmont, Upper Coastal Plains, and lower Coastal Plains, and providing additional land on Tennessee Valley and Sand Mountain Experiment Stations.
6. Supported passage of State and Federal Acts which provide expanded program for "farm-to-market" or "County" roads.
7. Sponsored legislation providing for additional research work in forestry, the establishing of a school of forestry, and adequate state-wide forest fire control program.
8. Helped establish a cooperative poultry breeding farm to provide superior poultry breeding stock for Alabama farmers.

Tightening String

While struggling to fasten a parcel up tightly, soak the string well in water, then go through the tying-up routine while it is still wet. As the string dries it shrinks—and there is your parcel tied as snugly as can be.

Dehydrated Vegetables

From 25 to 30 million pounds of dehydrated vegetables are expected to be sold annually in the United States.

Plastic Tops

Manufacturers of new cars probably will not immediately offer models with all-plastic, transparent tops, but one large maker of automobile accessories already is producing a one-piece plastic top, modeled after the nose of our bombing planes. These tops will fit most convertible cars of 1940 to 1942.

DON'T FEEL WELL?
It may be due to unelimi-nated waste matter in your system
Unelimi-nated waste matter may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless relieved when necessary, can finally impair the health. This condition often causes loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired run-down feeling, mental depression, headaches, dizziness, anemia, gas formation, acid indigestion and skin eruptions.
No matter how many other medicines you have tried for the relief of these conditions due to unelimi-nated waste matter in your system, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you excellent results or your money back. Try a bottle of B-L PREPARATION and see if you don't feel like a new person. Caution: Use only as directed.

MRS. MARY MAJOR STOPS STICKY IRON

PENDENNIS, KANSAS. — Mrs. Mary D. Major has discovered one of the secrets of Faultless Starch, according to a letter she wrote recently. She said,

"The last time I was in town, I purchased a box of Faultless Starch, and used it on my wash. I surely was pleased with the results, when I ironed my clothes. My iron just glided along. There was no sticky starch on my iron. The starch is well named. It is all you say it is. It is absolutely faultless."

Isn't that a fine letter? She says that there was "no sticky starch on my iron"—and, of course, that means she did not have a "sticky iron."

STOP YOUR STICKY IRON

If you have to fight a "sticky iron" every time you iron, change to Faultless Starch and see the difference. It's no fun to iron with a "sticky iron." It's hard work to iron when the iron seems to stick at the end of each stroke. Your arms, your back, your neck, your legs ache with strain when you have a "sticky iron."

But you don't HAVE to fight a "sticky iron"! Just starch your wash with Faultless Starch—and see how easy it is to iron! You see, Faultless Starch contains ironing-aids that make your ironing smooth, easy and beautiful. With Faultless Starch you make ironing a joy—not a job. And when ironing is a joy, it's really fun to do beautiful starching.

SAVE STARCH-MAKING TIME

Another wonderful thing about Faultless Starch is that you can make perfect hot starch WITHOUT COOKING! And in barely a minute! Just cream the starch with a little cool water and add boiling water while stirring. That's all! Isn't that easy?

So change to the starch that Mrs. Major says, "It is all you say it is: It is absolutely faultless." FAULTLESS STARCH—at your grocery store.—Adv.

WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I, but who later appeared in Hollywood and secured a job from Spratt. Under the name of Kessler, and with his disfigurements, he was not recognized. He was a frequent visitor at the Herlong home and they all became good friends. One day while they were waiting for Spratt, Arthur told Elizabeth that he realized the fight she was going through, knowing that Dick would soon be going away to war. She said that so far she could only see the war in terms of her son, not as a noble struggle for a better world.

CHAPTER XVII

"I wish there were something I could say to you," he told her in a low voice.

Elizabeth had clasped her hands and was moving them against each other restlessly. "I don't know why I feel so much like talking to you. Maybe it's just that if I don't talk it out pretty soon I don't know what will become of me. Do you mind listening?"

"I want to," he answered, with such simple sincerity that she could have no doubt of his sympathy. He hesitated an instant, then asked, "Can we sit down, Mrs. Herlong?"

"How stupid of me!" she exclaimed. She hurried to lead the way to two deck chairs placed on the lawn, at the side of the house. Cherry had left a sweater on one of them, and Elizabeth put it on, for the evening chill was blowing in from the sea. "We aren't just courteous about not noticing your limitations, Mr. Kessler," she remarked as they sat down, "we're usually not even aware of them."

When he answered it was in a matter-of-fact voice. "This is one of the things I found hardest to get used to," he said. "I mean, asking for a chair. I had always been so healthy that I was the one who had to be reminded not to expect too much of other people. Please don't be embarrassed—I'm not."

"Are you cold?" asked Elizabeth.

"No. What was it you wanted to tell me?"

"Spratt is my second husband—you didn't know that, did you? It's not important in any personal sense between us, it never has been important and it wouldn't be now except that my first husband was killed in the last war. I loved him very much. Of course, now, looking back on it, it's easy to say it shouldn't have mattered so much, I was a young girl with all my life before me, and as it happened I met Spratt and everything turned out as you've seen it. But at the time there was no way for me to look forward. When I remember it—" She stopped.

After a moment Kessler asked, "Did you suffer so horribly?"

"I can't tell you what it was. It wasn't anything anybody could understand except somebody who had been through it. I had loved him so, and then all of a sudden he was dead. It was—anyway, I never went through anything like it before, and I never have again. Of course, it's all over—I don't even think of it very often, but now—" She stopped again.

There was a silence that seemed to last a long time. At last Kessler said, in a voice so low she barely heard him, "Yes? But now?"

"Don't you understand? I can't take it again. I can't. I thought there never would be anything else like that. It was over and done with. My world had been shot to pieces, and I picked up the pieces and made myself go on living, and I was rewarded more than I ever dreamed of expecting. But I can't do that another time. Even if I had the strength, it's too late. I was twenty when I lost Arthur. It wasn't easy to go on then. But now I'm forty-four. If my world is shot to pieces again, it stays that way. I can't go back and start over. And why should I be expected to? Life can't be all beginnings and no fulfillment!"

As she broke off Kessler asked, "What is that exquisite scent that's suddenly here all around us?"

"Night-blooming jasmine. Sometimes it blooms till late in the year. Are you listening to me?"

"If I hadn't been listening I shouldn't have asked about the flowers. I was just thinking, in a world so full of possibilities for pleasure, why should anyone have to say what you are saying to me?"

"You're not answering me, are you?" she said. "There isn't any answer. But thank you for listening." After a moment she went on, "I can't tell you what a relief it has been to say all this. I believe saying it to you has got it out of me so I won't pour it all out to Spratt. That's why I am grateful." She reached her hand out and laid it over his, as it rested on the head of his cane. To her astonishment, she found that instead of lying there lightly as she had thought, his hand was gripping the cane with such violence that the muscles were hard and the knuckles were like rocks. Elizabeth drew away quickly and sat up. "Mr. Kessler! What have I done to you?"

"Nothing," he answered sharply, and sat up too, as though startled. "What is the trouble?"

"Why couldn't I keep quiet?" she demanded of herself contritely. "Here I've been babbling like a child who thinks nobody has anything to do but listen—"

"But I wanted to listen!" Kessler exclaimed. "You're not sorry you talked to me!"

"Not for myself, oh no. But I was so absorbed in myself I didn't realize how I might be affecting you. Have I brought back something that's better forgotten? Forgive me, please forgive me, if I've tried you too far."

Kessler stood up abruptly. He turned and moved a step so as to face her. She looked up at him standing between her and the stars, a black figure that gave an impression of strength in spite of the crippled body.

"I told you not to try to answer me. Please don't try. There's no answer, for me or for you."

"Yes there is," he exclaimed decisively. "For a moment, sitting there, you had me almost believing that there wasn't. You said it was too late for you to start over. You are not required to start over. But you are required to keep going. Remember, your responsibilities are of your own creation. You aren't responsible for what's happening in the world, but you are responsible for how you take it."

"There's no answer, for me or for you."

"I told you I couldn't take it. I can feel myself breaking at the prospect. I can't take it."

"Yes you can," he said sternly, "and you're going to."

His force was like a stimulus. Elizabeth exclaimed, "Do you believe I can, Mr. Kessler? You seem to know me pretty well by now—do you believe I can?"

"You can," he returned earnestly, "because you've promised it, by every action of your life. Nobody required you to get married, or to have children, or to live so that you would be essential to their well being. If you had wanted to, you might have been one of these whining creatures who takes to her bed at every annoyance and becomes the center of her little universe by demanding attentions she's too useless to get any other way. But you didn't do that. You outlived your own early grief. To do it you had to strip your character down to its core of strength, so that this is what they have seen of you, this is what you have taught them to expect. They believe in you. They need you, and they're going to need you more. Don't fail them."

Elizabeth drew a long breath. Her chest felt tight. After awhile Kessler resumed his chair. He turned to her, saying,

"Right now, you are beginning to fail."

She started. "Is it as obvious as that? Already?"

"Why don't you stop looking at this entirely from your own viewpoint?" he asked. "You wonder if you can take it—has it never occurred to you that Dick is taking it very well?"

"Dick? He doesn't seem to think very much about it."

"He doesn't seem so to you, maybe. But he is thinking about it."

"How do you know?" She was startled. "Has he said anything to you?"

"No. But I know he is, because I've been there."

Elizabeth exclaimed, "Yes you have. Tell me what it's like!"

"It's a torment of bewilderment," he returned. "You don't say much about it because everybody seems to understand it better than you do. You don't know the reason other people aren't explaining it to you is that they don't understand it either. You go around wondering how you're going to act like a brave hero."

Elizabeth was sitting forward, her hands tight on the arms of her chair. "That's what's going on in his mind! But why hasn't he told us? Mr. Kessler, why doesn't he ever say so?"

"I suspect it's because he knows what's going on in your mind, a lot better than you think."

"You mean," she said bitterly, "he knows his father and I aren't fit to be told. Because we have failed him terribly."

"Would you believe me if I told you I loved your son, Mrs. Herlong? I do love him. He's so much like the son I used to think I might have."

"You never had any children, did you? Margaret told me this afternoon you adopted her after her parents died."

"No, I never had any children," he returned steadily. "That was another of the things the war made impossible."

"Oh," she said faintly. After a moment she exclaimed, "Yet you have conquered, Mr. Kessler. You have gone on living, living well and nobly, in a world that left you absolutely nothing to live for. How did you do it? It seems strange that I who have everything should turn to you who have nothing, and say 'Please help me.' But I do. Because right now it seems that it is you who have everything and I who have nothing. Will you help me?"

He asked, "Do you want me to try to tell Dick what he's being asked to fight for?"

"Yes! Can you? Will you?"

"I'll try. I'll do my best."

"Thank you! You can do it better than I can. You've seen it. And you are so wise, so gentle, so—how can I say it? I mean you're the only man I know I'd trust to do it well."

There was a brief silence, then he said, "And you?"

"I'll take it, Mr. Kessler. Forgive me for being such a coward."

Margaret was going to have a Christmas party for some of her schoolmates, and Elizabeth suggested that she and the two older children come to Kessler's apartment one afternoon to decorate the Christmas tree. As it was hard to buy ornaments in the stores they brought their own, part of an abundance left over from earlier holidays. Margaret was there, jumping with excitement while Kessler looked on. He liked Christmas, and enjoyed her pleasure in it. While he was showing Elizabeth the silver fountain pen Spratt had given him as a Christmas present, Dick was dragging in a ladder, and calling to Elizabeth to move out of his way. "We'll start at the top," he said, setting up the ladder by the tree and beginning to climb. "You hand me the junk, Cherry."

With Elizabeth's assistance, Cherry handed up the junk. Margaret helped, her arms full of tinsel and her eyes wide and joyous. "It's just beautiful," she kept saying over and over. "It's just beautiful."

She got close against the resplendent tree and looked up through the branches. "I can see you up there, Dick! Look at me."

He bent down, scratching his face on the branches. "Sure, I see you. Hello." As he leaned over, a collection of glass balls slipped out of his hand and smashed on the floor at her feet.

"Oh!" Margaret cried in dismay. "It doesn't matter," Cherry reassured her, "there are plenty more."

"You've hung up about all it will hold, anyway," Kessler observed as the door opened and the housekeeper came in to tell Margaret her supper was ready. Margaret shrank back against the tree, looking down at the broken glass before her.

"I—I'm scared," she confessed. "I might fall down and get cut."

"Yes, so you might," Elizabeth agreed. "Come give her a lift, Dick."

"Okay. Wait a minute, Margaret."

Dick scrambled down from the ladder. Remarking that he had jolted some lights out of place, Cherry climbed up to adjust them. Dick reached across the broken glass.

"Put your arms around my neck and hold tight so I can lift you, Margaret. There you are. She'll be along in a minute," he said to the housekeeper, and as she went out he swung Margaret across the pile of glass and set her down. "Right?" he asked her.

She nodded. "Right, thank you. I'm always scared of falling down on broken things. I fell down once, and got a bad cut on my neck. See?" She drew the collar of her dress aside.

Dick bent to look at the scar she showed him. "Why, you did get a bad cut. How did that happen?"

"A man kicked me," said Margaret, "and I fell down."

"What?" said Dick.

The eyes of them all turned to her—Elizabeth, her hands full of tinsel, Cherry on the ladder adjusting the lights, Dick standing beside Margaret at the foot of the tree. Kessler, sitting in his chair near by, said nothing. But Margaret appeared not to realize the start she had given them.

"What man kicked you?" Dick demanded, and stopped, absorbing the idea of men who kicked little girls.

Margaret answered without any excitement. "The man who killed my mother."

Of course the daily press is filled with human interest stories. If we only knew the ones involved the story would effect as much more. As it is, we only glance at the name, we do not recognize it as anyone we know, so we say to ourselves, "too bad," and go on to the next story. In a story this week we find something that might as well be of interest to a Chilton Countian as anyone else. It is a story that had it's beginning, of course, long before the war, but we will take it up on the battle fields of Belgium, Luxembourg and Germany. Through his mother, Mrs. S. A. Fuller, of Box 156, Route 2, Eatonton, Ga., a soldier notified the Alabama Press that he had found a ring in his jeep a few hours after a mission to the front lines somewhere in Europe to recover bodies of the dead. His efforts to find the fallen soldier, to which the ring belonged, failed, but he did know that he came from Alabama and that an inscription in the ring bore the initials, M.J.M. to W. D. M. 3-14-42." The story continued: "Among the last he hauled was a young man who had been sent to his area as a replacement and with whom very few of the boys had become acquainted. They knew only that he was from Alabama. He found a man's wedding band in his jeep a few hours after he hauled this young man's body to the rear." Mrs. Fuller has the ring at the address given above. If you are the principal in this human drama, you should write her.

We received a circular letter this morning that started: "If You Have Time to Read This, Toss it Into the Waste Basket." Well, he asked for it.

We can't get over the signs that are on the highway north and south of Clanton, proclaiming that "Chilton County Wants Handy Ellis for Governor." Of course we don't have the slightest idea who put the signs up, but we were just wondering who it was that decided that Chilton County wanted him for Governor. We would like just a little voice in who we want for our next Governor — or are we asking too much.

Boy this is going to give you a pain. No, wait a minute, we forget, dentists are now painless (They keep telling us). Anyway, those Gowans attended the Alabama Dental Association Convention in Birmingham last week. There was Dr. J. E., Jesse Sam, Joe Earl and Paul Gowan. We bet Dr. Gowan, Sr., was proud of those three fine sons following in his chosen profession. We understand Joe Earl and Paul will continue practice here. Jesse Sam, as you know, has offices in Huntsville, Ala. Speaking of dentists reminds us that another returned service man has opened his offices—Dr. Joe Edgar, same place, over A & P. And of course Drs. Gowan, Gowan & Gowan will be at ahe same place.

The wife and yours truly ran into a sure enough old inhabitant at the Dixie the other evening. They were dining with the Dick Hayes—Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pinckard, who were Clanton residents more than a generation ago. They are now living at Tallahassee, Fla., and will be remembered by many of the local "old timers."

While so much is being said about the acute housing shortage we would like to add our two-cents worth and remark on a possible solution here in Clanton. Why aren't the houses at the old CCC Camp turned into efficiency apartments and rented to the returning soldiers and their families? It would take mighty little labor and even though it would not be what a young fellow and his wife would want for a permanent home it would suffice until better quarters could be obtained. All modern conveniences are already there and the "once German PW Camp" could really be turned into something that would benefit hundreds of future Clanton citizens.

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party. That is a line that we wrote thousands of times when we were going to business college and trying to learn the use of the typewriter. (Which we never did). Now is the time for the line to be reversed and read something like this: "Now is the time for all good politicians to come to the aid of their printer." or this is the time of year to remind one and all that political advertising is "cash on the barrelhead." By that we mean payable in advance. And when you various and sundry politicians start sending in your ads and stories, please send the check along with the copy. Which, as is needless to say, will be highly appreciated.

Guess you know about the fellow who was arrested for throwing rocks out of his neighbor's yard into his. Ordinarily that wouldn't be cause for arrest, but these were Plymouth Rocks.

Billy Smith, former Editor and Owner of the Chilton County News, has an honorable discharge from the United States Army and is in newspaper work again. Misters Carter & Carter (them Carter boys, PeeWee and Lester), have opened a Radio Shop next door to Dr. J. L. Bennett's office. They have been in service for the past several years and out of circulation, that is, out of circulation in Clanton. According to Cecil, that's PeeWee, no job is too large or too small for them to handle and if you can't bring your radio in, give them a ring and they will be out in no time at all and check your radio troubles. This is only one of several businesses that have blossomed here since the "boys" have started coming home. We wish them all well and pledged ourselves to cooperate with them in every way in making their business a success.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

C. R. Childress of Pleasant Grove Community and C. L. Wilkins of Enterprise Community are planning to combine sericea seed. Sericea, in this work unit, has made a fair crop of seed this season. The success of harvesting this seed crop depend on knowing how and when to harvest.

The best seed are the seeds that mature first. If a person waits too long, the best part of the seed crop may be lost because wind and rain will knock the seed of the plants. If a combine is not available the sericea should be cut when damp to keep the seed from shattering off, and put in stacks until it can be threshed, or used for mulching other areas to be established in sericea. Sericea can be established very effectively by mulching in January or February. In fact it is advisable to establish some areas by mulching rather than by sowing seed.

Those woh have not cut their kudzu since June can now utilize it by grazing without any damage to next year's growth. Some people never use their kudzu in any other way. Kudzu retains almost all of its food value after frost has killed it.

ISABELLA

Both services at Mulberry were very well attended Sunday and Sunday night. The installation of the Sunday School Class Officers Sunday morning was very pretty and impressive. May each officer fill his or her duty to our Master to do better work for Him than ever before.

There was a good number at the church Friday night in the interest of a new building. We wish there could have been more present.

The Hallowe'en party at Isabella was attended by a large crowd last Tuesday night.

Prof. and Mrs. R. L. Yielding spent several days at Cold Springs in Cullman County this week. Prof. Yielding went back to complete some unfinished work there where he has taught for the last nine years.

VERMONT

The attendance is still good.

We played Thomas Junior Friday in basketball. The Vermont boys won with scores of 31 to 10. The girls played also. They tied with scores of 13 and 13.

We had a Hallowe'en party last Wednesday night. Everything went well. Our queen was Miss Hazel Chandler of Plantersville Route Two; and our king was Mr. Burt Chandler of Plantersville Route Two. The prettiest costume was won by Miss Patty Burnett of Maplesville Route Two. The party was enjoyed by everyone.—Lossie Brasher, Reporter.

FARMING SHOULD BE EASIER DURING 1946

Good news for a cold winter day or night. Long tails, "French" cuffs and pleated bosoms have been authorized for men's shirts by the WPB which also removed restrictions against collars, sashes and frogs on masculine pajamas and lounging wear.

W1, X1, Y1, Z1 and GREEN N-8—now valid—expire February 28, 1946.

SUGAR: Sugar Stamp No. 38 now valid—expires December 31.

Tires

Motorists in south Alabama were urged today by Irby A. Jones, OPA District Director, to continue a 11 conservation measures on tires, including recapping, during November.

National passenger tire and large size truck tire quotas for November are the same as for October and other recent months, Mr. Jones said.

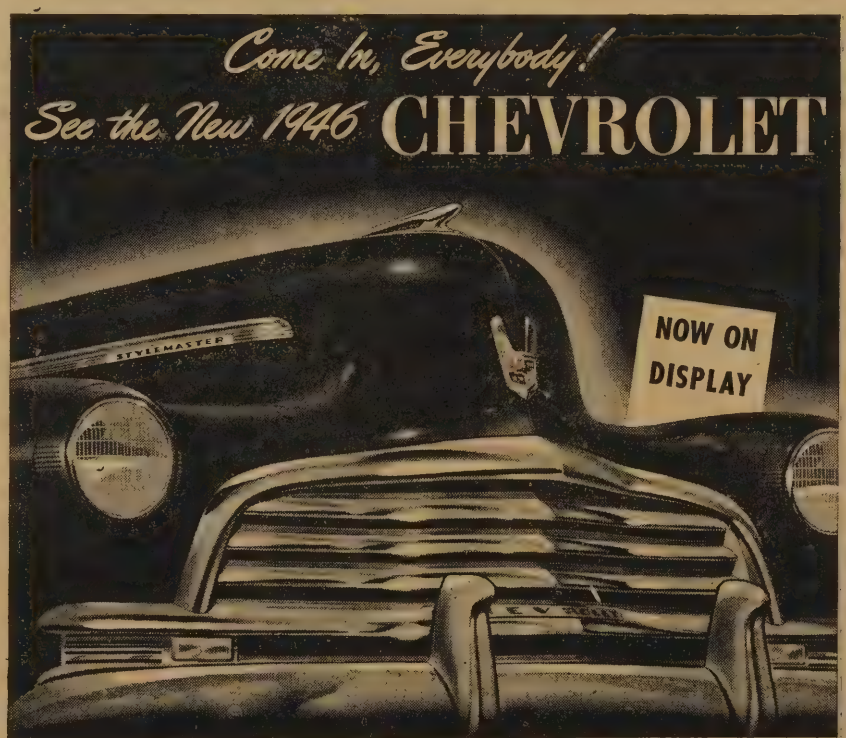
The passenger tire shortage continues to remain most acute with demands far exceeding available supplies, he advised. Due to this shortage, local boards are limiting certificates to applicants who have no other means of getting to their jobs or of earning their livlihood. Many persons who can use other means of transportation to continue in their jobs will have to be denied passenger tire certificates during this extreme shortage.

Shoes and Cars Not Rationed

Last week's removal of rationing restrictions on shoe and passenger cars is in direct accordance with OP A's policy of releasing items from rationing as soon as supply permits, Director Jones said in Montgomery today.

Production of ration-type shoes has increased greatly since V-J Day, he pointed out. Approximately 28 million pairs were made in October as against 20 million in August. Prospects are that output for November and December will reach 29 or 30 million pairs, he added.

New cars are not being rationed since the removal of ration restrictions will not jeopardize essential transportation in this country, Mr. Jones continued.



The total number of passenger cars still in service is estimated to be 23,400,000, more than enough to keep needed civilian transportation going.

Most nuts are at least half fat. Chopped nuts added to biscuits, muffins, waffles, or cookies, give flavor and a crisp note. Usually, 1-4 to 1-2 cup of chopped nuts to each cup of flour is a good allowance.

FULL COOPERATION IS ASKED BY U. S. EMPLOYMENT MANAGER HERE

An appeal for "full-scale" community cooperation" with efforts to effect orderly re-employment in Chilton County came today from Manager Beasley of the Clanton United States Employment Service. Manager Beasley said that there is a serious need of more jobs for available workers here.

"The United States Employment Service Office must have the full support of the community if it is to discharge its responsibilities to veterans and displaced war workers now applying in increasing numbers at our office," he said.

"Since the end of the war, the traffic in our office has increased tremendously and it is becoming increasingly difficult to find jobs for these seeking work," he added.

Mr. Beasley said that if the community is to furnish employment to the men and women who were returning from the armed forces and find jobs for displaced war workers as well as new entrants into the labor market, new job opportunities must be developed and employers must file job orders regularly with the USES Office. "Unless these people are given jobs, they will go elsewhere and their services will be lost," he added.

"We are just emerging from a period when every type of industrial service and agricultural activity was short of help," Mr. Beasley said. Stores, restaurants, laundries, small shops and other civilian services have been operating without sufficient workers. Now is the time for these places to register their needs with the employment service. We want to be able to give the best and quickest service possible in placing returning veterans and returning war worker, who have migrated to other areas. To this end we will need the whole-hearted cooperation to the entire community.

"The Employment Service offers the means of bringing jobs and workers together promptly in an orderly manner. Displaced war workers and returned veterans must find jobs in an economy in which the nature and location of job opportunities are undergoing profound changes. They must have access to an effective, free employment exchange which can help them make the occupational, industrial or geographic shifts necessary during the transition period.

"It is principally through the facilities of the public Employment Service that employers and workers in widely separated geographic areas can be brought together in an orderly fashion. Through its knowledge of job opportunities and labor supply on a nation-wide basis, and through its inter-office recruitment facilities, and public Employment Service has made a considerable contribution to the prompt employment of workers unable to find jobs in their own communities, and to the adequate staffing of industries expanding in some areas where there is a general labor shortage or a shortage of particular skills.

"The tools we have in the Employment Service Office which are designed to aid in fitting persons to particular jobs and the other facilities used in job replacement are available to all employers and workers in this area and we hope everyone needing these services will take advantage of them.

EASY WAY TO PROTECT CORN FROM WEEVILS

Corn weevils probablby eat as much corn n Alabama as livestock and poultry combined, report county agents in most areas of the state.

They further state that this is the proper time of year to kill weevils in corn. Clean out the crib and disinfect with a strong solution of boiling hot lye water before corn is placed in crib.

If the crib isn't tight, line the walls and floors with old cardboard or better still building paper. A crib must be reasonably tight for successful treatment with high life or carbondisulphide, the latter being the chemical name.

After the corn is in the crib, secure a number of pie plates or other shallow containers. Buy 1 gallon commercial Carbondisulphide for each 1,000 cubic feet space in crib. Pour this material into the plates or containers and close the crib.

Do not go near the building with any kind of fire or lighted cigarette, cigar or pipe. This material is highly explosive and is very, very dangerous in the presence of fire. Keep the crib closed 48 hours. Open up and air out before entering. Livestock should be removed from near the building during treatment.

Two such treatments — one when corn is all in and another in about three months should control weevils in a reasonably tight crib.

HOME - MADE TIME - LABOR SAVING FARM DEVICES

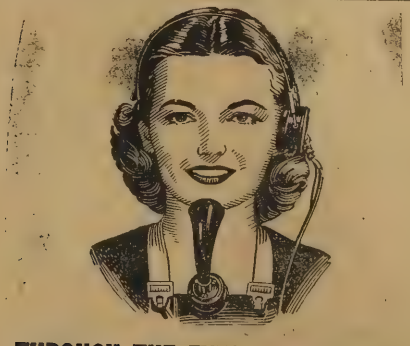
A woodsaw from an old car motor, a shower bath from a barrel, animal-proof hen nests, and a rake and weed cutter from odds and ends, are some of the home made time—and—labor-savers devised by farmers.

For example, L. K. Hitt of Autauga County, Alabama, made himself some "animal-proof" hen nests. First he made only one set of nests with room enough for ten hens; but the hens liked it so much two or three of them began to crowd in each space and that, of course, caused them to break some of their eggs. To dodge this trouble, he built enough for his entire flock. The way they are arranged the hens enter through an opening off the gorund, small enough to keep out animals such as dogs. Each row of nests has a hinged cover which can be lifted to make it easy to gather eggs.

J. D. Pollan of Quitman County Mississippi, made a good garden rake for only seven cents. To do it he simply drove large spikes into a strong narrow board, then attached a five-foot handle through a hole drilled in the center of the "spike board."

Guy Brown of LaFayette County Arkansas, needed a weed cutter. To make it he took the blade of an old handsaw and sharpened both edges. For the handle he used a broom stick which he fastened securely.

R. J. Doss of Randolph County, North Carolina, converted an old car motor and frame into a woodsaw, that in an hour or so he says will rip up enough wood for several weeks. But his really master achievement is a shower bath which he rigged up in his pump house. Each morning in warm weather he takes a few minutes to pump water through a hose up into an overhead barrel. A pipe leads down inside the building and the water, after standing in the bright sun all day, is comfortably warm in the evening.



JACKSON CHAPEL

Rev. C. C. Haun of Thorsby will meet with the people of this community next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Following the service will be a discussion on Community Activities The discussion will be open to all.

The entire community is invited to attend this meeting and take part in the discussion. The people in other communities are also invited to come and take part. Your presence is needed.—J. H. Jackson.

Effective October 31, the 5-cent butter subsidy to prevent undue rise of consumer prices has been declared off. OPA will permit creameries and wholesalers to increase their ceiling prices by the amount of the subsidy, or 5 cents per pound.

THROUGH THE EYES OF A FRIEND

Customers are people. And the Telephone Company has always considered customers in that light—as individuals, like the men and women who make up our own company.

This friendly feeling, we are happy to say, is reflected in the progress that Alabama and the Telephone Company made together through the years. It is this same kind of partnership that makes the future sparkle with promise.

Like Alabama, the Telephone Company is buckling down to its postwar tasks. For the 3,700 men and women of the Telephone Company in this state, it means the greatest expansion program in our history in Alabama. It's a full and complete program, designed to meet the state's industrial and agricultural needs of the future. It means the expenditure of millions of dollars in Alabama.

Specifically, the program will provide telephones for all who have been waiting for them. This is one of our first jobs! A greatly expanded telephone program for our farmer friends is also in process. Expansion of long distance service is being scheduled too. It will include the installation of coaxial cables to handle more calls with speed and convenience for you, and provide more facilities for that exciting visual art—television. A mass of construction is to be done and a new service to motor vehicles is also in the offing.

Here's a program of achievement, to be worked out together by Alabama and the Telephone Company as they have worked out their attainments of the past. By mutual understanding and cooperation, Alabama and the Telephone Company will grow greater than ever.

It's a big program that shall become a reality as fast as materials become available—a reality to be translated into prosperity and payrolls for the people of Alabama. For a business is like an individual. If he fares well, his community fares well with him. And that is the way it should be, among friends.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Free Bargaining Rule for Postwar Pay Settlements; Square Deal for All Goal of U.S. Foreign Policy

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

President Truman enunciates U. S. foreign policy before 1,000,000 listeners in Central park, New York, on Navy Day. (See Foreign Policy.)

LABOR-CAPITAL:
On Own

In reiterating his faith in free enterprise, President Truman puts the question of postwar wages squarely up to capital and labor, allowing them to work out their differences within the structure of the government's stabilization policy.

Presenting his program after conferences with top business and labor leaders, the President laid down a guide to resolve unrest created by the slash in reconversion wages due to the loss of wartime overtime, and reflected in the CIO-United Automobile Workers and Oil Workers demand for a 30 per cent pay boost and the United Steel Workers stand for a $2 a day raise.

In asking for general wage increases to maintain high take-home pay, with price adjustments permissible in hardship cases, the President said industry was well able to afford boosts because of reduced labor costs, downward reclassification of many jobs, high productivity per worker and tax credits where company earnings fall below normal peacetime levels. At the same time, however, Mr. Truman warned labor not to be excessive in its demands so that a profitable position for industry could be preserved, assuring future expansion.

Recognizing the probabilities of hardships in many low-price industries in the event of wage increases, the President's program calls for a readjustment of prices in cases where past pay boosts have not equaled the wartime rise in living costs; where differences in compensation exist among plants in the same industry or locality, or where higher wages are necessary to attract workers to essential enterprises.

In outlining his program for industrial peace, Mr. Truman also asked congress for reconsideration of legislation to authorize maximum unemployment compensation of $25 weekly for 26 weeks and permit the government to plan for full employment in any year where estimated private enterprise fails to absorb the labor supply.

FOREIGN POLICY:
Await Results

Though the objectives of President Truman's foreign policy declaration met with broad approval, critics of the administration's postwar diplomacy adopted a watch-and-wait attitude for the implementation of the program.

The President's pronouncement came at a ticklish period in world politics, when internal trouble brewing in China between the nationalists and communists; native populations in the East Indies and Indo-China clamoring for self-rule; the U. S. and Britain at odds with Russia over the establishment of popular governments in the Balkans, and demand rising for a review of economic policy for Germany.

In speaking to the world from Central Park, New York, Mr. Truman elaborated on broad principles covering all of the areas of these disputes, promising to bring the full force of American might for the preservation of world peace. He declared the U. S. stood for:

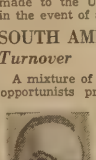
Self government for all people prepared for it without interference from any foreign source.

No recognition for any government imposed upon a nation by a foreign power and prevention where possible of forceful imposition of such a government.

Economic collaboration among all nations for improved living conditions and establishment of freedom from fear and from want.

Though recognizing the complications inherent from the natural desire of individual nations to secure the best possible advantages for themselves, the President declared no differences existed among the great powers which could not be resolved. Both patience and understanding would be needed, he said, and results would not be as dramatic as those of war.

WAR CRIMES:
Try 'Tiger'



Accused of laxity in the control of his troops, and countenancing atrocities, Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, once the celebrated "Tiger" of the Japanese army, stood trial in Manila as a war criminal in proceedings that promised to serve as a warning to Asiatic commanders of the future.

Attired in a natty grey-green uniform, with a sport shirt with an open collar, Yamashita, conqueror of Malaya and the Philippines early in the war, listened attentively as a parade of witnesses charged Jap troops with bayoneting women and children, murdering underground suspects and looting.

Though diffident and wary, Yamashita, defended by U. S. military counsel, put up a stiff fight for his neck, with his attorneys questioning witnesses closely on details and seeking to establish the martial character of many of the reported executions. Intent on justice, the erstwhile "Tiger's" American attorneys indicated an appeal would be made to the U. S. supreme court in the event of an adverse decision.

SOUTH AMERICA:
Turnover

A mixture of quick Latin temper, opportunists preying on immobile masses, and the relative disorganization of countries due to inadequate communications, South American politics took another dramatic twist with long-time Pres. Getulio Vargas' retirement in Brazil, and succession by Judge Jose Linhares.

Getulio Varga

Per usual the army figured in the turnover, reportedly countering a Vargas-backed movement to postpone the forthcoming presidential elections by threatening to seize power. In seeking to defer the presidential balloting, the constituinte organization proposed the naming of a popular assembly first to draw up a constitution, a maneuver that would have permitted Vargas to dominate the proceedings.

In reportedly bucking Vargas, the army might well have remembered his suspension of the presidential election in 1937 during a red-hot campaign, and his dissolution of congress in the same year because of bickering which he said prevented orderly government. Reputed to be a benevolent dictator, Vargas first achieved recognition in 1927 as head of Rio Grande do Sol, where he established a model state bank.

NEW AUTOS
First Come

To anxious Americans stirred by the first-come, first-serve basis for new automobile sales, production information from the industry's manufacturing plants was of utmost interest.

Despite removal of rationing control over car distribution, the volume of output will still determine the extent to which the pent-up postwar market will be satisfied; especially if dealers respect the government's counsel to consider the needs of essential users first. With an increasing number of trade-ins, however, more used cars will supplement the over-all supply.

Of the big three in the automobile field, Ford and General Motors already are turning out hundreds of cars per day, while Chrysler is finishing preparations for large production following extended war activity. Smaller manufacturers also are well on the road to substantial output.

With only labor difficulties threatening increased output, Ford presently is turning out 460 cars a day and hopes to up production to 2,000 a day by the end of the year. In General Motors plants, current Chevrolet manufacture has totaled 500 a day, with a goal of 6,800 a day within a year; Pontiac 150 a day and 1,800 a day by February; Buick 100 a day and 1,800 a day by March 1; Oldsmobile 100 a day and 1,300 by March 1, and Cadillac 80 a day and 320 by next spring.

Among other manufacturers, Packard is turning out 50 cars a day with an objective of 8,000 by the end of 1945, and Hudson is producing 120 daily with a goal of 300,000 within the next year. Nash assembly also is underway.

Though containing no radical provisions, all new automobiles promise new mechanical improvements, interior refinements and slight modification of styling, especially in the front.

Mystic Wonder

Therese Neumann

To 22-year-old Harold Ditman of New Orleans, La., a U. S. army chaplain's assistant, went the singular experience of witnessing the agony of legendary Therese Neumann, 42, of Konnersreuth, Germany, with the Christ-like wounds in her hands, 9 thorn-like holes around her head and the torn flesh at her wrists.

It was on the first Friday of the month when Ditman saw Saintly Therese, long a medical and theological marvel, suddenly stiffen, grit her teeth and moan and groan. Bloody sweat appeared on her wrists as she repeated the words Christ was said to have uttered before Pilate. Her wounds started bleeding and blood poured from the holes about her head. Her eyes shone with an almost blinding light.

For 3 hours Therese bled, Ditman said, then she lapsed into unconsciousness for about 30 minutes. Standing 6 feet tall and weighing more than 210 pounds, she is reported not to have tasted food nor drink for 17 years, and merely touches the wafer to her mouth in holy communion.

AGRICULTURE:
Production Guide

To be presented as a guide rather than as a goal for 1946 farm output, the department of agriculture is shortly expected to outline a production program equaling this year's, with alterations in some individual items to reflect postwar readjustments.

With no over-all decrease in output expected before 1947, the USDA reportedly will ask for maintenance of current corn and wheat acreage, appreciable increases for sugar beets and cotton, expansion in cover crops and pasture, a slight decrease for potatoes and sharp reductions for soybeans and flaxseed.

Requirements for cattle and hogs will remain at 1946 levels but big cutbacks are expected to be asked for both chickens and eggs. At the all-time top of 123 billion pounds, milk production is considered too high and a drop of 5 billion pounds may be in the offing for next year.

FOREIGN ASSETS:
Base for Trade Boom

With foreign countries expected to possess 30 billion dollars in expendable assets by the end of 1945, possibilities for a heavy postwar American export trade loom large.

In compiling figures on the assets of foreign countries, the Institute of Life Insurance revealed that of the 30 billion dollars, 75 per cent would represent readily available purchasing power in gold, dollar balances, American currency held abroad and short term investments.

Fly Fresh Produce to Winter Markets

Flying farm produce from sunny California to winter markets within 48 hours after harvest has proved a practical "dream," a 90-day test, establishing the practicality of the plan.

The use of super-cargo planes, such as a Consolidated Vultee with a payload of 18,500 pounds, and of specially designed wirebound crates of reduced weight, has cut the cost of perishable air shipments from 26 cents to 15 cents per pound for a 2,000-mile flight, flight tests revealed.

The test proved that there was a very large and definite undeveloped market in the Northeast for sun-ripe, tropical and semi-tropical fruit, such as figs and natal plums, as well as freshly picked lettuce, asparagus, strawberries, melons, etc.

Sounder Education Needed To Maintain Free World

Economics and Geography Among Studies Required to Ground Students in the Problems at Home and Abroad.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

(This is the first of two articles on the subject of the "new reconversion.")

In the last two months the public has learned a lot about the importance of industrial reconversion. For many more months, business men, with the help of the best technical advice they could obtain, have been preparing to shift from wartime to peacetime production. Government has shared the knowledge of its experts and proffered its co-operation. Labor has contributed its suggestions. All three know what they want. Together they hope to obtain a successful synthesis.

But what many people do not realize is that the nation, the whole world, for that matter, is facing another reconversion problem, equally as difficult to solve, equally as important to achieve. It is the reconversion of our whole educational system, and upon its success depends the political future of democracy and its economic future as well, as embodied in the theory and outworking of free enterprise.

It is no exaggeration to say that our current educational system, which along with our wartime industrial system made Allied victory possible, is no more adapted to meet the new and startling problems of the postwar world than the Japanese defense could meet the atomic bomb.

Enlightened educators everywhere realize this. In a short time experts will meet in London to work out a program outlined in San Francisco by the men and women who planned the educational and cultural council of the United Nations. Here at home and in other democratic countries, domestic educational policies are being reshaped to meet the new conditions.

Education for world freedom is an important objective; education for freedom in the land of the free is equally important, for it is the foundation stone of world democracy. We have the task of reconverting our own antiquated machinery so that it will be geared to produce and maintain freedom. The United Nations' task is to build new machinery which will evolve a product which must displace the Nazi-Fascist teachings which still have their hold on a large segment of the population. Our own product must be both a weapon of offense and of defense.

We have a powerful example in the need for this in the demonstrated strength of the Nazi ideology and the weakness of what we have so far produced to combat it.

Nazi Propaganda Remains Strong

A report made public only a week or two ago reveals how "Naziism at its blackest," as the report describes it, is being kept alive in a series of "resistance clubs" in Germany scattered from the North sea to the Bavarian mountains. Allied investigators have pieced together an appalling picture of a widespread activity based upon race hatred, and other Nazi principles with which the German youth has been so thoroughly indoctrinated in a manner pointed out in these columns some time ago and which I then said must be dealt with eventually.

The offense is powerful, and the weakness of our defense is illustrated in recent dispatches telling us how Nazi propaganda is affecting the viewpoint of the American army of occupation. A major is reported as doubting the truth of the atrocity stories in the concentration camp of Dachau located only a few miles from where he was stationed. American soldiers are heard parroting the familiar Goebbels' fabrication that Germany was forced into the war; that Hitler had his faults but was really great in many respects, or if Hitler's glory is found to be too strong a goat he is used as a scapegoat to excuse German war guilt.

I have just come from a long talk with one of America's great educators, John Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education. It was he who introduced me to the phrase, "the new reconversion."

"Our democratic system is threatened from within and without," he said to me earnestly. "The American school gave our polyglot nation the solidarity to carry on the war successfully. But," he added, "we have severe tests ahead. We must educate for freedom, and educate for existence in a newly integrated world of which we are an integral part. We must understand our own problem and the problems of others."

I couldn't help applying this theory to the stories from Germany. A thorough understanding of democracy is proof against Nazi propaganda. An understanding of other peoples and events beyond our borders which affect us—as the rise of Hitler and Mussolini affected us—would make us deaf to German prevarications and excuses.

In order to meet the threats against democracy from within and from without, Mr. Studebaker believes, with most of his colleagues, that our present educational system will have to be thoroughly renovated. "Both the plant and the product must be remodeled," he says.

He chose two subjects—geography and economics—as examples of how the product must be altered.

Knowledge of Conditions Vital

Geography is important because it is a study of the world in which we live. It is a study of the peoples who live in the world—of our very near, thanks to jet propulsion and atomic energy, if not always very dear neighbors. Geography is also the study of the pursuits, the industries of the people of the world. Its grasp is essential if we are to bring intelligent thought to judgment of events and the conditions at home and abroad and their effect upon each other and upon us.

"And yet, geography was never taught to our people," Mr. Studebaker says. "We stop teaching it at the eighth grade. The younger children, from three to eight, are taught by teachers who themselves never had more than eighth grade instruction in the subject."

And his second example of one of our educational products which must be strengthened, economics, "belongs still less to the people."

Only 5 per cent of the high school pupils ever studied economics, he informed me, and only 5 per cent of these ever learned anything about international trade.

"How can we possibly meet the problems arising now if we do not understand this subject? How can we possibly maintain free enterprise if we cannot pass a considered judgment on the questions that the papers are full of every day? How can a person say whether a wage increase is fair if he has never studied the simplest theories of supply and demand, or the more complicated relations of wages, costs, profits?"

And in the international field, he continued, how could a person who had never learned the fundamentals of international trade know whether a tariff was justified, whether a cartel was dangerous, whether certain foreign business activities benefitted the people as a whole, whether free competition or government subsidy was a better policy? How could they advise their congressman to vote on the Bretton Woods agreement, or the policy of foreign loans?

Just as geography suffers because its teaching ends before maturity is reached (maturity in this sense is the 15-16 year group, roughly high school age), economics is begun too late. It is offered as a one-year, high school course and boiled down into such a concentrated potion that not only are vital elements omitted (such as international trade) but it becomes a dry and highly abstruse subject. Furthermore, since it is often an elective (a subject I'll touch on in a later article), it may be omitted entirely because it is "hard."

These two subjects are only two examples of those which should, in Mr. Studebaker's opinion, make up a solid "core" of education available to all.

"This core," he says, "is essential if we are to build solidarity in a democratic society. A certain group of vital, basic subjects which will help us understand the problems that threaten democracy, the down-to-earth facts necessary to give us the basis for a sound faith in our way of life."

An eye-bank is being established, the purpose of which is to make available healthy corneal tissue to restore sight to those who are blind through an affliction of the cornea. The system is similar to the blood-banks and no less valuable. I wish they would establish a hair-bank.

Baby Primrose

The baby primrose is a popular house plant. It takes a long time for it to flower from seed, so it is a good idea to buy well-established plants from commercial growers. They are available in late fall or early winter.

Fish Storage

If you want to hold fish in the refrigerator for some time coat the fish with lemon juice and cover with waxed paper. There will be no odor.

Book Appreciation

Teach children to wash hands thoroughly with soap and water before using school or library books. This will develop habits of cleanness and appreciation for books at the same time.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Where they are and How they are

We received a very nice letter this week from Griel Popwell, USN, which was headed "U.S.A. Bound," and the blue jacket seemed very much pleased over the fact that he would soon be back in the states. He is aboard the U S S TENNESSEE, which is supposed to get into the tates the 7th of December. According to that, he will probably arrive here with 'Ole St. Nick. In such case, I imagine that will be about the nicest Christmas Griel has had in a long time. Anyway our best wishes are for him and his early arrival home to good 'ole Chilton County soil, as he says it.

Griel also states the fact that he is proud of the 17 months he spent aboard the U S S TENNESSEE, which has been a grand 'ole fighting ship and has made quite a record for her.elf.

James Dennis, S 2-C USNR, whose home is on Route 1, has been honorably discharged from the Navy at the Naval Separation Center, Nashville Tenn., the Navy recently announced.

Bennie Lee Headley S 2-C of this city served on the U S S INDIANA, when she dropped anchor in Tokyo Bay with the victorious Third Fleet following the end of the war with Japan.

The INDIANA, one of the newest battleships, has a record that includes operations at New Guinea, Guadalcanal, Rennell Island, New Georgia Marcus Island, Tarawa, Marshall Island, Truk, Satawan, Ponape, Marianas, Iwo Jima and Okinawa. She was one of the first battleships ever to bombard the Japanese homeland.

The INDIANA was back in San Francisco on October 27th to take part in the observance of Navy Day

Sgt Tyndall A. Reeves, 38, of Rt 1, Thorsby, Ala., ha been honorably discharged from the Army Air Forces after faithfully serving since April 7, 1943. He was a Radio Mechanic during his enlistment, but intends to return to his old civilian occupation of plumber.

Melvin L. Carter, seaman, first class, helped sail the submarine chaser, U S S PC 463, into Tokyo Bay to participate in the occupation of Japan. The 463, following a tour of submarine patrol in the Atlantic, went to the Pacific early this year to become the leader of assault waves at Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

A recent letter from another old friend, Jesse A. Culp, formerly of the Isabella Community, who is now in the Navy V-12 unit says, "Here I am way up north for the winter at Lewisburg, Pa., attending Bucknell University."

He says the campus is located on a high hill overlooking the historic Susquehanna River.

Jesse expects to be there until the first of July after which he hopes to trade the A-S rating for the title of Aviation Cadet. Good luck to him may his dreams be fullfilled. And we will keep the NEWS going to him as he insists upon it. We hope he enjoys it more each week.

Last Friday night, while at the football game between the Clanton "Tigers" and the Holtville "Bulldogs," I became very puzzled and wondered as I was at a football game or a veterans league Well, it turned out—I was pretty well in the middle of both. First, my husband, Cecil Carter, veteran of 65 combat missions in the European Theatre, and I, were sitting with Harold Lawrence, also a veteran and his wife. Who should come strolling along but Maurice Johnson, L. D. Easterling, Alex Arnold and Bob Sumner—all veterans except Maurice, who is re-enlisting at the end of a 90-day furlough. This made the 'ole gang almost complete with an exception of several who came in later They were: Ermond Johnson, Preston Little, Junior Littlefield—and, oh, well there's others of course who will show up soon and the little gang will be re-established—and as for myself, I'm beginning to wonder what WILL happen when they all do get together. Anyway, it is great to have them all back home in civie again.

Cpl Robert D. Atchison is discharged from the U. S. Army after spending forty months overseas He is visiting his brother, Mr Willie Hays this week.

For Military Merit and wounds received in action, which resulted in his death, Dick Kemp was recently awarded the Infantryman's Badge and Purple Heart Posthumously.

Pvt. Raymond Cox left Saturday for Camp Blanding, Fla., after spending a 15-day furlough here with his wife, parents and friend..

Second Lt. James E. Neeley, better known to the high school gang as "Ed" Neeley, has been honorably relieved from active duty with the Army Air Forces. Retaining his commission and rank, he is still subject to recall at any time during the present emergency.

Ed entered the army in June, 1943, and was assigned as a B-29 Pilot at RAAF, Roswell, N. M., a B-29 Transition School of the Central Flying Training Command

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Neeley of Route 4, Clanton.

Our apologies to Sgt. James Duke Heflin for neglecting to use his proper title in last week's issue. As you see he isn't just plain James Duke Heflin, but SGT JAMES DUKE HEFLIN, U. S. ARMY H[illegible] spending a 14-day furlough here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Heflin. At the end of his furlough, Sgt. Heflin will return to the Walter Convalescent Hospital at Daytona Beach, Fla., where he is in the Educational Reconditioning Program.

Paul Sherwood Holley, CM 2-C, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley of Route Two, received his honorable discharge from the Navy after completing 28 months duty overseas on the Pacific.

COTTON TO BE USED IN PRODUCING PAPER

The Department of Agriculture has announced a diversion program for using cotton in the manufacture of paper.

The program is designed to (1) develop new uses for cotton; (2) help reduce the large surplus stocks of short staple, low grade cotton; (3) furnish additional critically needed raw material for making high grade paper; (4) aid in providing warehouse space needed for the new crop.

A maximum of 50 million pounds of cotton not less than 3-4 inch in staple, and of grades not lower than the lowest grade in the universal standard for American upland cotton may be used under the program.

"Rag-content" paper manufacturers who receive approved applications from the Department, on compliance with program provisions, may receive incentive payments on the amount by which the cost of cotton delivered at paper mills exceeds 8½c per pound. The maximum rate of payment under the program, however, will be 4c per pound. Under present ceiling prices on rag-content paper, payments up to 4c per pound are necessary to enable manufacturers to utilize cotton at 12½c to 13c per pound (delivered) as compared with rags and clippings at much lower prices.

Much of the cotton under this program is expected to be used in making papers for war bonds, currency, photographs, maps, insurance policies and for other uses which require paper that must stand considerable handling, or which must last for a long period.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Put every acre to its proper use. Treat every acre according to its needs.

With these two objectives in mind, two complete farm plans were made last week on the farms of Mr. A. C. Wells of Jemison and Lonnie Deramus of Verbena Routes.

Mr. Wells has planned to use Kudzu and Sericea for supplemental grazing and for hay. Oats will be used for grain as much as possible. He has planned to build a rotation around Kobe Lespedeza. Oats will be planted in the Fall; and next spring, lespedeza will be planted in with the oats. After the oats are harvested, either for hay or grain, lespedeza will occupy the land until Fall.

The lespedeza can be harvested for hay of seed. Small grain will be drilled on the stubble, or if he wants only legume hay, plenty of seed will have shattered off the lespedeza to insure a perfect stand next year. Oats and lespedeza will occupy the land for two to three years, and then the land will be put in row crops for two years. Mr. Wells has also planned to set aside one field for winter grazing which will be rotated between oats one year and Crimson Clover and Rye Grass the next year.

Lonnie Deramus, an FSA client, is going to plant four acres of Crimson Clover and Rye Grass next year. His hay will come from Kudzu and Sericea which will be located in meadow outlets and on land which is too steep for continuous cultivation. Crotalaria and winter legumes will be used for conserving and improving his row-crop land.

Mr. Willard Hicks of Maplesville is planning to dig kudzu crowns again this year. Last year he dug quite a few crowns. If anyone has crowns to dig, he will be glad to dig them. Locally dug crowns are usually preferred rather than crowns from other places.

Don't use large quantities of water in cooking vegetables. In almost every case, the loss of food value increases directly with the amount of water used. And when the food value goes, the flavor usually goes with it.

WITH PEACE CIVILIAN CAN ANTICIPATE NEW CANNED FOODS SOON

Now that the post-war era has become a reality with the downfall of Japan, citizens of Chilton County can look forward to dramatic developments in canned foods, many of which were first packaged for the armed forces, according to W. C. Stolk, vice president of the American Can Company.

Mr. Stolk said that the approximately 3,170,000 cans of food opened annually by residents of the county undoubtedly will be largely increased with the arrival of the new post-war items. It will be no trick at all, he said, for a housekeeper to put together a three or four course meal by making use of the canned foods she should shortly find on grocery shelves.

Among the new foods he listed are such items as canned hamburgers canned bacon, seafood cocktails and salads in cans, as well as a long list of meat new to a can, among them chicken stew with dumplings, beef and gravy, pork with apple sauce, ham with raisin sauce and boned turkey.

SCREW WORMS ARE PLAYING HAVOC WITH LIVESTOCK

Alabama livestock producers are experiencing the worse screw worm infestation in the history of the state with prospects of damages becoming much worse within the next 40 days.

Writing to county agents, W. H. Gregory, API extension livestock specialist, attributes the heavy infestation to warm weather during February and March and the over-wintering of the insects in Florida.

In the letter to the agents, Mr. Gregory says that "an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure. It is very important that every animal be seen at least three times a week and observed carefully for the bloodstained liquid oozing from a wound which is the symptom of screw worm infestation.

"Smear No. 62 is the best remedy known for protecting wounded animals, and also for killing the worms in infested animals. It should be applied twice a week to any wound, no matter how small, to protect from infestation and to kill larvae in infested wounds.

"Under no conditions should animals be dehorned, branded or castrated during screw worm season."

Overall picture for farm machinery and equipment for use in producing 1946 crops and livestock:

WPB has released all restrictions on the sale of crawler tractors, and anyone who can find a tractor can buy one. Restrictions were also lifted on drag lines and motor graders.

Trucks probably will remain on the ration list for at least 90 days.

Truck tires and passenger tires will be rationed for at least another 90 days, or perhaps longer.

tires and farm implement tires has already been lifted.

Restriction on the sale of tractor

Military needs for hand tools have dropped sharply with the end of the war, and production is at a relatively high level. Since farm requirements are the principal ones on the civilian list, farmers can expect the supply to improve immediately.

Regulation of the distribution of copper wire may be lifted by the end of September.

Limitations on farm construction can be expected to be ended almost immediately. However, the stocks of lumber will improve only gradually with a nearly ample supply expected by next spring.

The production of fencing—both barbed wire and woven wire—should continue at a high rate with more on the market in a few weeks.

Metal roofing materials should improve in supply soon.

Electric motors for farmers are expected to be more plentiful in the immediate future.

Substantial Quality Food a Necessity on Winter Social Menu

Fiesta punch is delicious served either hot or cold. No sugar is required when one of the suggested substitutes is used, and the beverage can be quickly made a short time before guests arrive.

With so many families returning to the old home town, and couples who married during the war finally getting settled together, welcome parties are becoming quite the style. Social engagement books which looked blank are now filled again.

Yes, entertaining is due for a revival. This is the time, because the holiday season is approaching in full glory. Food is not the problem it was last year although there still are restrictions, and it's fairly easy to serve something nice and make the table look its prettiest.

If the group is mixed and there are a number of men (big eaters, now that they have learned to have lots of chow or go to mess regularly!), plan to have a substantial casserole dish with some hearty trimmings like big salads and rich-looking cakes or pastry.

Or, if the affair is to be just a snack, serve bread with a choice of fillings and the usual accompaniments like potato chips, pickles, olives, relishes, and punch or some favorite beverage.

Suggestion I.

Assorted Bread: Oatmeal, Raisin, White and Rye.

Sandwich Fillings: Nippy Cheese and Peanut Butter.

Relishes: Olives, Radishes, Carrot Sticks, and Celery Hearts.

Beverage: Orange Juice or Fiesta Punch.

Nippy Cheese Filling.

Combine equal parts of cream cheese and butter. Add salt and paprika to taste and 1 teaspoon each of finely minced parsley, pickles, olives and green pepper. Flavor with sardine paste.

Peanut Butter Filling.

Peanut butter may be served alone or it may be combined with any of the following for a delicious filling: jam, chopped bacon or grated raw carrots.

Fiesta Punch.
(Makes ½ gallon)

1 cup strong tea
¾ cup sugar, honey or corn syrup
½ cup lemon juice
1½ cups orange juice
1 cup grape juice
1 quart water

Make the strong tea by pouring 1 cup boiling water over 4 teaspoons of tea. Dissolve sugar or substitutes in the hot, strained tea. (The tea should steep first for 5 minutes.) For a hot punch, combine the tea with the fruit juices and add the water which should be boiling hot. Serve at once.

For cold punch, chill the tea and combine with well-chilled fruit juices and iced water. Garnish the punch with slices of orange and lemon.

LYNN SAYS

Care for Your Silverware: Clean, hot, soapy water is recommended for both flat serving pieces and tableware. Rinse in boiling water after washing and wipe dry as soon as possible.

To remove tarnish, use a good silver polish or wet a little sifted whiting with ammonia and apply with a soft cloth. Let stand until dry, rub off with soft cloth, rinse and polish with a second cloth or chamois.

Silver tarnished with egg should be cleaned immediately.

A small soft brush is best for cleaning ornamental pieces.

Silverware should never be heated directly or placed on the range. Serving dishes may be heated over hot water or kept warm on the radiator if an asbestos pad is placed under them.

LYNN CHAMBERS' IDEAL MENU

Oyster Rarebit
Crackers Jellied Vegetable Salad
Apricot Cobbler Cream
Tea, Coffee or Milk

Suggestion II.

Farm Sausage Casserole
Combination Salad Crusted Rolls
Favorite Cake
Beverage

The main dish for this hearty snack can be made ready before company comes, and then heated about half an hour before serving time rolls around.

Farm Sausage Casserole.
(Serves 6)

1½ cups broken macaroni
⅓ cup diced American cheese
1 tablespoon minced onion
¾ teaspoon salt
1½ cups thin white sauce
1 cup green peas, cooked
½ cup sauteed mushrooms
¼ cup chopped pimiento
1 pound pork sausages, broiled
Buttered bread crumbs

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain and rinse. Combine with all remaining ingredients, except sausages and bread crumbs. Place in casserole which has been greased. Top with sausages and sprinkle a few bread crumbs over the top. Heat in a slow (325-degree) oven for 25 minutes.

Combination Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 head lettuce
1 cucumber
2 to 3 tomatoes
1 bunch radishes
1 bunch small onions
1 green pepper
Celery curls
Carrot curls
French dressing

Wash all vegetables carefully and allow to chill. Break lettuce into chunks and line salad bowl. Toss in all other ingredients which have been sliced or cut into pieces and sprinkle french dressing over them.

Favorite Cake.

1 cup whipping cream
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder

Whip the cream until slightly thickened but not stiff enough to hold a peak. Fold in the sugar gently, the beaten eggs and vanilla. Add the flour which has been sifted with the baking powder and a speck of salt. Mix only until smooth. Place in two shallow cake pans and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 25 minutes. Cool. Frost with seven-minute icing and sprinkle with coconut. Or, frost with whipped cream and sprinkle with coconut.

For impromptu entertaining, there's nothing easier to prepare than a tray of sandwich spreads with assorted bread and health drinks of citrus fruit juices in colorful glasses.

Seven-Minute Icing.

1 egg white, unbeaten
3 tablespoons cold water
⅔ cup granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Place all ingredients in top of double boiler. Beat with rotary beater until mixed, then place over hot water, and continue beating until frosting stands up in peaks (about 7 minutes).

Ahead of the other foods the returned G.I. will look forward to are the good, homemade desserts. Whatever was his favorite when he left is sure to be his favorite when he returns. He has spent many hours thinking and dreaming of that dessert.

Chocolate has been a favorite of the serviceman. His favorite may have been chocolate ice cream, chocolate pie or chocolate cookies. The sizes of portions should be massize, he has learned how to eat in a big way and will not be at home when dainty portions are passed out. Milk seems to be the favorite beverage of returned servicemen. This might be served with the addition of chocolate or in form of a malted or egg malted drink, all of which will be welcomed. Give him a try with bread, raisin, nut, potato, or best of all a real home baked loaf. He may be tired of dark tack and stale white bread, and anxious to try something new and different.

EIGHT cows who appear in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Kid From Brooklyn," which stars Danny Kaye, have inherited a beard that once belonged to Douglas Fairbanks. But not as a beard. They're all dolled up for the dairy maid number, in which they're assisted by the 1946 class of Goldwyn girls. The cows make their debut wearing pearl earrings, fancy hats, and artificial eyelashes. That's where the beard comes in. The property man tried stiff black paper, then pipe cleaners, with no luck. But the beard was perfect.

THE FRUITS OF PUBLIC WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 6:1-8; Ephesians 5:15-21

GOLDEN TEXT—Praise ye the Lord. I will praise the Lord with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright, and in the congregation.—Psalm 111:1.

The center of every community should be the church. The house set aside for the worship of God is the gathering place of His people. There they find fellowship as they meet their Lord. He is in their midst exalted and mighty, but ready to enter every humble and contrite heart.

Our lesson shows us how the worship of God brings blessed results as His people meet.

I. Recognizing God's Presence (Isa. 6:1-4).

King Uzziah, who had begun well but had forgotten God, was at the end of his life a leper because of his sin and dying in disgrace. Israel which had known unprecedented prosperity under God's blessing now hardened its heart nationally against God and was also about to go into eclipse. God needed a man to speak for Him in such an hour, to bring to His people a message of judgment and also of blessed invitation. To prepare that man, the great Isaiah, God gave a remarkable manifestation of His glory and power.

It is essential that the man who speaks for God should first see the Lord high and lifted up and to hear of His holiness and glory. The negative tone of the present-day message, the lack of enthusiasm and interest in holy things, the low standards of personal holiness, the failure to preach boldly the truth regarding God's holy standards are to be explained by the fact that there has been no vision of the eternal holiness and glory of God.

II. Renewing by God's Power (vv. 5-8).

To see the holiness of God is to be immediately conscious of one's own sin and unworthiness. The obvious conclusion which one draws from that fact is that anyone who is proud, who is not concerned about his own sins and the sins of his people, is living far from God and has either never known or has forgotten about His divine holiness.

Isaiah spoke of the pollution of his lips, thereby confessing that his heart was not right. Whereof the heart is full, thereof speaketh the mouth, for we read that "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh" (Matt. 12:34). Remember that even though Isaiah was a believer he recognized the need of cleansing.

"Then" (v. 6)—what an important word! When Isaiah called out in humble confession, "then" he was cleansed. The turning point is right at that place for any life. Only when we come to the place of confession and contrition which Isaiah knew, can we expect the Lord to send the cleansing fire and the enabling power.

Reformation, turning over a new leaf, character development, all commendable in their place, are not sufficient. There must be a divine cleansing of the life if there is to be a commission to service.

III. Realizing God's Will (Eph. 5:15-17).

The ministry of the Church of God can serve no greater purpose than helping men and women to know the will of God. That wisdom (v. 17) comes through the teaching of God's Word and through the ministry of the Holy Spirit, both in the church and in the individual.

The Church (and that means every member) is to recognize that the evil day in which we live is a challenge to holy and effective living. Time is not to be wasted, or casually used. It is to be redeemed—every moment to count for God.

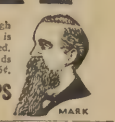
The walk of the believer is to be circumspect, that is, with "painstaking attention to details, under a sense of their importance," not a foolish walk, but a wise one.

IV. Receiving God's Spirit (5:18-21).

God wishes to fill His children with the Holy Spirit in such mighty overwhelming power that they are entirely under His control. Such Spirit-filled believers find their joy and satisfaction in the fellowship of those who sing the praises of God from the heart.

Being a Christian is not a depressing, sorrowful business. It makes you glad. It is God's people who sing and make melody. Some of us who have failed to appreciate this truth should begin now to "get happy" about our religion.

The Holy Spirit leads believers into a life of humility and self-denial (v. 21). Pride and self-exaltation are definitely ruled out.



Do not neglect the note of thanksgiving found in verse 20. The Church of Christ has so infinitely much for which to be thankful that actually ingratitude is a sin. How much blessing is lost because of it! Let us "give thanks always for all things."

X-RAY AND HEALTH

95, at the University of Wurzburg in Bavaria. Roentgen, a tall, slender, bearded physics professor, was at work in a small laboratory. He passed an electric current through a Crookes tube, noticed that mysterious rays penetrated a black cardboard shield and fogged a piece of sensitized paper.

Roentgen knew he had something, but he didn't know precisely what. So, borrowing the mathematical symbol for an unknown quantity, he called it X-ray.

THIS SCIENTIFIC "SEEING EYE," with power to penetrate flesh, cloth, wood and metal, underwent a gradual evolution as equipment and technique were improved.

Now, in diagnosis, doctors rely upon it to study bones, locate kidney and gall stones, spot tuberculosis, ulcers, tumors.

There are two common methods. One — the "still picture" kind — is known as radiography, where in a permanent X-ray image of any part of the body is put on a film. The other—the "movie" type—is known as fluoroscopy, whereby images of internal organs in motion are cast on a viewing screen.

A third, specialized medium, photo-Roentgenography, is well suited to mass X-ray chest examinations to disclose tuberculosis. The apparatus, installed in mobile laboratories, can go any place that can be reached by a truck.

IN ANOTHER FIELD—THERAPY—X-rays are useful in treating skin disorders, infections, gas gangrene and benign and malignant tumors.

X-ray had an important role in World War II. Photo-Roentgen units were employed in induction stations to keep the tubercle bacillus out of the armed forces. Twelve million films were shot; 120,000 deferments resulted. Seven hundred radiologists, physicians in the X-ray branch of medicine, donned uniforms. Portable X-ray machines were sent to field hospitals.

X-ray also served as an uncanny inspector in war plants as industry made wider use of the devices—the latest a 2,000,000-volt trouble-shooter mounted on a crane. The instruments were used to find flaws in castings, welds, bearings, propellors and crankshafts, and to put the finger on cavities and air bubbles in shells.

NOV. 21, 1945

AN IMPORTANT DATE FOR THOUSANDS OF ARMY VETERANS NOW IN CIVILIAN LIFE

Between now and November 21, thousands of Army veterans will reenlist in Uncle Sam's new volunteer peacetime Army. Because—men who have been discharged between May 12 and November 1 of this year and reenlist on or before November 21 will be able to return to the Army with the same grade as they held when discharged.

Men with six months of satisfactory service discharged as privates will, on reenlistment before November 21, be given the grade of private first class.

Men now in the Army who apply for discharge after NOVEMBER 1 for the purpose of reenlisting in the Regular Army will also retain their present grades, if they enlist within 20 days after discharge and before FEBRUARY 1, 1946.

"BEST JOB IN THE WORLD"

These special privileges are typical of the new law recently passed by Congress. Few opportunities for a lifetime career offer as many attractive advantages.

Can you think of any other job that would give you good pay, your food, clothing, quarters, free medical and dental care, world-wide travel, 30 days' furlough every year, education and training in any of nearly 200 skills or trades, and enable you to retire with a life income anytime after 20 years' service?

There isn't any! That's why a job in the Regular Army has been called "The Best Job in the World."

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE NEW ENLISTMENT PROGRAM

1. Enlistments for 1½, 2 or 3 years. (1-year enlistments permitted for men with 6 months' service.)

2. Men reenlisting retain their present grades, if they reenlist within 20 days after discharge and before Feb. 1, 1946. The same applies to men discharged between May 12 and Nov. 1, 1945, who reenlist before Nov. 21, 1945.

3. An increase in the reenlistment bonus to $50 for each year of active service since the bonus was last paid, or since last entry into service.

4. 20% extra pay when overseas.

5. Paid furlough, up to 90 days, depending on length of service, with furlough travel paid to home and return, for men now in the Army who enlist.

6. Mustering-out pay (based upon length of service) to all men who are discharged to reenlist.

7. Option to retire at half pay for the rest of your life after 20 years' service — or three-quarters pay after 30 years. (Retirement income in grade of Master or First Sergeant up to $155.25 per month for life.) All previous active federal military service counts toward retirement.

8. Benefits of GI Bill of Rights.

9. Family allowances for the term of enlistment for dependents of men who enlist or reenlist before July 1, 1946.

10. Choice of branch of service and overseas theater in Air, Ground or Service Forces on 3-year enlistments.

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1945 — NUMBER 46

Meetings Continue At Seventh - Day Adventist Church

By unanimous request of the audience present last Sunday night at the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Clanton, the meetings, scheduled to close that night, will continue on Sunday and Wednesday nights for the next few weeks. The revival services begun the night of November 4th, continued throughout the week as Pastor Victor Collins unfolded his theme on the Home of the Saved and what one must do to obtain it. The meetings were well attended and much interest was manifested as the speaker pointed out the Bible texts by throwing them on the screen and showed many beautiful pictures by way of illustration.

"Armageddon is the last battle ever to be fought and spells doom for the wicked of the earth," said Mr. Collins in his sermon Sunday night. "Our only hope of escaping the destruction of that battle is by trusting in God to deliver us," he continued. In every case when God has visited the earth with special destruction, such as the flood of Noah's time and the burning of Sodom and Gomorrah in the days of Lot, only those who followed God's instructions were saved. It will be the same in the day of God which is soon to come. The minister appealed to all to surrender themselves to God and serve Him daily, claiming His promise to freely forgive every sin and bring them safely through the time of trouble ahead.

The topic for this week's sermon on Wednesday night is, "What Is Jesus Doing Now" On Sunday night, November 18th, Pastor Collins will speak on "God's Prophetic Time-Table." The public is cordially invited to attend these meetings, which begin at 7:00 p.m.

CHILTON TIGERS TO SEE BLUE-GREY FOOTBALL GAME

The Chilton "Tigers" are all walking around with their chest puffed out and bragging about the wonderful spirit of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, who will be hosts to the "Tigers" at the Blue and Grey football game on December 29th, the first Saturday after Christmas.

The "Boys" have played hard this season and well deserve the trip to the game of the year.

The "Tigers" squad is composed of twenty-five boys who will attend this game.

White Furniture Company Changes Ownership

The White Furniture Company is now owned and operated by Truman Luker and Woodrow Harrelson. Mr. Luker was formerly assistant manager of Rhodes-Ferdue-Collins Furniture Co., of Montgomery, Ala., one of the largest stores in the Rhodes chain. Prior to this, he had several years experience in furniture and floor covering.

Mr. Harrelson was with the Knight & Bailey Furniture Co., of Montgomery, prior to joining the U. S. Army in 1941. He served overseas as pilot with the 5th Air Force in the South Pacific. Upon being honorably discharged this year, he was placed on the sales force of Rhodes-Perdue-Collins Furniture Co.

Both Mr. Luker and Mr. Harrelson have families and will make Clanton their home.

Messrs. Luker and Harrelson stated Monday, "It is our desire to serve the people of Clanton and surrounding territory in an honest and friendly way. We consider it a privilege and a pleasure to do all in our power to cooperate with the fine people of this community, in placing house furnishings in your home that will make it more comfortable and attractive. If we do not have what you desire, we will do our best to get it for you. Our Christian American homes mean much to us and we are glad that we can have a part in bringing to you furnishings that make homes more liveable. We deeply appreciate your patronage and you will find our store 'THE HOUSE OF COURTESY.'"

Mr. C. B. White will remain with the Company for the time being.

ETHEN L. JONES

REV. HICKMAN VISITS SON AT NAVAL BASE

Rev. A. T. Hickman, pastor of the Temple Church, left last Friday to go to Chicago to visit his son, Andrew Hickman, USN, where he is awaiting re-assignment.

Rev. Hickman returned Tuesday and reports a nice trip, only he says that he likes Alabama weather much better than that in Chicago.

In the pastor's absence Sunday, the Rev. Mrs. A. T. Hickman filled his pulpit at both services, which were enjoyed by everyone who attended.

OLIVER C. ROGERS

Mr. Oliver C. Rogers, age 62, died at his residence, Lawley, Ala., Tuesday at 3:00 p.m. Funeral services will be announced later by Spigener Funeral Home.

Kathleen Norris Says:

When the 'Dead' Man Comes Home

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"It breaks my heart to leave a lovely home and circle of loved friends her in Connecticut, and take up life again with a man whose nervous tempers I know only too well."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"MY HUSBAND was reported dead," writes Elaine Foster, from Bridgeport, Conn. "He was a marine at Bataan, officially declared killed in that terrible first rush. Instead, he had been sent on a scouting expedition, in which two men were killed, and he was taken prisoner.

"One year afterward I married again, this time far more happily than the first time. My first marriage had been at 18; it lasted seven years, during all of which time I knew we had made a mistake. We were both young and hot-tempered, and hard times and the illnesses of our little boy kept our nerves on the rack.

"This second marriage to a man I will call David, is a much more stable affair. He is 40, I am 27; I look up to him as a guide, philosopher and friend, as well as love him with all my heart. My small boy is devoted to him.

Broken Mind and Body.

"Harry, to call my first husband that, has come home injured in soul and body. He is lame, and although capable of doing any clerical work, his one idea is to go out to a horse ranch his cousin and uncle run in Montana, and live there. He wants me to go with him, and whether I go or not, he will claim Roy. I intend to fight for at least part time custody of my child, and it would break my heart to leave a lovely home and a circle of loved friends here in Connecticut, and take up life again with a man whose nervous tempers I know only too well. Have you any advice to give in these troubled circumstances? The shock of Harry's return cost me my expected baby, and I am in for some weeks of rest. During that time I want to think out the right thing to do, and your advice will help me."

My dear Elaine, I cannot help you, because these circumstances really come under a theological head; you are married to Harry, and for you there can be no other marriage. Your choice therefore is either to take your son and go off somewhere to make a life for yourself, not seeing David again, or to accompany Harry to Montana, and build a new life there, and if you are really as spiritually strong as you indicate in the more intimate part of your letter, you will find happiness somewhere along the road, if you follow that course.

This tragedy of the returning dead man is frequent in this war because of the enormity of the operations on a dozen fronts, and the fearful destructive power of modern munitions. In one case in my own family a young naval officer was imprisoned in a camp for two years with no opportunity to communicate with his family, then reported lost on the prison ship our own men bombed, and finally lost to sight for months. He is on his way home safe and sound now.

Another case is that of a friend's child who supposedly went down with a lost destroyer. This boy swam and floated five miles, scrambled up a beach, met friendly natives, lived with them doing underground work for more than a year, and is also on his way home. His wife, a pretty girl of 21, was within two weeks of a second marriage when his message came.

Shattered and Puzzled.

To adjust all these broken ends of life into a perfect whole and begin living normally again is more than some of these young persons can manage. They are shattered and puzzled by different claims and obligations, and don't know where to start in straightening things out. Infinite patience with the returning men, and a quiet, sane study of each problem is the only way through the terrible aftermath of war.

But in the first case I quote, it seems to me Elaine has one very real compensation in sight. To get out into the mountains of Montana will be the best possible thing for her little boy. He won't have to be anguished, as so many thousand children are, by being torn between the claims of father and mother. Perhaps in his improvement and his happiness she will find happiness for herself.

Another great compensation will be in the feeling she will have, that while it is not a conspicuous service to her country, it is a very real one, to try to make up to at least one wounded veteran the youth and health that the war has drained away. If every man coming back had a wife, a son, and a prospect of roughing it on a Montana horse ranch for a year or two, the greatest problem that America has to meet would be solved. If Elaine faces this hard change courageously, the prayers that she is praying for her light will be answered—full measure, pressed down and running over.

AGONIZING DILEMMA

Fortunately, few women have to face the agonizing dilemma that confronts the soldier's wife whose letter appears in this issue. Elaine heard from official sources that her husband, Harry, had been killed at Bataan. A year later she married again, this time more happily. The first marriage, in fact, was heading for the rocks when the war came, and the separation temporarily solved the problem.

But Harry was not killed. He is back now after years in a Jap prison camp, lame, irritable and unable to readjust himself. He wants to go West and live on his cousin's horse ranch, taking his wife Elaine, and their little boy.

This move is most distasteful to Elaine. She is happy with her second "husband," who is in many ways superior to Harry, in her eyes. She likes the new circle of friends she has acquired. All this she would have to give up if she goes with Harry. Nevertheless, as Miss Norris points out, Harry is still her husband—her only husband. This second man, David, is a victim of tragic circumstances. Elaine's duty is to stand by Harry the rest of her life, says Miss Norris.

"She will find happiness for herself."

HOME-MADE SOAP POWDER

Most of us have been able to get bars of laundry soap—even when we have not been able to find soap flakes, chips or powders on the market. And, as every home laundress knows—a bar of soap dissolves more quickly if it's shaved or grated or pulverized before it's used. It's no trick at all to make soap powder. Just be sure the soap is well dried. Cut it into pieces and run it through the meat grinder. Let it dry well, then pulverize. Or you may use a grater or cutter to make chips.

Fundamentals Needed In Postwar Education

Courses Must Be Centered Around Core of Subjects Stressing Human Relations; Physical Build-up Also Important.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

In a previous column I laid before you the vital need of reconverting our educational system if America is going to meet the challenge of other ideologies to the faith in our democratic institutions. I pointed out how poorly many of our occupation forces are testifying to their democratic convictions in the face of the geniality of our former enemies.

I took you into the office of Commissioner of Education John Studebaker who pointed out to me how reconverting educationally is as important as reconverting industrially if we are going to meet the problems of the day. Dr. Studebaker said that this could be achieved by making a solid core of education available to all. Such a core would be composed of certain basic studies which educators believe are essential to a solidarity of democratic thought. The commissioner of education sees this core as a reinforcement of mental iron in the moral structure of the nation.

When you talk about making this core available to all, that is not the complete picture. Men like Doctor Studebaker would have this group of basic studies required of all student, not just made available to them. And thereby, say the traditionalists, hangs a threat to the elective system under which many institutions of learning have been comfortably educating students. Under the system of free choice, College Joe and College Jane could pick the courses their hearts desired. If their hearts desired a little extra sleep in the morning, they could pick classes that would not require early rising. If extra-curricular activities were particularly heavy one semester, they did not have to take economics which was hard when Turkish architecture was a snap.

Too many students have been coming out of our institutions of learning without a basic concept of what our democracy is all about, say the educators who are crying for reconversion. If they don't select the courses that will give them that concept, they must be required to take them, these same men say—the future of our way of life is at stake.

Education Vital Force in State

It is a well-known fact that before the Nazis ever dreamed of world conquest they first restrained by force, those who were too old or too wise to accept Nazi indoctrination. The more malleable minds of the young were filled with the false doctrines of subordination to the state, race hatred and exaltation of might. Their other anti-democratic and anti-Christian principles were poured into the youth until there was produced a state in which the controlling element of the population was fanatically loyal to Nazism.

Democracy and Christian principles once instilled can produce just as strong a loyalty, just as enduring a faith, but there is a minimum of instruction in their true meaning that must be made available to everyone—more than that, that should be required study of everyone who would be a good citizen. This is the first way in which the destructive forces which are working against democracy can be arrested.

And so Doctor Studebaker presents the idea of a "core" around which can be built an understanding of the whole democratic system; how its parts can be fitted into one another and into a world which must, either be closely integrated or explosively antagonistic.

There is not space here to consider the details of the composition of this core. Two examples of the type of studies which Doctor Studebaker feels are essential, and which must be taught much more comprehensively and for a longer period than they are now, was given in the first article. They are economics and geography. There must be basic understandings and skills in the field of language. By that the commissioner means the channels by which we communicate and are communicated with—reading, writing, listening, speaking. Since radio broadcasts are heard daily by multiplied millions, critical listening should be a vital part of the basic educational program.

Since freedom of expression is an essential attribute of a democracy, citizens need to develop critical thinking in order to evaluate the powerful influence of communication and propaganda constantly brought to bear on them.

War Exposes Academic Weaknesses

During the war, certain major weaknesses in our educational system were bluntly exposed. Total rejections in the war for physical, psychiatric and educational reasons have been almost as numerous as the number of men who served in the army overseas. We may or may not need our young men to fight another war, but regardless of this, we need to improve school programs of health and physical education, including the early discovery of remediable defects to be corrected by family physicians and public health agencies. A nation that would be strong, must be strong physically.

Military authorities have also found a major weakness in the work of the schools in the failure to require older students to carry mathematics to the point of practical mastery.

The natural sciences gained a larger place in the field of education during the war, and they should continue to do so, according to Commissioner Studebaker. No adequate understanding of our civilization is possible without considerable knowledge of them. Moreover, many careers in trade, technical, professional and scientific pursuits, whether of industry, business or agriculture, are handicapped without a thorough scientific groundwork, laid in the elementary and secondary schools and for many, continued in the colleges and universities.

But one of the most basic segments of the core, in the opinion of Dr. Studebaker, should be made up of the social studies. It is upon this group that we have leaned most heavily in training for responsible citizenship — and this must continue. History and the other social studies are essential to the grounding of our citizens in the American tradition of political liberty, a knowledge of the structure of our republican form of government, and a firm attachment to the democratic faith, Doctor Studebaker says.

I said that it is the belief of important educators that a core of this type must become a "must" in the curricula of the nation, thereby casting overboard the traditional elective system whereby a student is given pretty much free choice in what he will study. This new approach is emphasized in one of the most widely quoted documents of recent publication, the Harvard study entitled, "General Education in a Free Society." This work has startled a number of people coming as it does from the institution that saw the elective system reach its most extreme form, for it recommends the abandonment of that system. In this document, the chief priest of the elective system points out the weaknesses of that long-cherished method.

Of course, it is one thing to set up curricula that will insure the fact that those attending school will get the basic studies. It is another to see that these required subjects are made available to all. Is it possible to produce and democratically distribute this basic core to all America?

Not yet. That is another must in the new reconversion. The expenditures now made on this priceless commodity are inadequate. But I am not dealing here with the finances of education. That is a subject in itself. Suffice it to say that even with greater funds this product, as blue-printed by the experts, cannot be produced in the existing plants any more than the peacetime models and types of industrial commodities can be produced by machines equipped for war production. Nor is the personnel and the training of that personnel adequate.

THERE'S a line of dialogue in the script for International's "The Stranger," where Loretta Young confides to Orson Welles that she's a victim of acrophobia. That word threw everyone in the cast but Welles. "It's a fear of high places," said he. "I know because I used to have it myself. I cured myself by mountain climbing in the Alps; picked out the sheerest drops I could find and stared over the edge." But —for "The Stranger" they built the highest set ever erected in Hollywood, a 13-story church spire; Edward G. Robinson, Loretta and Welles do a dramatic scene part way up it. And who was it who had an attack of acrophobia? Why Orson Welles!

ROBERT BENCHLEY

ision, acting for the U. S. treasury department, for the Victory Loan drive. Benchley appears with a stellar cast of 20 other notables, in the screen world.

Penny Singleton was sort of worried about her role in "Young Widow"; after seven years of playing the comic-strip "Blondie" on the screen—her contract with Columbia Pictures calls for her to do three "Blondie" pictures a year—she was afraid she'd suddenly go cavorting around the way she does as "Dagwood's" spouse. There's a screwball comedienne in "Young Widow," but Marie Wilson plays her. Penny had wanted to play a different role, and Hunt Stromberg, who brought her to the screen eight years ago in "After the Thin Man," gave her what she wanted; she plays a perfectly normal person, the wise, understanding friend of the heroine, Jane Russell.

Boris Karloff has been establishing a broadcasting record since he left Hollywood following completion of his role in RKO's "Bedlam." Nine programs in sixteen days, including three appearances on "Inner Sanctum" have kept him busy.

Sitting through a Jap-made movie is the last word in agony, according to Tom Neal, who plays the title role in "First Yank into Tokyo." Neal, cast as an American serviceman who undergoes facial surgery, so that he can pretend to be a Jap sergeant, for intelligence purposes, had to sit through "Kimona" 21 times, studying the performance of the Japanese star of the picture.

Constance Moore, "Gloria Dean" on "Hollywood Mystery Time," has a four-year-old daughter, Gina, who's pretty smart. Connie was telling a friend she was "sans cook and sans nurse." Gina looked up and inquired "Are they related to Sans Claus?"

There's a lot of kidding in the script of the Burns and Allen show about Georges singing voice. What very few people know is that Gracie's long-suffering spouse actually began his theatrical career as one of "The PeeWee Quartet," at the age of 12.

Howard Barlow has no piano in his "Harvest of Stars" orchestra; instead, beautiful Elaine Vito plays the harp. Motion picture companies have tried to tempt her to try her luck on the screen, but she prefers New York, where she plays in Toscanini's orchestra. She is also playing in Alex Stordahl's, while Frank Sinatra is broadcasting from New York. So why bother with Hollywood?

ODDS AND ENDS—Danny Kaye, "Wonder Man" star, is the first screen star to perform for U. S. forces occupying the Tokyo area—entertained 3,000 servicemen in the Neiji Shrine stadium. . . . Seems hard to imagine Ethel Barrymore as the mother in "Little Women"; she's to play that role in Selznick's Technicolor version of the story. . . . Gavin George makes his first film appearance in several years in "Notorious"; 10 years ago, in "Romance," he was Greta Garbo's leading man. . . . Barry Fitzgerald and his stand-in held a two-man chess tourney between scenes of Paramount's "The Stork Club"—they were cheered on by Betty Hutton.

NOW IRONING IS A JOY, NOT A JOB

IUKA, MISSISSIPPI. — Mrs. Florence Solomon has discovered a wonderful relief for "ironing day blues." Here is what she said about it to Faultless Starch recently:

"I used to dread ironing day so much, but after I began using Faultless Starch, ironing is a pleasure instead of a dread."

Do you dread ironing day, too? If you have to iron with a "sticky" iron, no wonder! Your arms get tired, your back aches, your neck aches, your legs ache. It's mighty hard work to iron when the iron sticks at the end of each stroke.

But you don't HAVE to iron with a "sticky" iron. Just change to Faultless Starch and iron with a smooth, slick iron that just flies along!

AMAZING EASY IRONING

There's a simple reason why Faultless Starch makes ironing easy. You see, it is made a special way. One of the special things about Faultless Starch is that it contains ironing-aids, already mixed in, that make it easy to do smooth, beautiful ironing. No more "sticky" iron!

EASY TO MAKE THIS STARCH

But that isn't all. You know how busy you are on washday. Then you have to stop and take out ten or fifteen minutes to make hot starch. But not when you use Faultless Starch! You make Faultless Starch in barely a minute—NO COOKING! Just cream it with a little cool water, add boiling water while stirring and presto! you're through! Start to starch!

You deserve the wonderful advantages of Faultless Starch. NO COOKING! NO "STICKY" IRON! So ask your grocer for Faultless Starch. Give all your wash that absolutely faultless look!—Adv.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

It's Roast Turkey Time Again!
(See Recipe Below)

Time for Thanks

The first peacetime Thanksgiving in America for several years can really be a thankful one. It sees loved ones coming home to be with their families once more. The family cupboards, though bare in almost every other country, are full here. Yes, it can really be a thankful Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is a very "homey" sort of holiday. Families and neighbors gather and share their year's harvest. The food, too, is of the homey type: Mr. Turkey, proud, plump and bursting with good stuffing; crisp, crackly cranberries; hot, fluffy rolls; relishes fresh from the cupboard in the cellar; and, of course, the crowning touch, pumpkin pie, shiny and plain or topped with whipped cream, if you wish.

One of the nicest centerpieces for a Thanksgiving table is made of fruit. There are rosy-cheeked apples, golden-hued pears, flaming oranges, all woven with strings of cranberry and clusters of grapes. Yes, pretty, and good to eat, too!

An easy way to serve is to have cups of chilled cider in the living room before the serious business of dinner begins. Don't forget to pass crackers, salted nuts, and relishes with the first course. Or, if the weather is a mite chilly, try hot cupfuls of tomato juice, spiced up with a bit of lemon juice. These will help break the ice and bring the folks to the table in a jovial mood.

How to Prepare Turkey.

Singe the bird by holding over a flame. Remove pin feathers with knife or tweezers. Remove oil bag from tail.

If internal organs have not been removed by the butcher, make an opening carefully under one of the legs, or at the vent, and remove them carefully, taking care that the gall bladder which lies near the liver is not broken. The intestines, gizzard and liver should all be removed together.

The lungs and kidneys which lie near the backbone must also be removed. Clean the gizzard by cutting through to the inner coat, half way around, take off the outer coat and, remove the bag which is inside.

The giblets, which are the gizzard, liver and heart, should be washed carefully, placed in cold water, heated quickly and cooked until tender.

Wash the bird thoroughly inside and out, and rub the body cavity with salt before stuffing. Fill lightly with dressing.

To truss the fowl (this is done after stuffing) tie end of skin of neck with string, leaving two long ends to pull it over the back. Turn wings back and legs to front, close to body. Draw string up, on each side over legs, cross it and tie legs down under and around the tail.

Making the Dressing.

Dressings may be of any type to suit the individual taste, but they should be packed into the body cavity lightly. Allow one cup of stuffing for each pound of turkey or chicken.

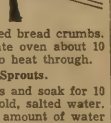
Bread Stuffing.
(Makes 3 cups)

4 cups dry bread cubes
3 tablespoons chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Sage or poultry dressing
½ cup melted fat
Hot water or stock to moisten

Combine bread, onion and seasonings. Add fat and sufficient liquid to moisten (about ⅔ cup).

Oyster Dressing: Add ½ to 1 pint drained, chopped oysters, uncooked or heated in the fat of the above recipe.

Raisin Stuffing: Add ½ cup seedless raisins.



Celery Stuffing: 1½ cups celery, chopped, should be added.

Roasting Time.

For a turkey weighing eight to ten pounds, use a 325-degree oven and roast the bird, uncovered, for 3 to 3½ hours. For a 10 to 14 pound bird, use a 325-degree oven and allow 3½ to 4 hours. For a larger bird, 14 to 18 pounds, use a 300-degree oven and allow 4 to 4½ hours.

Onions Au Gratin.
(Serves 6)

Peel 3 cups small white onions and boil until almost tender in boiling salted water.

Prepare 1½ cups medium white sauce. Place onions in greased baking dish, pour white sauce over them, and cover with ¼ cup grated cheese and 3 tablespoons buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven about 10 minutes, enough to heat through.

Brussels Sprouts.

Clean the sprouts and soak for 10 to 15 minutes in cold, salted water. Boil with a small amount of water until just barely tender and then add melted butter and salt and pepper. Cooked, chopped chestnuts may also be added before serving, if desired.

There's nothing quite like a good pumpkin pie to finish off this dinner of dinners. Now that whipped cream is back again, the pie can come to the table, topped with glorious swirls of that luscious delicacy. Or, if you prefer, make a meringue and flavor it with maple syrup and then spread on the pie and brown before serving.

Pumpkin Pie.

2 cups cooked or canned pumpkin
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup cream
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2 cups milk

Mix all ingredients together in the order given. Bake in a deep dish pie plate which has been lined with pastry. When cool, top with sweetened, whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped pecans.

LYNN SAYS

Let's make good piecrust: Excellent pastry is the result achieved from careful measurements and little handling. A good, standard proportion is 1 cup flour, ½ cup fat, and ¾ teaspoon salt. For double this recipe, not more than ¼ cup of cold water should be used.

All ingredients should be well chilled before working. This is especially important when the fat is being worked into the flour. In this case the fat does not melt, but is rather coated with the flour, and the method makes for flakier pastry.

If too much water is added, the manipulation necessary to shape the dough and roll it out develops the gluten. This makes a sticky dough and tough crust. If too little water is added, the crust is crumbly rather than flaky because there is not enough moisture to bind the crust.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise,
He swore (it was his policy)
He would not advertise.
But one day he did advertise,
And thereby hangs a tale,
The "ad" was set in quite small type,
And headed "Sheriff's Sale."

Next to the last football game of the season will be played this Friday night at Wetumpka. But let's make the following week's game the biggest of the season. It will be played the night before "Turkey Day"—to be exact; Wednesday night, November 21. Considering all the boys that have been called into service from CCHS Coach Waters has given us a mighty good ball team this year. The team has played hard and worked hard for the entire year and when they appear in this last game here on next Wednesday night, the football fans of Clanton and Chilton County should turn out and give them the biggest crowd yet. The boys have deserved it and the Coaching Staff has deserved it.

Funny things happen: Take for instance the two fellows who were talking on the corner the other morning. When asked why his friend left so angry he answered, "I haven't the slightest idea. We met there on the corner and were talking just as friendly as could be, when all of a sudden he flared up and started to hit me. We were talking ordinary small talk. He said he kissed his wife three or four times every morning and I told him that I knew at least a dozen men who did the same thing. And then he started having a fit."

The man who goes into politics as a business has no business going into politics.

Stopped by Eubanks Barber Shop early Monday morning to get a hair cut. About the time we climbed into the chair, Catfish said, "Ben, you go up to the courthouse, turn left and go about a block and a half. That's Dr. Parrish's dog and cat hospital, he's got longer shears than I have." We were just wondering if he suspected that we had put off getting that hair cut for a couple of weeks.

A good suggestion from a fellow citizen—Mr. R. B. Miller stopped us the other day and suggested a large highway sign on all roads leading into our fair city that welcomed the visitor. Of course with plenty of room for listing several good reasons why said visitor should stop here for a while, or permanently. Friend Miller also has worked out an idea for financing and maintaining the signs which we believe is sound. It's a suggestion for our fine civic clubs to go to work on.

JACKSON CHAPEL

Rev. C. C. Haun of Thorsby delivered a message Sunday afternoon. The text of his sermon dealt with the Brotherhood of Man, and was enjoyed by all.

Rev. Earnest Jones and Rev. James Baker were present and took part in the discussion at the close of the sermon.

The subjects discussed were, "The Development of Musical Talents in the Community" and "Closer Relationship Among the People of different Faiths."

A committee was appointed to formulate such plans as is necessary to perfect such educational organizations as will prove an asset to the people.

May God speed the day when the shepherds shall be without a blemish and the flocks be led into the pastures of life to enjoy the blessings He has in store for them.—J. H. Jackson

POPLAR SPRINGS

Sunday and Sunday night were our regular preaching dates and we had a good crowd at both services. We were very happy to have Bro. Morris with us Sunday night and he delivered the sermon. Bro. Cook delivered the sermon Sunday morning, and both were enjoyed by all. Several of the members from Refuge were with us Sunday night, and three joined by letter Sunday night.

Bro. Burkhalter's letter was received Sunday and he is now a member in full fellowship with this church. We are very proud to have him.

Bro. Morris will b helping in a revival at Refuge next week and all that can, go and hear him.

The second and fourth Sunday and Sunday nights are our regular preaching days, and go to church somewhere every Sunday and everyone is invited to Poplar Springs.

OAK GROVE

We are very happy to tell you good readers that there will be a special program, featured by our Y.P.E. Saturday evening, at 6:30, of this week. It is entitled, "Judy's Surprise," which will bring to you a call to prayer and faith in God.

We are appealing to you fathers mothers and young people to prepare yourselves for the great work we are confronted with in this day.

We have a loan fund that has proven a blessing to many needy young people, enabling them to finish our Bible School at Severville, Tenn., and be valuable workers for Christ in this world of sin and crime. You are going to spend eternity somewhere! "Come thou with us, we will do thee good."

Remember the date—November 17, 1945, Saturday of this week. We are looking for you. You will be remembered somewhere.

Y.P.E. Pres., Mrs. Myrtle Cleckler.
Rev. Chas. H. Shaw, Pastor.

Please, may I have a bit of space to say that our State Superintendent, Rev. J. T. Roberts, of Birmingham and District Superintendent, Rev. A. L. Sandlin, of Bessemer, will be at the Oak Grove Church of God Tuesday evening, November 20th, 1945, for the appointment of trustees and will favor us with a soul-stirring message and some good singing.

You will be blessed by attending this service with us.

Rev. Roberts and Sandlin are both very able speakers, and we invite our many friends and readers to be with us.

RUPTURE

SHIELD EXPERT HERE

H. M. SHEVNAN, widely known expert of Chicago, will personally be at the Jefferson Davis Hotel, Montgomery, Sunday and Monday, only, November 25 and 26, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Mr. Shevnan says: The Zoetic Shield is a tremendous improvement over all former methods, effecting immediate results. It will not only hold the rupture perfectly no matter the size or location but it will increase the circulation, strengthen the weakened parts, and thereby close the opening in ten days on the average case, regardless of heavy lifting, straining or any position the body may assume. A nationally known scientific method. No under straps or cumbersome arrangements and absolutely no medicines or medical treatments.

Mr. Shevnan will be glad to demonstrate without charge.

6509 N. Artesian Ave., Chicago.

Where they are and How they are

RECEIVES PROMOTION OVERSEAS

Jesse C. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Williams, P. O. Box 201, Clanton, has been promoted from Private to Corporal in the Army overseas.

He is serving as a Refrigeration Mechanic with a QM Refrigeration Company, stationed in the India-Burma Theatre Base Section.

Corporal Williams has been in the India-Burma Theatre since August, 1945. Prior to entering the Armed orces in April, 1943, he was a typewriter mechanic with Remington Rand, Inc., Birmingham.

We received a very nice letter this week from Claude T. (Ted) Reynolds, who is in the Veterans Hospital in Outwood, Ky.

Mr. Reynolds writes that he appreciates the soldier column, "Where They Are and How They Are," very much and especially did he enjoy last week's issue containing the paragraph about the vets seen attending the CC HS football game with Holtville. He says that he had the pleasurer of playing several years football with some of the fellows mentioned: Ermond Johnson, L. D. Easterling, Maurice Johnson and Harold Lawrence.

We are glad that this veteran, who has been hospitalized for the past two years, due to a disability received while serving our country in Ireland in 1942 and '43, can really get a pleasure from reading our column. Letters like this give inspiration for more and better paragraphs.

Ted ends his letter by saying, "Good luck to the Chilton County High football team and all my old friends of the team who carried the pig-skin for good old CCHS "Tigers" in 1935-38."

He also says he will be back to his home in Birmingham in the near future and intends to be down to look up the 'ole gang in Clanton.

Carl Martin, USA, from Camp Gordon, Johnson, Fla., was in Clanton for the week end with his wife and other relatives.

George Sam Easterling, USMC, has just returned from overseas and is spending leave here with his mother and other relatives and friends. Knowing George Sam as we do, we're sure he will enjoy his leave very much and we sincerely hope he soon will be getting a permanent one.

T-Sgt. Horace J. Wallace, son of Mrs. Edna Gladys Wallace, of Maplesville, has been separated from the Army Air Forces at the San Antonio District, AAF Personnel Distribution Command.

Sgt. Wallace served eight months as Aerial Engineering Gunner on a B-17 Plane with the Eighth Air Force in the European Theatre of Operations, and flew 26 combat missions.

It's nice to see another old friend, Lt. Beamon Ruthven, again. He is just back from overseas and is spending a leave here with his mother, Mrs. J. F. Bone, and other relatives and friends.

Technician 5th Grade Herman Sansom, Route One, is now sharing another citation from the army for outstanding meritorious performance of duty in combat.

A gold star has been awarded to his organization, the 321st Medical Battalion, for its excellent work during the Okinawa Campaign. This star will be placed on his units' first award, the Service Plaque, received for similar outstanding performance on Leyte. For the latter citation, Cpl. Sansom wears a golden yellow wreath on his right sleeve.

He serve as a dental technician during both campaigns.

T-4 Rufus A. Downs has been reported for a separation center quota, and is expected to be released from the armed service real soon.

Sgt. Downs, who has served in the army since July 31, 1943, is the husband of Mrs. Pauline Owens of Route Two, Clanton.

During his 28 months of service, he has won the Good Conduct Medal and the European Theatre Ribbon and wears four battle stars.

Private George T. Mullins, husband of Mrs. George T. Mullins, Route Two, Clanton, and son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Mullins of the same address, is now stationed in Leyte, guarding Japanese prisoners of war.

Pvt. Mullins, who landed overseas on August 11, 1945, is the proud father of two sons, Wayne and Gerald, who are living with their mother in Clanton.

Pvt. Raymond Cox, who has been stationed at Camp Blanding, Fla., was transferred Saturday to Camp Robinson, Ark., where he will receive training.

THEY DID A LOT FOR US— WILL WE DO THIS FOR THEM?

I've been thinking a lot about a problem that could be easily solved if the city fathers would be so kind as to do so. Maybe they haven't noticed so much, but being young myself and knowing so many of the fellows that have returned from the wars, I have noticed quite frequently how they like to gather together and talk about old times and the experiences each have gone through. One cannot walk down the street without seeing several little groups standing around with their hands in their pockets discussing "things" with each other.

What of it—well, it's like this—we could find a nice place (any old corner would do) down town and build several benches to 'sorta make a meeting place for the vets. Isn't that the least we could do for them?

Maybe you've noticed a lot of the vets can't be still long at a time, well, I'll bet you would see that they could if they only had a nice place to sit to talk and carry on with each other for the short time they will have to rest and get ready, before going to work, and trying to pick up where they left off when they started off to fight for us.

Just an idea — won't some of you city officials pick up a HINT?

—HELEN.

A new liquid poison, especially fatal to rats and other rodents, has been discovered. It is also a powerful poison for humans and will not be released for the present, says the USDA. It is called 10-80.

The best time to prune grape vines is in the fall or early winter as soon as possible after they are completely dormant.

MACEDONIA

There was a real good crowd at both services Sunday. Rev. Oden brought two inspiring sermons.

Next Saturday night, November 17th, is our regular singing with Mr. Marion Cofer as Chairman. Also the singing school is still going on, taught by Mr. Vickery every Saturday night.

Rev. Oden, Mr. and Mrs. Ermon Rasberry and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Davenport were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hayes.

There were three new deacons elected Sunday. They were Mr. Pratt Crumpton, Mr. J. D. Hayes and Mr. Woodie Rasberry. They will be ordained later.

Miss Kathleen and Mr. Hyman Rasberry spent the week end with their sister, Mrs. Kate Smith, of Prattmont.

Mr. and Mrs. Vickery and family spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Crumpton and daughter, Marie.

Mrs. Floyd Nix and children were Sunday afternoon visitors.

Visitors at church Sunday were the McCarty children, Mr. and Mrs. Austin McCarty, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton McCarty, Mrs. Estelle Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Vickery and family; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Veasey, Mrs. Faye Patterson. We were glad to have them and invite them back.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Gibson visited Mrs. Jettie Smitherman and children, Alice Faye and Gerald, during the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Ward and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ward of Birmingham had birthday dinner with their father, Mr. Joe Ward, Sunday.

Mrs. Dorothy Gibbson and son, Briggs Lee, spent Sunday with Mrs. Bronzelle Langston.

Mrs. Era Moore and children and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ward spent Saturday night with parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Garner, of Maplesville.

Mrs. Doyle Poole and Miss Elaine Drew spent Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Rena and Olivia Davenport.

Mrs. Faye Bonds Patterson spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Bonds.—Mrs. D. E. Moore, Reporter.

AUGUST LARSEN

August Larsen, age 71, died at his home Sunday afternoon, November 11, at Thorsby, Ala. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 11:00 o'clock from the Lutheran Church. Services were conducted by Rev. C. C. Haun. Pallbearers were: James Nelson, Lloyd Howard, Verner Carlson, John Bestron, Medie Driver and Emmett L. Edwards.

Surviving is the wife, Mrs. Annie Forsman Larsen.

J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge.

Mr. Chilton County Farmer Join Your Farm Bureau This Week

52,531 ALABAMA FARMERS ARE MEMBERS OF THE FARM BUREAU BECAUSE THE PAST YEARS HAVE TAUGHT THE VALUE OF ORGANIZATION

All progress that farmers have made in obtaining consideration in the State and national law-making assembles has been a direct result of work done and facts presented by your organization. The number of individual members of the organization determines the amount of influence that your leaders are able to have with our lawmakers.

With the end of the war and piling up of vast surpluses of all types of farm commodities it becomes increasingly impotant for us to have the strongest possible voice in State and national affairs. At present farm people make up 20 per cent of the national population and receive only 10 per cent of the national income. Continuation of this policy will eventually lower farming to a state of peasantry. Without adequate farm income our soils cannot be maintained and improved, and again, history indicates that any nation that has depleated its agricultural resources has eventually failed completely and ceased to exist.

The Farm Bureau is your protective organization to stay on guard constantly protecting your industry.

According to one of the most important nationally published magazines the Farm Bureau is the most effective organization in the business. ACCORDING TO FORTUNE MAGAZINE OF JUNE, 1944, "The farmer has learned that to be strong in Washington he needs more than a good cause. He also needs a good lobby. THE AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION IS THE BEST LOBBY HE EVER HAD AND PROBABLY THE BEST LOBBY IN THE BUSINESS!

The Farm Bureau needs you—you need the Farm Bureau. Make it stronger by becoming a member this week.

(NOVEMBER 12 TO 17)

KEEP THE NATION PROSPEROUS

The Farm Bureau Is Strong And Getting Stronger

24,022 Members in Alabama in 1940
52,531 Members in Alabama in 1945
--- 60,000 IS GOAL FOR 1946 ---

FACTS ABOUT YOUR FARM BUREAU

1. The American Farm Bureau has nearly 1,000,000 family memberships—or represents more than 4,000,000 people.

2. The President of the American Farm Bureau Federation is an Alabama farmer from Florence, Alabama, Mr. Ed A. O'Neal.

3. Alabama Farm Bureau has 52,531 family memberships.

4. The Alabama President is an Alabama farmer from Fayette county, Alabama, Mr. Walter Randolph.

5. The Farm Bureau is the VOICE OF FARMERS in State and national law-making assemblies. It is standing guard, fighting for the measures that are to benefit agriculture and combating measures that tend to retard agricultural progress.

6. Farm Bureau leaders are able to gain recognition only because they represent a large number of farm people. The larger the membership of the Farm Bureau the more influential they become.

7. THE ANNUAL FAMILY FARM BUREAU MEMBERSHIP IS ONLY $2.00 PER YEAR. This gives the family membership in the County, State, and National organizations. Also, along with State and National memberships, the member receives a year's subscription to "The Nations Agriculture," a monthly magazine that keeps you abreast of national affairs affecting agriculture; and a year's subscription to the "Alabama Farm Bureau News," a monthly paper—soon to be made a weekly publication. The Farm Bureau News records State agritultural trends and practices for local readers.

8. Chilton county's Farm Bureau membership is annually increasing. The County Drive is to be this week (November 12 to 17). You can become a member by mailing or handing your check to the County Secretary, S. A. Jones, or any of the beat solicitors.

Chilton county needs to share its part of the State Farm Bureau membership and needs the help of the State Farm Bureau in securing truck crop experimental facilities and other needed improvements to our county's agriculture.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Seek to Curb Inflated Prices For Homes; Predict World Food Shortage for Next Two Years

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of the newspaper.)

HOUSING:
Fear Inflation

With the nation suffering an acute housing shortage and a huge postwar building market indicated, discussion has centered upon the necessity for imposing price ceilings on new and used homes to check an inflationary spiral which could lead to a slump in construction and swollen mortgage liabilities.

Differing with OPAdministrator Bowles, President Truman, following his postwar program of permitting free enterprise full play in encountering reconversion difficulties, opposes the creation of such controls unless private industry proves itself unable to curb its inflationary forces. Instead, the government indicates a reliance on material and service cost controls, and a broad program for making a maximum of labor and supplies available for large-scale construction.

In pressing for ceilings on new homes, OPA would extend its supervision over the whole construction picture instead of only material and service costs. Failure to control prices for new or used homes, OPA argues, might lead to excessive costs and speculative selling on the strength of a big market.

Pointing out that construction costs rose to a peak of 89 per cent over 1913 levels in 1920, OPA asserted that sales of new homes dropped heavily. Citing findings of the Architectural Forum survey, OPA declares that 37 per cent of people interviewed announced their intention of deferring home purchases if prices should jump above $1,000.

With an indicated need of over 12,000,000 postwar homes, and with demand expected to approximate almost 1,000,000 in the first year of construction, builders only ask the government to promote an increase in the supply of material and labor to enable them to complete large-scale plans for volume production. Such production, assuring adequate return, would automatically tend to regulate finished prices, they argue.

Meanwhile, OPAdministrator Bowles announced that new owners would be permitted to charge rental reflecting the increase in new building costs.

LABOR-INDUSTRY:
Talk Peace

Free enterprise was put to the test as labor and management representatives met in Washington, D. C., to devise means for voluntary settlement of industrial disputes to smooth the way for speedy reconversion to peacetime production.

No less than a quarter-million workers were estimated on strike as the two groups met, and President Truman told the 36 assembled delegates that the country expected a satisfactory solution of present difficulties, underlining the warning he had issued in his radio address stating the administration's wage policy.

Though plans for the meeting had been carefully laid in discussions of business and labor leaders with administration officials, a discordant note was struck shortly after the conference got underway, with CIO Chieftain Philip Murray declaring that the question of wages should be embodied in the talks and AFL President William Green insisting that action should be confined to developing machinery for resolving such disputes.

Behind the whole confab, of course, lay the CIO's determined drive to maintain factory "take-home" pay at the same level as wartime, with an estimated 30 per cent wage increase necessary to incorporate former overtime earnings into straight weekly compensation. Though not mentioning a specific figure in outlining his reconversion wage policy, President Truman called for substantial pay boosts to maintain high earnings, offering price rises to industry in cases where income did not cover the added expense.

In addressing the conference, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach asked union leadership to find a formula for the settlement of rival claims to worker representation, suggesting the appointment of a czar, such as in the movie and baseball industry, for adjusting such differences.

FOOD:
World Shortage

American farmers could look to substantial overseas markets in the next two years with Allied authorities estimating that the prewar diets of food importing nations will not be restored before 1947.

Though the situation was expected to ease with the next harvest, supplies of wheat and flour will remain short through the first half of 1946, it was predicted. Sugar stocks will fall about 16 per cent below average requirements and fats and oils will be about 10 per cent off despite an increase in copra from the Pacific area.

To be added to the 200,000 tons left over on V-E Day, 300,000 tons of foodstuffs for the U. S. occupation zone in Germany was asked by Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, General Eisenhower's deputy commander. The total supply would assure civilians of a daily intake of 1,550 calories until the next harvest, which is expected to be only 75 or 80 per cent of normal because of fertilizer shortages.

War-torn Europe will continue hard-hit, authorities said, though supplies of grains, vegetables and proteins were expected to improve during the last half of 1946. Should these prospects materialize, the stage would be set for the gradual rehabilitation of the continental livestock and dairy industry.

Increased supplies of fresh fish were looked upon to boost immediate stocks of protein foodstuffs.

CHINA:
War Flares

In what Chinese Nationalists declared was a move to stir up American sentiment against U. S. backing for Chiang Kai-shek's government, Chinese Communists charged that U. S. marines opened fire in efforts to oust them from their northern strongholds.

While the Reds' charges were flatly denied, U. S. forces sat on a powder keg in the north, with the Communists threatening hostilities in northern ports where American naval units awaited to land Nationalist troops, and closing ranks for a showdown with Chiang's armies in interior points where Yank marines helped take over former Jap-held territory.

With Nationalist troops slipping through to challenge their hold in the north, 40,000 Communists reportedly drew up for double assaults on the Hankow-Peiping and Pukow-Tientsin rail lines in an effort to choke off the dispatch of reinforcements and supplies. In backing the Nationalist government, the U. S. already has supplied Chiang with 15,000 vehicles for the redeployment of his forces.

Science . . .

Electronics curing and drying of rubber—a new industrial process—promises to revolutionize the rubber industry because it is six times as fast as earlier methods, and turns out better products, scientists say.

The new technique which employs high frequency radio waves—just like those of shortwave broadcasting or radar—to generate heat in the work by agitating its molecular structure, is equally adaptable to either natural or synthetic rubber.

STEEL:

After six years of wartime operations, Great Britain's iron and steel industry is about to enter a period of new development. Now the British are preparing modernization plans which may involve the spending of 400 million dollars.

In the new postwar era the British industry expects to be called upon for large amounts of steel for construction, automobiles and other consumer goods, shipbuilding, exports and other fields.

BRITISH LOAN:
Postwar Aid

Elimination of the imperial tariff system favoring member nations was reported to be one of the concessions Great Britain granted in return for U. S. advancement of a substantial postwar loan to enable the United Kingdom to redevelop its elaborate export-import trade setup.

Recognizing the British need to get its export business going again to furnish the nation with foreign exchange for world purchasing, the U. S. loan reportedly calls for repayment in 50 years at 2 per cent interest, with the first installment falling due in five years. As a further concession to British economy, the country would not be expected to discharge the debt in any year that it lacked dollars due to an unfavorable trade balance.

Importing raw materials for her own consumption and fabrication into exportable goods to secure foreign exchange for other purchases, Britain finds herself especially pushed after World War II, what with friendly nations which shipped goods to the United Kingdom during the conflict holding some six billion dollars of claims in return. Extension of a loan, therefore, would enable payment of some of the debt without choking off ability to make necessary imports to maintain the nation's economy.

CANADA:
Labor Strife

To Canadian workmen of the Ford motor company at Windsor, Ont., went the distinction of creating a new weapon for the tying up of a plant—an automobile blockade clustering all streets leading to the affected buildings.

Ten thousand strong, and joined by 5,000 other workers from Windsor plants in sympathy strikes, the Ford employees of the CIO united automobile workers halted all vehicles headed for the plant and then compelled other drivers to pull in behind the stalled cars until a solid mass formed for blocks around.

Both provincial police and Royal Mounties were held off while local officials ordered the strikers to untie the traffic knot and dominion leaders sought to compose differences between company and union over the CIO demands for recognition as bargaining agent and a minimum annual wage of $1,800.

PEARL HARBOR:
Congress Stirred

Created upon resolution of administration forces to present an impartial picture of the Pearl Harbor disaster of December 7, 1941, a joint congressional committee of six Democrats and four Republicans has experienced stormy sailing, with the GOP minority charging individual members had been prevented from making independent investigations into the catastrophe.

At the same time, Representative Keefe (Rep., Wis.) pointed up allegations that high ranking military and naval officers had been sent around the world to have witnesses to the services' Pearl Harbor investigating committees change their testimony. Keefe declared that Capt. Alwin D. Kramer of Miami, Fla., had been confined to a psychopathic ward in a Bethesda, Md., hospital following a mental breakdown caused by efforts to have him alter his testimony.

Highlighting the congressional wrangling over the investigation was the assertion of Representative Gearhart (Rep., Calif.) that a war department report showed U. S. intelligence officers' deciphering of Japanese code messages had revealed Nippon's hostile intentions one month before Pearl Harbor and indicated an attack on the big naval base the morning of December 7. Despite the availability of this important information, Gearhart said, neither of the U. S. commanders at Pearl Harbor had been warned of the seriousness of the situation.

HUNGARY:
Beat Reds

In what was hailed as the first free election in Russian dominated eastern Europe, the middle-of-the-road Small Holders party of Hungary walked off with the national parliamentary contests, polling some 58 per cent of the total vote of four million to 22 per cent for the Laborite Social Democrats and 14 per cent for the Communists.

Possessing a clear majority, the Small Holders, led by Methodist Minister Zoltan Tildy, were expected to take a firm grip on the country, espousing the policies of its constituent shopkeepers, small land owners and professional men while making concessions to the liberal element to achieve stability.

Held after abandonment of previous plans to present a single slate of candidates on a united ticket, the popular elections were expected to remove another obstacle to early U. S. and British recognition of the Hungarian government.

AGRICULTURE:

American agriculture is currently in a strong financial position, compared with the condition that existed at the close of World War I, according to the agricultural commission of the American Bankers association.

The 13,000 country banks in the United States report that they have $8,625,000,000 available for farm loans, and that the volume of such farm loans outstanding is only about $2,237,000,000. During 1944 country banks served 2,494,000 customers.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE OUTREACH OF THE CHURCH

GOLDEN TEXT: And He said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.

A church that is spiritually alive will be missionary-minded. What seemed like unfortunate persecution of the early Church (Acts 8:4; 11:19) proved to be a blessing, for like flying embers from a beaten fire, these believers lighted many new fires as they were scattered abroad. The ministry by Philip in Samaria was paralleled by that of others in Phenice, Cyprus, and now in Antioch. That great city was not far from Jerusalem, but it was far from God. A mighty city, rich in trade, it was also deep in all kinds of sin. But there it pleased God to establish a great center of Christian testimony. God loves to do new things (see, for example, II Cor. 5:17; Isa. 43:19; Ps. 33:3; Rev. 21:5).

I. A New Fellowship (11:21-25).

The Antioch church was a living witness. "The hand of the Lord was with them"; little wonder that "a great number believed and were turned to the Lord." Your church and mine might learn much from the church at Antioch.

The genius of Christianity is fellowship. Those who have a religious belief which makes them exclusive—not willing to fellowship with other Christians — do not truly represent their Lord.

When the church at Jerusalem heard the good news, they sent Barnabas to help the new converts and to establish fellowship.

He was the ideal man to send, for "he was a good man.' It is far more important that a man be good than that he be brilliant if he is to edify young converts. He was 'full of the Holy Ghost.' He was also 'full of faith,' and without that no man need undertake the work of instructing and developing young converts. He was free from the love of gold (4:36, 37).

"He was free from personal ambition and jealousy in his work (vv. 25, 26). He was very sharp-eyed to see the sincerity and promise of a young convert (9:27)."

Into this new fellowship of life and service the gracious and generous Barnabas brought a new evangelist — Saul, God's prepared man for this hour.

II. A New Name (11:26-30).

Christian, the beautiful name of those who follow Christ, was first used at Antioch. It may have held a measure of contempt (see Acts 26:28; I Pet. 4:16), but it was a remarkably suitable name for those who had come out of paganism now to live, amid their old surroundings, a new life, a separated life, the Christ life.

This name "combines Jewish thought with Greek and Latin language, and thus, like the inscription on the cross, bears witness to the universality of Christianity as a religion for the whole world. The idea of 'Christ' (Messiah) is Jewish; the substantive 'Christ' (Christos) is Greek, and the adjectival termination 'ian' (-ianus) is Latin. . . . This new name was intended to introduce and mark the difference between Jews and Gentiles on the one hand, and those who, whether Jews or Gentiles, were followers of Jesus Christ. . . . The term 'Christian' evidently points to the person of Christ, and to those who are associated with Him as His followers. It implies and involves union and close association with Christ" (W. H. Griffith Thomas).

Those believers at Antioch not only bore the name, they practiced the life of Christ. They gave of their means, "every man according to his abilities," to meet the need of their new-found Jewish brethren in Judea.

III. A New Vision (12:24, 25; 13:1-4).

Little wonder that in such a church "the word of God grew and multiplied" (cf. 11:21). But the believers were not content to settle back at ease and enjoy that fellowship. Their precious church was simply the center from which they reached out to the heathen world around them.

Every army must have a home base. Just so, the army of the Lord looks to the home church, the local gathering of God's people. An army would fail if those at the base of its action were asleep, or so interested in the pleasures of this world, or so indifferent to their responsibility, that they would not work hard in support of the active army. So the cause of Christian missions cannot go ahead if it must depend on a home church which is spiritually asleep, indolent, indifferent, and worldly-minded.

The church at Antioch prayed and fasted. It ministered the Word of God. It was responsive to the guidance of the Holy Spirit and ready to sacrifice by giving its leaders to the missionary cause. Is your church that kind of church?

'End of Trail' Symbolizes Passing of the Red Man

The statue of an Indian with a spear under his arm, sitting on a horse, in an attitude of utter abandon, is intended to symbolize the passing of a great race—the Indian, once the unchallenged master of this continent, but who now, as the sculptor, James Earle Fraser, conceives it, stands hopeless and despairing at "the end of the trail."

The statue is very literally at the end of the trail, too, in Golden Gate park, San Francisco.

Try Making Cough Syrup at Home. Quick Relief

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

No matter what you usually use for coughs due to colds, you'll be more than surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and give it a trial. You'll wonder why you never used it before. It certainly does the work in a hurry.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed—it's no trouble at all. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired.

Get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint—a family supply—and gives you about four times as much for your money. It tastes fine, and never spoils. Children love it.

And for quick action, you've never seen its superior. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, eases the soreness, makes breathing easier, and lets you sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a famous reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

BOOZER AGAINST THE MERIT SYSTEM

At the proper time, I will announce my candidacy for Governor of the State of Alabama in the next general election, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary. Following this, I will make public the several planks of my platform, designed on a common sense and workable pattern for the betterment of all classes of the people, not a favored few. One, of my planks to then be given shall be the outright repeal and abolition of the so-called Merit System now affecting the vast majority of the State employees.

This plank shall then be advocated by me because:

1. The so-called Merit System denies to the Governor and the heads of the various departments of the State Government the employment and use of long established, sound and practical business methods; that is to say, the right of the employer to hire those persons best fitted by personality, temperment and ability to perform the duties of tasks and jobs assigned or to be assigned to them, to the end that efficiency may be gained and maintained under proper supervision. This vicious system, entangled and enveloped by unlimited red tape and cumbersome technicalities, not only deprives the employer of the right to hire State employees according to the fundamental rule of sound and good business principles, but takes away the power of the employer to promptly discharge any given employee failing in his duties.

2. The so-called Merit System is undemocratic, in that it is a creature of an autocratic and selfish minority group, commonly, appropriately and aptly called the "BIG MULES," operating as a unit, with headquarters in Birmingham, from where they have and continue to dictate and dominate the appointment of State employees, and lock the door of opportunity to thousands of deserving men, women and returning war veterans, who are fully competent, unless they become subservient to their wishes and whims.

3. The so-called Merit System fails to give allegiance to the proposition that the State Government is the sole and exclusive property of the people, and not the tool and property of the "BIG MULES" and "SPOT BOTTLE DEALERS."

The repeal of the "BIG MULE MERIT SYSTEM" will restore the State Government to the returning war veterans, who seek gainful employment and a voice in their Government which they have preserved, and to the average man and woman at the cross-roads in every county throughout Alabama, to whom it rightfully belongs.

—ELBERT BOOZER.

Caustics cannot be used effectively for removing horns of calves that are more than 10 days old. A scoop-shaped mechanical dehorner, made especially for use on calves whose horns have been formed has proved very efficient for this purpose.

Farmers no longer need apply for Federal licenses to buy explosives. Removal of restrictions, a wartime security measure, permits any person who is not prohibited by law to manufacture, sell, or purchase explosives.

KITCHEN SLAVERY

While it is pleasant each year to look forward to eating the preserves and the "put-up" canned fruits and vegetables prepared by the womenfolk, it is not nearly so pleasant to think of them slaving each fall over a red hot stove in an overheated kitchen, preparing these good things for our winter's pleasure.

The simple truth is that these same womenfolk have been very much over-worked members of their households, and so it is gratifying to report that extensive scientific advances made during the war have almost certainly doomed kitchen slavery.

Already many business concerns are planning whole meals of frozen fresh foods, available at any time of the year. The development of individual home lockers for preserving deep frozen foods has reached a point where more than 6,000 community locker plants are now in operation, and plans are under way for a sizeable expansion in this business.

Frozen meats, in various cuts, are beginning to appear in stores, and deep freezers on the farms are becoming increasingly popular as a means of providing a constant, fresh meat supply.

It has been the research work in paper, paperboard and other pulpwood products that has made the deep freezing practical, since only by developing a taint-proof, mouldproof and temperature resistant package has it been possible to preserve a variety of different foods in the same deep freezing units.

The rapidly growing demand for deep freezer packages and other pulpwood products is indicated by the current recruitment program for woods and mill workers being jointly conducted here by the pulp and paper industry and the U. S. Employment need by mills in this area for more service. It is reflected in the urgent top quality pulpwood NOW.

Prepare Livestock For Winter Weather

All types of farm animals should be checked for parasites and carefully treated at this period of the year so that the animals may be prepared for cold weather and their health protected.

Livestock experts suggest that animals be inspected for lice and ticks, and hogs for mange. Poultry houses should also be checked for mites. "These parasites multiply rapidly when the animals go into winter quarters," they say. "And if they are not checked, the animals may suffer from loss of condition and fall prey to livestock diseases."

Horses and mules can be treated for bots. Cattle need to be given their first back dustings or spraying for warbles. Ewes can be freed of stomach and nodular worms. Sows can also be treated for nodular worms.

It also is suggested that the winter quarters to be occupied by the animals be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected at the time the animals are treated for the parasites. This helps to greatly reduce the number of the parasites and to protect the health and production of the animals.

Syrup And Sorghum Can Be Used In Curing Meat

If neither granulated or brown sugar is available for home cured meat, syrup, either cane or sorghum, can be substituted in the curing formula for sugar. In the 8-2-2 formula, for 100 pounds of trimmed meat, which is eight pounds of salt, two pounds of sugar and two ounces of salt petre, two pounds of syrup can be substituted for the sugar.

This formula will cure pork as satisfactorily as if the sugar were included. The use of syrup in place of sugar makes a stickier material and is a little more difficult to apply to the meat but the results will be satisfactory and some people even prefer the flavor when syrup is substituted for the sugar.

In using syrup as a substitute for sugar, the plan would be to weight up the eight pounds of salt, the two ounces of salt petre, thoroughly mix and then mix in the two pounds of syrup. Mixing should be very thorough. This will result in a mealy sticky preparation which if applied thoroughly and evenly to the meat will give good results.

The meat should be left in cure for the standard time. When cured remove from pack, wash remaining cure off, dry and hang in smokehouse for smoking.

How To Protect Humans Against Poison Gas

Poison gas killed 1,950 Americans last year.

"Carbon monoside was the poisonous gas in eight out of every nine cases, and 97 per cent of the victims were stricken in their own homes.

Safety principles for avoiding monoxide poisoning in the home are given by the Alabama Extension Service:

1. Be sure that the damper in a stove or furnace pipe is never closed tightly enough to force gases out into the room. It is better to regulate "draw" with a check draft

2. A flue pipe to carry away burned gases is always necessary for gas ovens and water heaters.

3. Gas burners should burn with a transparent blue flame. If the flame has a white or yellow tint, adjustment is necessary.

4. Never operate a gasoline engine in a closed place unless the exhaust is piped out of doors. Open shed doors before starting the truck, car or tractor.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Mr. W. B. Strock, who lives about three miles west of Coopers, is very well pleased with his sericea. This year he has harvested a crop of hay and a crop of seed. He harvested 22 sacks of combine-run seed from sixty a little over three and one-half acres of sericea. The sacks ranged in weight from 60 to a hundred pounds. In making a conservative gross, he will have about eleven-hundred pounds of seed after they are cleaned and scarified. This figures about $50.00 per acre net income for seed alone and not counting the cutting of hay. As soon as Mr. Strock gets his seed cleaned and scarified, a more complete report can be given Willie Bryant down in the Training School Community has about an acre of crotalaria that he is going to save the seed from. The crotalaria has a heavy crop of seed, and if he cathers all of the seed he will probably get around 300 or 400 pounds. He is going to sell the seed that he does not use next year. Crotalaria and sericea seed may be hard to get next year, and it is advisable to save all the seed that can be saved.

Work Clothes

Farmers and other customers in south Alabama will soon pay slightly more for many overalls, coveralls, and other work garments made of denim, it was revealed. The price increase will result from increases previously granted to fabric mills under the "Bankhead Amendment," which requires OPA to fix prices for major cotton textiles that will, (1) permit growers' prices for cotton to reach parity, and (2) cover mill conversion costs, Mr. Jones explained.

"Wholesalers and retailers of work clothes will be required to absorb, as far as possible, the advance in prices," Mr. Jones said "but they will not be able to absorb all of the increases it about 75 per cent of the total work garments made of denim."

Sales Tax Token To Remain With Us

Montgomery, Ala. — The sales tax token will remain with us, at least until the next legislature session Revenue Commissioner H. G. Dowling, who has been trying to accomplish a change from tokens to the bracket system of payment, said today that the matter is one to be adjusted by the legislature. The attorney-general ruled recently that Dr. Dowling has authority to abolish tokens, but not to install or enforce a bracket system in their place. "I fear that abolition of tokens, with no alternative method provided, would cause much confusion and loss to merchants or public or both," Dr. Dowling said. "I have decided to let the matter stand in spite of the annoyance involved. Our present plan has at least the merit of being fair and equal in application." Dr. Dowling declared there is considerable demand for doing away with tokens; that there is growing disregard of the law, particularly in collection of exact tax on small transactions, and that some stores and cafes have worked out their own informal and unauthorized bracket systems.

At the 1945 session, a bill by Senator McCary of Calhoun, to abolish tokens and provide a bracket system in their place, passed the Senate and got on the House calendar, but died there without coming to a vote, smothered in a jam which marked close of the session. The question is expected to come before the legislature again in 1947. A recent survey showed that of 22 other sales tax States, 16 use the bracket system.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

LaVal came to the end of his way the most hated man of France and he died in disgrace before the firing squad. He had been lifted to power and trusted with the confidence of the French people. As an individual France had been good to him, and yet, he betrayed his trust and turned his nation over into the hands of Hitler, the arch enemy of his own people. He had no defense and he died as a traitor should die. Ah, my friends, God has been good to you. He is loving you and trusting you with all that is dear to the human heart. All that you are and all that you can hope to be, you owe it to God. Look back over your life today and see if you have acted the part of a traitor toward God at any time. Judas is not alone in his betrayal of the Master.

A captain that plowed the deep between the shores of England and the early United States observed that passengers coming west to our country, would walk the deck with eager steps and carry with them a smile of hope. They were inspired by the description of a new land that flowed with milk and honey, and they were coming over to join those who had gone before. They were sure that success and happiness awaited them in the western world. This captain said that he carried back to England a very few who had come to America and who had failed. This few returned with a sad countenance and a dejected expression. They had come to the United States thinking that success would come without work and they went back disappointed. On our countenance we carry with us hope, or dispair. Those who looked for success without paying the price, are the people who wear a countenance that is clouded with gloom.

I saw a large group of convicts by the roadside and I observed that one's head and face had been shaved as slick as an onion. I ventured to ask my guide why this had been done. Here is the answer that he made: "If we were to allow a head of hair to grow, or even a mustache, the hair would disguise the convict so that we could not see the real disposition of the man who we must know every minute of the day." These convicts were watched all the time that what was taking place on the inside might be known.

Farmers in more than 2,500 communities throughout the South have found that the one-variety cotton improvement program pays, the Agricultural Extension Service reports. In Alabama and Georgia where the one-variety program has been in use for about 10 years, the extra income has ranged from $6 to $11 per acre each year.

Cutting Cotton Stalks Now Has Advantages

J. B. Wilson, API extension service engineer, reports two big reasons for cutting cotton stalks immediately after harvest:

"One is to kill the stalk and furnish a mulch of decaying vegetable matter on the ground," he says. This helps control erosion and also starts decay so that the stalks can be turned under more easily in the Spring.

The second reason is to stop the food supply and hiding places for boll weevils. It is a fact that many weevils can be destroyed if stalks are cut before hibernation sets in.

Due to erosion from winter and early Spring rains, it is best to disturb the surface of the soil just as little as possible in the Fall. Therefore, a heavy stalk cutter is recommended for cutting stalks. The harrow or the plow may loosen up the soil too much.

Winterizing Urged By Chevrolet Motor Company

Motorists who have been putting more miles than ever on their war-weary automobiles since the removal of gasoline rationing must be unusually vigilant this fall to prepare their cars for winted, Ed Hedner, national director of service, Chevrolet Motor Division, General Motors Corp., said today.

Most car owners are faced with the prospect of driving their vehicles through another winter, and they must take care of every part of their automobile to make it last. Conservation of cars still is the keynote.

Many motorists, however, are taking long trips, are driving their cars much more frequently or are pushing them harder, thus imposing added burdens on them.

Chevrolet dealers throughout the country, who have stressed war-time care and service of automobiles and trucks, are well equipped to handle the job of winterizing.

Points included in the approved winterizing check-up of Chevrolet dealers are:

1. Flush radiator and entire cooling thermostat and hose connections, add anti-freeze compound.
2. Checking wiring system, remove corrosion from battery cables, terminals with grease. See that battery is fully charged. Adjust generator charging rate for winter.
3. Cross-switch or rotate tires to spread the wear.
4. Lubricate chassis, drain crankcase oil and replace with fresh lubricant.
5. Drain transmission and rear axle, flush and refill with winter lubricant.
6. Check brakes, and adjust them if necessary. Examine brake linings and drums, fill hydraulic cylinder to proper level.
7. Inspect fenders and body for dents and rust. Remove rust and touch up bare spots with paint.

John R. Bryant, who served 19 months in Italy and Germany with the 5th and 7th armies, is now at home with his mother, Mrs. J. N. Bryant, on Route One, Maplesville, Ala.

We feel sure Mr. Bryant well deserves his rest and discharge and his relatives and friends are very happy to have him back home again.

Because adequate facilities are not available in Alabama, the 1945 convention of the Alabama Farm Bureau will be held in Biloxi, Mississippi, October 30-November 1.

To guard against prussic acid poisoning, farmers should not allow stock to graze on sudan and Johnson grass and sorghum after it has geen frosted.

The Power and the Will

IT TAKES more than ample electric power to induce an industry to locate in an area. It takes more than raw materials. There must be more than markets for the output of the industry. A good climate helps, and so does an adequate number of prospective employees. Also necessary are dependable fuel and water supplies, and transportation facilities. A public attitude sympathetic toward industry is helpful.

An area can have all of these things and want new industries badly, but still few will locate there. There must be ample electric power, as well as other things, but along with the power there must be the will—the will to engage in the effort necessary to "sell" prospective industries on the merits of the area. There must also be faith that these efforts will, over the years, be productive.

We have the electric power—many others in Alabama share with us the will to develop Alabama industrially. They and we have the faith that our combined efforts will result in a new era of industrial development in Alabama.

Transmission lines like those shown in the illustration above deliver the electricity generated by Alabama Power Company's steam and hydro-electric generating plants with nearly a million horsepower capacity.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wise—than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I, but who later appeared in Hollywood and secured a job with Spratt. Under the name of Kessler, and with his disfigurements, he was not recognized and became a good friend to all of the Herlongs. Arthur promised to talk with Dick and explain to him what the war really meant to him personally. On Christmas Margaret was to give a party so Dick, Cherry and Elizabeth went to help decorate the tree. Margaret almost fell and became scared, she explained she was cut when she fell and a man kicked her—the man who killed her mother.

CHAPTER XVIII

Dick swallowed and wet his lips. He had heard stories like this before, but hitherto they had been something that happened to people who had the far-off quality of anonymity. Hearing it reported as a matter of course by a little girl in his own home town was something else again. He looked at Kessler, and back at Margaret. Cherry, who had sat down on top of the ladder, was looking at Kessler too, as though they both wanted him to say it hadn't really happened like this.

"Come here, Margaret," said Kessler gently.

She went to him, and he put his arms around her.

"It was dreadful in Germany," said Kessler. "But we aren't afraid any more."

She looked up at him artlessly. "Oh no, of course not. Not here."

"Nobody does things like that here," said Kessler. "There aren't any Nazis in America."

"Oh no," Margaret said again. She laughed at a recollection. "When we first came here," she said to the others, "I was scared of the men in uniform. But they were just policemen and soldiers. They didn't bother anybody."

"No, everybody is safe here," Kessler went on. "Nobody comes into a house without being asked. If they want to come in they ring the bell, and if you tell them not to come in they stay outside. Nobody is scared in the United States. Margaret used to be scared, but she isn't any more."

"It's different here," said Margaret.

"And your supper is getting cold," Kessler suggested. "You'd better go eat it."

"All right."

"And aren't you going to thank Mrs. Herlong and Dick and Cherry for helping you with the tree?"

"Oh yes! It's just wonderful. Thank you so much."

"We're glad we could help," said Elizabeth. She took Margaret's hand and went with her into the dining room where her supper was ready. Margaret started to eat with a healthy appetite, evidently not appalled by the story she had told. When Elizabeth returned to the front room Dick was still standing by the tree and Cherry still sat on the ladder, apparently too horrified to move. Kessler was speaking to them.

"If it seems cruel to let her go on talking, it's less cruel than making her shut it up inside herself. I thought it was easier on you to listen than it would have been on her if I had told her to stop."

"But what sort of cattle are they?" Dick exclaimed. "We hear a lot of things about them, cruel and vicious and all that, but not just going around kicking little girls!"

"I told your mother once," said Kessler, "that your only fault was that you didn't realize how superior you were to your neighbors."

"To my neighbors? But I don't know anybody like that!"

"No, you don't know anybody like that."

"Gee whiz," said Dick. He went over to another side of the room and sat down.

"Why did they kill her parents?" Cherry asked breathlessly.

"They didn't. Her parents killed themselves."

"Ah!" Cherry let go her breath audibly.

"Margaret thinks the Nazis killed them. They killed so many others. I haven't tried to tell her any differently. She doesn't understand suicide."

"But why?" exclaimed Cherry. Then she added apologetically, "I'm sorry. I guess it's none of my business."

"There's no reason why you shouldn't know," Kessler answered. He glanced at Elizabeth. "Shall I go on, Mrs. Herlong?"

"Yes, if you can bear it. After all, Mr. Kessler, we've heard it before. It's been in the papers and on the radio."

Cherry said what they had all been thinking. "But it's different when it happens to somebody you know! You mean it happened to Margaret's family like what we read about?"

"Why yes, the same old story," Kessler answered. "She and her mother were shoved off the sidewalk, she didn't have enough to eat and even when her parents went without there wasn't enough for her, they saw other children beaten and starved and knew there was nothing else in store for Margaret. Their old friends crossed the street when they saw Margaret's parents coming because they were afraid to be seen speaking to Jews. They tried and tried to get away and every door was shut against them. They stood it as long as they could. They were a brave and gallant pair. But that day Margaret told you about, her mother's spirit broke. She tried to kill Margaret, and she succeeded with herself. She was a doctor and there were still a few drugs in the house. The only reason she didn't succeed with Margaret was that she wanted the child's death to be quick and easy, and she gave her too much."

Cherry was staring at him, unconscious that there were tears in her wide-stretched eyes.

"And her father?" Dick blurted.

"He and I came in together. We had been out to buy food. We had to stand in line to buy it, and I tried to help him. Because I am not Jewish things were easier for me. But I can't stand in line very long, or carry any parcels except what I can put into my pockets. We used to do the buying, it was too frightful for Margaret and her mother on the street. When we came in we thought they were both dead. We knew the house had been searched because it was in such disorder. Jacoby—Margaret's father—knew they would come back for him. With Margaret and her mother gone he had no more reason to keep trying. He was like an insane man. He had no gun—they had taken that long before—so he stepped out of the window."

"But what sort of cattle are they?" Dick exclaimed.

"But Margaret?" Elizabeth exclaimed as he paused.

"I don't know how I ever realized, just then, that the child wasn't dead. I knew something about first aid, and I did the best I could for her, and got help from a doctor at the hospital where her father had worked before the Nazis took over. We worked with her, asking ourselves every ten minutes why we were doing it. We almost agreed with her mother that it would be better to let her die. But I managed to get a letter to the French studio that had bought two of my books, and they gave us help. That was just before the war began. A few more weeks and it would have been too late."

There was a moment of stricken silence. Then Elizabeth demanded, "How can you talk about it so quietly! Your friends driven to death, a mother trying to kill her own child—and you might be talking about the weather!"

"You have to learn to talk about it like that," Kessler said. "If you don't—" He shrugged.

"Was he a very good friend of yours?" Dick asked.

"My best friend, He saved my life after the last war, and made it possible for me to walk instead of spending these years in a wheelchair. He was a very great man."

"He was one of the most famous surgeons in Germany. And more than that, he was, as I said, a very great man. Through the worst disasters—and there were plenty of them in Germany after the last war—he had clung to his belief that no matter what happens there is always something worth saving, in one's self and in humanity. Then when he had lost everything else he lost that too. I'm not blaming him for it, but I'm sorry for it."

"I don't get it!" Dick exclaimed abruptly. "I hear about such things and hear about them, but I don't get it. Why were Margaret's parents treated so?"

"Because they were Jews, for one thing."

Dick shook his head, as though the room had got dark and he was trying to see. "But I still don't get it, Mr. Kessler. It doesn't make any sense at all. Even if you were brutal and anti-Semitic and all that, why should you want to kill a doctor who might save your life? You might get sick and need just what he could do for you—don't they ever think about that? It doesn't make sense," he said again.

Kessler did not try to tell Dick that he was asking a question that half the human race had already asked. He only replied, "It doesn't make sense, and I don't get it either, Dick. The Nazis and their babble, and then a child like Margaret."

"A nice sweet helpless little girl!" Cherry exclaimed.

Kessler turned toward her, and spoke earnestly. "It's not only that, Cherry. There are people in the world who haven't your sense of humanity toward helpless little girls. But it's what Dick said—even if you had no sense of humanity, why should you do that to yourself?"

"To yourself?" said Cherry, puzzled.

"Why yes. Why should you want to destroy your own hope in the future? Margaret's heredity includes two of the finest minds in Germany. If parents give their children anything of themselves, and we know they do, the chances are a hundred to one that Margaret is a genius. Only God knows what she's capable of becoming, but they tried to destroy her."

"Gosh!" said Dick. "Mr. Kessler—you mean that kid's liable to do something like discover radium, and she nearly got killed?"

"That's exactly what I mean. I don't know that Margaret's a genius, it's too soon to tell. But I know that in this mad killing of theirs the fascists from Berlin to Tokyo have destroyed genius, and they're still doing it. They're destroying their future, and yours. That's the real tragedy of our time. It's so terrible we don't often think about it because we can't bear it. Margaret's parents had at least had a chance to contribute something to the world. But she's never had any, and those other children who didn't escape had never had any. And what it amounts to," he said clearly to Dick and Cherry, "is that your children may die of loathsome diseases because the scientists who could have saved them were killed when they were four years old."

"Oh, my gosh!" cried Cherry from the top of the ladder. Her hand caught at her throat. "That's what they're doing. I never thought of that till this minute. That's what it's about."

Dick stood up. "Holy smoke," he said slowly. "It's ghastly. You're right—it's too awful to think about. You just think of kids as kids, but golly—when you do think about them as growing up, or not growing up, I mean the important ones—suppose the Germans had blitzed England fifty years ago and had got Churchill, I mean, and now we'd never know."

Elizabeth put her hands over her eyes. It seemed to her that she could suddenly see them, little boys like Brian, little girls with fat pigtails like Margaret, the Einsteins, Chiangs, Curies of the future, going in a horrible procession to annihilation. Suppose the bombs had dropped fifty years ago. She thought of sulfanilamide and the Four Freedoms, television and cargo planes, vitamins and the Panama Canal. Her generation had these because the men and women who brought them into being had been allowed to grow up. She could hear Kessler's voice, passionate with a great grief.

"That's the real horror of fascism. We are sick at what they are doing today, but that is such a little part of it. Their awful crime is what they are doing tomorrow. We don't know what they've already destroyed—a cure for cancer, a new philosophical system, a rocket to the moon. Margaret got out, but the others who didn't get out—think of the books that will never be written, the work that will never be done. They're destroying tomorrow, and tomorrow is forever."

Several days after the turn of the New Year, Kessler received a letter from Dick:

Dear Mr. Kessler,

I guess there is no use trying to tell you how shocked I was at what you said the other day. My sister felt the same way I did. I do not write very well and it is hard to say what I mean. But this is what I am getting at. I know you are a very busy man but if there is a day, maybe a Sunday, when you have some time to spare would you let me come over and see you? I did not want to bother you until after Christmas, but there are some things I have been thinking about and I would like to talk to you anyway. You seem to understand our family very well and I know they like you and would not mind anything I said to you. Let me know if this would be convenient.

Sincerely yours,
Richard Spratt Herlong, Jr.

After he had read Dick's letter, Kessler sat for some time thinking, his forehead resting on his big thick hand. These months in Beverly Hills had been more difficult than he had thought they were going to be. Most things were, when you came down to them.

Seemed the Ultimate in Landlubber's Paradise

A group of bluejackets were discussing their dislike for ships, boats and all bodies of water, salt or fresh. They spoke of their personal postwar plans, and each tried to outdo the others in his vows to obliterate every vestige of the navy from memory. At last one boy voiced a plan that seemed to top them all.

"After the war I'm going to put a pair of oars on my shoulder and start walking inland," he said, "And the first place I come to where people ask, 'What are those things?'—that's where I'm going to live!"

She is a telephone service representative and from now on her story is more cheerful. New switchboards, cables, wire and telephones needed to provide more service are becoming available in increasing volume.

But to catch up on held orders for service and to make replacements that were necessarily postponed during the war will require very large additions to our telephone plant.

It is a tremendous construction job that will require much time to complete even after the delivery of equipment by the manufacturers. So she cannot promise just when all orders will be filled. There are places where we have complicated switchboards to install, even places where we must build new buildings or building additions to house new switchboards.

But she can say that we are on our way to give service to all who want it—on our way to restore Bell System standards of service and raise them even higher.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22 1945 — NUMBER 47

TO ELECT AAA COMMUNITY COMMITTEEMEN

Chilton County farmers will take time out from seasonal work in the next four weeks to elect AAA Community Committeemen for the coming year.

Three community committeemen and two alternates, as well as a delegate to the county convention, will be chosen in each of the county's 55 farming communities. The delegates will later elect the three-man committee which will administer AAA activities within the county.

Chairman Clyde C. Cofer, of the county AAA committee, said today that dates, hours and places for holding the annual election are now being determined. Announcement will be made within the next few days.

In Chilton County, Mr. Cofer said, approximately three thousand farmers are eligible to vote on committeemen this year. "Eligible" farmers are those who participate in the 1945 agricultural conservation, or crop insurance program.

The county AAA chairman, in reminding Chilton County farmers of the forthcoming ballot, appealed for full participation.

"Solution of the postwar problems ahead of us is the vital concern of every farmer. Consequently, it is to his own best interest to vote in the coming election — to make sure the men administering AAA programs in the county are the ones he wants to represent him."

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS HAS BANQUET

On last Monday night the members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, local Post 3193, were host to the eligible members for V.F.W. Auxiliary at the Chilton County High School Cafeteria. Among those present for this meeting were: Joe Denaburg, Department Commander of V.F.W. from Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Carmile Gaisser, President of the State V.F.W. Auxiliary, also of Birmingham, Ala.; Colonel Henry C. Wood, Senior Vice-Commander of the State Department.

The ladies present, who are eligible for members of the Auxiliary, were very enthusiastic of the organization of the Auxiliary and have invited Mrs. Gaisser to meet them at the City Hall on Monday night, December 3rd, 1945. Any mother, wife or sister of an eligible V.F.W. is eligible for membership and are requested to be present at this meeting on the above date.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS TO MEET

The next regular meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Post 3193, will be held at the City Hall on Monday night, November 26th, at 7 o'clock. There are many new members to be taken in at this meeting and it is requested that each bring his membership card or receipt of dues and all veterans who have had overseas service in any wars under the United States Flag are invited and urged to attend this meeting and affiliate. Men who expect to join are requested to bring their discharge certificate.

Victory Bond Rally Here Saturday, November 24

Another Victory Loan Rally will be held this Saturday and every effort will be made to finish the job that is ours to do. The local talent show that was given last week proved so popular with the Bond buyers that the Committee has arranged to give a repeat performance.

Beat Two of the county has already gone over the top in this 8th Victory Loan. The fast working citizens and school children of Jemison, under the leadership of Arch Wells, have again jumped ahead of all other Beats.

The Beat quota assigned was $15,300 after which Beat Two asked for a second quota and have a substantial amount raised on it.

If all Chilton County citizens would accept their responsibility as these people have Chilton County boys and girls in the service would really have something of which to be proud.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their many deeds of kindness shown us during the illness and death of our dear father. Especially do we thank Mrs. Becker, the nurse, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Sims, Mrs. Hogus, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Jones and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Willis. Also especially do we appreciate the comforting message of Rev. Homer Carroll.—The Maddox Children.

COUNTY BOARDS MAY LEGALLY SPEND SCHOOL FUNDS ON EQUIPMENT

County boards of education may legally spend school funds for the equipment of school lunch rooms, Attorney-General William N. McQueen has ruled, in reply to inquiry from Frank R. Stewart, Superintendent of Education of Cherokee County. "It is my conclusion that the expenditure of school funds by the county board of education for the purpose of equipping school lunch rooms is an expenditure of such funds for the health of the student and for this reason such expenditure is for 'public school purposes' " the attorney-general held.

PATRIOTIC SERVICE AT BILLINGSLEY NOVEMBER 25

UNDERGOES OPERATION

Mr. Sie Foshee was rushed to the Veterans Hospital af Montgomery, early Monday morning where he underwent an operation. His condition was reported satisfactory Tuesday. Mrs. Foshee and Betty Jo are staying in Montgomery to be near him.

CHILTON COUNTY'S NEW HOSPITAL
(An Editorial)

Word comes to us from a dependable source that Chilton County is to get a new hospital.

Within the next few weeks a meeting will be called at the Chilton County Courthouse to which leaders in every Beat of the county will be invited to attend.

Directorship of the hospital will be in the hands of a representative from every Beat in the county. It will be built, not for the benefit of the doctors of the county, but for the people of Chilton County. A modern, well-equipped hospital in which the doctors can better serve the patient.

Under this set up, Federal Government participates one-half; State, one-fourth; and local governing bodies, the remaining fourth. We are told the R.F.C. will loan this local fourth on the hospital; thus you see, it can be put over without interfering with the treasury of County or City.

We can think of nothing that is needed by more people in the county at this time than such an institution. According to one of our most prominent doctors there is more different diseases and more serious illness in the county now than he has ever seen.

That plans are going forward for such an undertaking, we were assured this week by County Health Officer Moore.

When the date of the meeting is announced, make it a point to be there. It is something that is vital to the health and well-being of our County.

THANKSGIVING FOR VICTORY

The Victory Loan Drive should rightfully be termed the "Thanksgiving Loan Drive" Not only because Thanksgiving day comes during the period of the drive, but to give the campaign a real impetus by developing an awareness and appreciation of just what it means and represents.

Thanksgiving for Victory—Thanksgiving for the fact that we can realize now just what Victory will mean in so many different ways—Thanksgiving that we have supported seven War Loan Drives, and have generously oversubscribed each one.

Our thanks can best be expressed by going all out to put every idle nickel into this drive and demonstrate to the rest of the world our Thanksgiving for all the events of the past four years that brought us this victory.

This is the last—Give it all you have and more. If you have done your "share" in preceding war loans—do more than your share this time. Let's go overboard for the last one. More than you can afford. Let's wind up this drive in a blaze of glory—For yourselves—For everybody—For our own satisfaction in years to come—For Thanksgiving.

CHILTON SETS YEAR'S AIMS

Main Objective Is Better School Community Relations

At their first meeting in September, the Chilton County Teachers Association adopted better relationships between the community and school as the primary aim of the schools for the coming year. The county board of education also agrees this is the most urgent need of education in Chilton County.

With schools as community centers, the Association hopes to reach five specific goals:

1. To get parents to organize, join and attend parent-teacher associations at their schools. To visit schools. To become familiar with their set-up; parents and teachers to know, visit and understand each other. These are to receive the first emphasis.

2. To keep in school, every day, every child that should be in school. To make the child's illness or an emergency the only condition for allowing him to be absent.

3. To provide recreation for parents as well as students. To use the school building as the place, and school buses as the means of necessary transportation.

4. To improve the health of school children. To emphasize better programs in physical education.

5. To improve the appearance of school grounds and buildings. To keep them clean and attractive.

With the help of the people of this county, education forces expect to reach these goals. Without such help they know they cannot. — Alabama School Journal.

County Service Commissioners Meeting Held

Every County Service Commissioner in the State have just completed a conference and schooling, where every phase of the veterans problems were discussed and examined. One thing that was pointed out during the meeting was that the right of the veteran to return to his old job does not come under the GI Bill of Rights but is a part of the Selective Service Act. Any veteran who has any problem concerning the return to his old job should apply to their Selective Service Boards where their cases will be handled by U. S. District Commissioners.

T. H. Walker, Chilton County Service Commissioner, who attended the school for service commissioners, said the conference and school lasted for two days and that uniformity was stressed in the veterans' affairs for the entire State. During the conference there were representatives from the U. S. Department of Labor, U. S. Employment Service and all branches of Veterans Administration as well as the State Director of Health and Education.

It is the opinion of the local commissioner that he will be better prepared to give the veterans better service from attending the school.

QUALITY PRINTING SERVICE

Funeral Services Held For Gordon Oakes

Gordon Harold Oakes, age 20, of Gardendale, Ala., was killed instantly when his automobile was struck by another while entering onto the highway from a side road at the end of the four-lane drive in Lewisburg, Ala., Tuesday, November 6th, 1945.

The on coming car's brakes failed to hold, causing the car to run into Harold and knocking him off the right side of the road down a five-foot embankment. There is second degree manslaughter charges against the other party.

Gordon was buried at Mt. Olive Church, Thursday 8th, with military honors: General Gorgas Post of American Legion Honor Guard in charge. The Chaplain of the honor guard delivered the ceremony at the graveside and presented Mrs. Oakes (nee Mildred Muncher) with the flag that draped the coffin. Admist the abundance of beautiful flowers and the three gun salutes a very impressive service was rendered

Harold was loved by all who knew him for his kindness and respect to others. Our deepest sympathy goes to his wife, family and friends.

Brown-Service was in charge.

Mass Meeting Called To Plan County Hospital

To the Citizens and Taxpayers of Clanton and Chilton County, Alabama:

Under a recent Act of the Legislature, local governing bodies within a zone determined by the State Board of Health as a zone for a public hospital, may take action to establish a hospital association for the purpose of acquiring, constructing, equipping, maintaining and operating a public hospital the same to be financed by the Federal Government, the State Government and the Local Governments. The Commissioners Court of Chilton County and the City Council of the City of Clanton held a joint meeting recently for the purpose of considering a plan under said Act for building, equipping and maintaining a suitable hospital in Clanton.

Under the terms of said Act, notice must be given of a public hearing at which all residents and taxpayers of the City and County may have an opportunity to be heard and notice is therefore given that a public hearing and mass meeting will be held at the courthouse in the City of Clanton on Friday, November 30th, 1945, at 7:00 p.m., at which time all residents and taxpayers are cordially and respectfully requested to be present to voice their opinion upon said question. At said meeting the plan will be explained in detail and presented to the citizens, and after said hearing the Commissioners Court and City Council will determine whether to establish a hospital association according to said Act.

J. LEE SMITH, Judge of Probate
F. LEO THOMPSON, Mayor Clanton.

Thanksgiving, 1945

God of our fathers—Lord of all,
Who hearest when Thy children call;
Who makest cruel wars to cease
To ravaged earth restoring peace!
Justice and right Thou dost defend—
No wrong, no ill, dost Thou befriend
Who rulest from Thy Heavenly Throne
In wisdom, far above our own!
We offer Thee our thanks today
For all Thy care along life's way.

Though battle-scared, yet still we stand
Preserved by Thine Almighty Hand—
A nation great! Lord, make [illegible]
Give perfect vision to our eyes
[illegible] never fail [illegible]
How large a debt we owe to Thee!
For with Thy strength—not ours alone,
Were our fierce foes at length o'erthrone!
And so, our God—our Help of old,
We give Thee thanks—a thousandfold!

Through the trials and through the tears,
Through the anguish and through the fears,
Through the parting and through the pain,
Steadfast and firm didst Thou remain,
Standing on guard our course to guide—
And giving victory to [illegible]
Through war's dread dangers deep and vast.
Leading us, safe, to Peace at last!
Our Present Help—our God of [illegible]
We give Thee thanks—a thousandfold

IF YOU ARE A CITIZEN OF CHILTON COUNTY--YOU HAVE A JOB TO DO SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, IN CLANTON--LET'S PUT THE VICTORY LOAN OVER

Kathleen Norris Says:

Learning to Forgive

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"He looks with curiosity, annoyance, and even jealousy while you care for his son."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

OUR soldiers are going to need a great many things when they come back from the battlefronts. One of these is forgiveness.

"Forgive them!" you say indignantly. "What on earth have we to forgive them! Our heroes, who have faced dangers, homesickness, seasickness, boredom, wounds, cold and heat, epidemic and insects, and fatigue — and you say 'forgive them!'

"Why," cry the mothers and wives of America, "we're going to give them the most royal welcome returning boys ever had; we're planning meals that will build up those hospital-wasted bodies and those limbs thinned in jungle heat! They are going to be lords of the earth when they come home!"

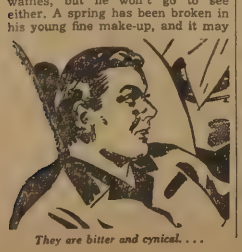
And just the same I say, "Forgive them."

Forgive them their bitterness — their scorn. They'll look at the prettiness and safety of home life with weary contemptuous eyes. It's doggoned important, is it?—that wedding announcements are engraved rather than printed? We've got to have parsley on that, have we, Ma? It broke up Betty's life that I forgot that that fool girl telephoned her, did it?

They Hope to Shock You.

Forgive them their politics. They won't know what they think, but they'll be positive with criticisms, opinions, discussion of socialism, communism, labor rights, rights of ex-servicemen, and they will take great pains to say what they hope will shock you. Nothing will be sacred to them—in conversation at least—and if you hold for the preservation of marriage ties, they'll argue for license and free love.

Forgive them their strangeness. You're accustomed to the daily home events. You love the baby so much—having loved him all those months for both father and mother —that the trouble that is a baby is no trouble to you. With Tom it's different. He looks on with curiosity, annoyance, and even jealousy while you care for his son. Do you have to run upstairs every time the kid yips? Does he always smear himself up that way at meals? Can't we leave him with a neighbor one week-end and go off for one of our old good times? You'll have to forgive him that.



Forgive them their uselessness. To some of them this terrible experiment of war has come just at the wrong time. It's hard to go back into college, it's harder still to get into employment for which they're not fitted. They will drift. The big boy just out of uniform will come down late to breakfast—and little sister will look questioningly at you. Is she supposed to hang around until 10 o'clock to cook eggs for Billy? You will suggest to him that he might like to see Uncle Joe about going into the paper mill, or Cousin Roger about a job at the hotel. He will nod, his mouth full of your good waffles, but he won't go to see either. A spring has been broken in his young fine make-up, and it may be months before that spring is rebuilt, and he is geared to normal home life again.

Recovery is Slow.

Forgive him, you mothers of wounded boys, his hypochrondia. He's been hurt, patched, bandaged, he's been in splints or on crutches; his young blood and young courage and young strength has been drained away from him, and he can't regain what he has lost in a hurry. He'll be fretful, talk symptoms, bore you all with his phyical history. Not for long, but until he gets on his feet, in nerves and mind and soul and body again.

And finally, some of you wives forgive him that he put someone else in your place, for awhile. In loneliness and distance men need women for comfort, and when any friendly, attractive woman is near, home seems very far away. When he comes back to you, and perhaps blurts out his regret and his surprise at what he did, forgive him then. It is part of the total world ruin of war that so many wives find it impossible to forgive this one thing. But it isn't the worst offense a tired, lonely, hungry, despairing man ever committed. Cruelty and injustice and abuse of power—these crimes leave deep scars. But reaching out wearily for companionship and affection, when the home affection and companionship for which he longs is not accessible, this is some thing to be forgiven—and forgotten.

As we forgive those who trespass against us, we all are to be forgiven some day. Lay up in the spiritual banks for yourself an emergency fund of divine forgiveness.

They are bitter and cynical. . . .

READJUSTMENT TO PEACE

Wives, mothers and friends of returning veterans find that the young men they used to know and love have come back strangely different. They are bitter and cynical often. They are unsettled, difficult, touchy. They want to be shocking in ideas, attitudes and speech, in many cases. They are difficult to live with.

Many won't fit into any job. They just sit around the house, morose and dull, or else tiresomely garrulous. Going back to school under the G. I. Bill of Rights doesn't look attractive to many men. There just doesn't seem to be anything they really want to do.

Some have gnawing consciences about incidents while they were away. Maybe they got involved in some black market deal. A number have been unfaithful to their wives while enduring the loneliness and misery of war in distant lands.

All this, Miss Norris says, must be forgiven. These men have survived terrible experiences, particularly horrible to young, impressionable soldiers.

FOOD NEEDS STILL LARGE

Large quantities of food are still needed, despite the happy changes in the war situation. Recent reductions in government requirements for canned vegetables will permit civilians to have 10,000,000 more cases from the 1945 pack than was formerly planned, but total food requirements are so high that civilians will get about 10 per cent less canned vegetables than from the 1944 pack. There has also been a downward revision in the set aside of canned fruit and fruit juices.

Inflation Threat Will Become a Dread Reality If Everyone Scrambles for Excessive Profits and Wages

Only Controls of OPA Prevented Runaway Prices During War.

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Staff Correspondent

During the war years, if we became peeved with rationing and price control it was the national habit to cuss OPA. During reconversion, people, from the captains of industry on down the line and into the ranks of congress, blame many of our ills on OPA.

There have been ridiculous and oft-time funny jokes cracked about the OPA and the controls instituted for the protection of the American people. And, as is the case in any human institution, the OPA has made mistakes, errors of judgment.

Congress has been deluged with letters from constituents, business men and consumers, concerning real or fancied ills and discriminations which were laid at the door of the Office of Price Administration. And congressmen, being human too, let the blame rest on OPA, passing the buck along. But despite all this criticism, despite verbal beatings which tore to shreds the actions and policies of OPA, congress dared not eliminate the agency, despite strong pressure, and by an overwhelming majority voted to continue OPA and the price control policy until next June. And every poll taken of the American people showed, despite their beefings, their sound common sense prevailed and 75 out of every 100 people favor continuing price controls for at least some months to come.

Only in recent weeks various groups in trade and industry have been increasing pressure in calling for an end of price controls, particularly in the building and housing industry, preferring to let prices find their own level.

As a matter of fact and record, had it not been for the OPA and the policies of rationing and price control, the American people would never have been in the favorable position they are in today to face whatever may come in these months of reconversion growing pains. For price controls have held the line against inflation and rationing controls have seen this country the best fed in its history.

Most folks don't understand inflation and what it means, but most people do understand and resent and fear high prices. The records show that every major war in which the nation has been engaged has been accompanied or followed by a major inflation, followed by deflation of equal proportions.

Rise Held to 29 Per Cent.

And for the first time in our nation's history, thanks to OPA, the cost of living, during and immediately following this war, has been held fairly steady. From the outbreak of the war to the end of 1944, living costs, as measured by the bureau of labor statistics, rose less than 29 per cent, and most of that rise came before May, 1943, when teeth were inserted into the price stabilization program. By comparison, living costs rose more than 84 per cent in a like period after the outbreak of the First World war when there was no rationing or price control. Labor unions declare the rise in the cost of living has increased more than 29 per cent, reaching a 40 per cent figure, but even so, if that is true, it does not reach the dazzling heights to which living costs went after the last war.

Farmers, because of the nature of their business, suffer more than any other group from inflation and the crash which inevitably follows. As a matter of fact, it makes little difference what the price level may be, so long as it remains stable . . . and assuming that the incomes to the various occupational groups are fair and equitable. The more specialized and the more commercialized the business is, the more desirable it is that the general level of price fluctuation remains steady.

Farming has become one of these specialized industries, relatively, and a great many of the things used on the farm and in the farm home are purchased. Too, many farm investments and obligations incident to the farm business are long term obligations, and so the behavior of the price level means much to farmers. For instance, I was talking to a Pennsylvania dairy farmer in Washington recently. He lives in the potato country of Pennsylvania and when I asked him how his potato crop was he said:

"Well, I didn't plant any. I figured my business is dairying and I let the potato farmers raise potatoes."

What is inflation? There are many long and technical answers to that question. But about the simplest answer this writer can find is that it is a situation which creates an unfair change in the purchasing power of money.

For instance, a farmer who borrowed some money in 1913 could have taken $5 of that borrowed money and bought 40 pounds of meat, 152 pounds of flour, 91 pounds of sugar or 77 yards of gingham. If he paid back that loan in 1920 during the period of inflation, the lender could have taken the same $5 and bought only 21 pounds of meat, 62 pounds of flour, 26 pounds of sugar or 23 yards of gingham. The borrower returned the same number of dollars, but he did not return the same amount of purchasing power.

1½ Million Farms Lost.

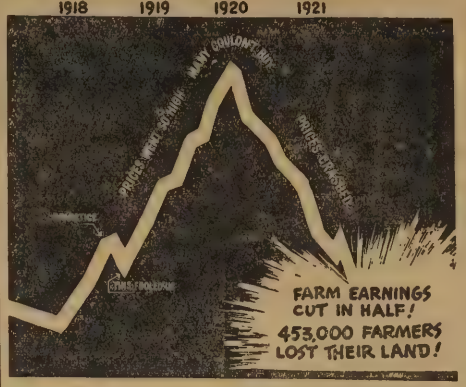
Inflation during and following the last war lost to the farmers of this country approximately a million and a half farms. Why? Because prosperous farmers during the war invested their money in land at inflated prices. They went into debt for machinery, for homes, barns and other commodities at inflated prices. Then the purchasing power of the dollar changed and the deflation which followed the inflated values brought about the inevitable crash.

Chester Bowles, the boss of the OPA, is a business man. He was the head of a large advertising agency which was in daily contact with big business. So he knows big business practices and he has become the rock upon which the pressure groups are dashing themselves in an effort to break price control.

Chester Bowles has taken his stand against price inflation and for price control, because his office is flooded with hundreds of letters every week testifying to the fear with which people view inflation or high prices . . . and these letters come from big and little people alike . . . from farmers, workers, housewives, consumers, small business men. One theme predominates . . . they want to be assured that the cost of living or the cost of operating a farm or a business will not be permitted to go up into an inflation spiral. They want price controls continued for the present.

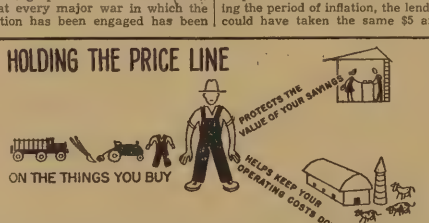
All three of the major national farm organizations have strongly supported the price control program. Labor organizations, too, have given unstinting support. The farmers in the older age brackets do not easily forget what happened when what few controls existed were dropped shortly after the armistice in the last war. At first, prices slumped rather sharply in some commodities, but within a few months, after reconversion and workers returned to their jobs in peacetime plants, the downward trend was reversed and within seven months the inflation boom was in full swing. Prices rose skyward; manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers were forced into a wild scramble for inventories. Prices soared higher and higher. Farm prices skyrocketed 109 per cent between 1914 and 1920.

If farmers, merchants, manufacturers can be certain that the costs of things they buy will not skyrocket and threaten a major crash later, they can make long-term plans for large-scale operations and production and full employment. If workers can be certain of this full employment at adequate wages, then they also can feel secure of the value of their purchasing power . . . will feel free to spend for reconversion goods and this free spending will stimulate more employment.



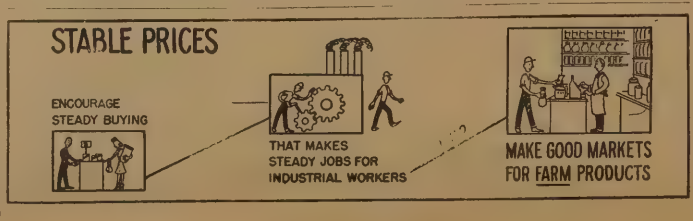
Farm and City Linked.

On the other hand, if swiftly rising prices make production costs unpredictable, business will not be able or willing to plan ahead, full production will falter and fear of unemployment would make consumers afraid to spend. We have often remarked about the analagous relation between the farmers' income and full employment in cities, for it is a fact that when income of workers is high, farm income also is high. When there is heavy unemployment, farm prices toboggan.

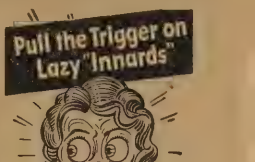


Price Administrator Bowles has given his word that OPA is going to use every resource at its command to continue an effective job with the ultimate goal of keeping a sound price structure upon which can be built sound prosperity. When danger of inflation is past, then OPA plans to step out of the picture. (The present act ends June 30, 1946.) To do this he plans (1) wherever necessary to continue price controls over goods and services which have been controlled in war time; (2) to set prices on reconversion goods; (3) to work out simple dollar-and-cents ceiling prices for building materials and as many consumer goods items as possible; (4) to require manufacturers to tag consumer goods with easy-to-read retail ceiling prices.

Continued control over tractors, other farm implements and machinery, fertilizer and seeds so long as they are in short supply is on the program. It may be necessary to increase some prices as compared to prewar, but the plan is to keep all prices as near prewar level as possible.



Bowles says that price control alone cannot guarantee prosperity, but he believes that it can help to control inflation by keeping the buying power of each dollar and will enable industry, agriculture and labor, together with government, to work together toward a sound postwar prosperity.



During World War I prices rose swiftly. After the armistice on November 11, 1918, there was a sudden dip, lasting only three months. Then the upsweep was resumed, soaring until midyear of 1920. The price level more than doubled between 1917 and 1920. When prices broke in the later months of 1920, a toboggan slide began that brought ruin to millions.

Stable prices for farm products are best for the farmer. Any temporary profits he might make through rising prices would be eaten up by the increasing cost of manufactured things that he has to buy.

"NONE SO GOOD," SAYS MRS. CARL STOWE

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI. — Mrs. Carl Stowe finally got around to writing to Faultless Starch. Here is what she says:

"I've intended to write for a long time, but just kept putting it off. I just wanted to say I have used Faultless a long time. I have tried other starches but none so good as Faultless. It is more economical and does not blow out of the clothes. Then they iron so much easier. I sure am sold on Faultless and I just wanted to tell you so."

That is a wonderful letter, isn't it. Mrs. Stowe has tried other starches and she says "none so good as Faultless."

DOES NOT BLOW OUT

One thing she says in her letter may be very interesting to you. She says that Faultless Starch does not blow out. Now you probably have had the experience of getting your wash all done, starched and on the line—only to find when you go to iron that the wind has whipped all the starch out! And you have to starch all over again—put them on the line —and iron a day late!

Now, you don't HAVE to go through that . . . not if you use Faultless Starch!

You see, Faultless Starch is made a special way so that the starch penetrates into the fabric. It doesn't just stick to the outside. As a result, the wind doesn't blow it out—and a freeze won't freeze it out!

Think what a lot of time and work that one thing can save you some busy week!

But that isn't the only wonderful thing about Faultless Starch! It takes only a minute to make perfect hot starch—WITHOUT COOKING! And, it contains ironing-aids that keep the iron from sticking—NO "STICKY" IRON! It's so easy to do smooth, beautiful ironing.

So try Faultless Starch, and you'll never go back to the old, hard-work way of starching.—Adv.

CHRISTIANS WORKING TOGETHER IN THE COMMUNITY

LESSON TEXT: John 17:20-23; Acts 15:22-29.

GOLDEN TEXT: We are laborers together with God.—I Corinthians 3:9.

Unity within the Church is God's plan and purpose, but that does not mean that some man-made plans for unity are either scriptural or desirable. There is much pressure being exerted now to unite the Church on the basis of a vast ecclesiastical organization, quite apart from any doctrinal or spiritual unity.

Such unity was not in our Lord's mind. He wants spiritual unity, and in such fellowship the Church will find its only real bond of united life and action.

I. Unity in Spirit (John 17:20-23).

Here we enter the veritable holy of holies of Scripture. Facing the time of His departure and death, the Lord prayed for those who believed, or would believe (v. 20) on Him.

What was His prayer? That they should be one with the Father, with Him, and with one another. This had to be accomplished while they remained in this wicked world (see John 17:13-16). How? By the cleansing and sanctifying work of the truth.

The Word of God—the Bible—is the instrument used by the Holy Spirit in this work of sanctification. Small wonder that there is little holiness and spiritual unity when the Word has so little opportunity to touch and to cleanse. Reader, do you study God's Word?

Such separation to God will result in real spiritual unity between those of all denominations and creeds. It is not some artificial thing to be put on from the outside. It comes from the heart of man and reaches out into his life and into the lives of others.

II. Unity in Action (Acts 15:22-27).

Satan tried to thwart the missionary efforts of the Church at the very outset by starting a doctrinal controversy.

Although the first council at Jerusalem (Acts 11) had decided that "to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life," the question did not stay settled, for there were persistent Judaizing teachers who now contended that even though the Gentiles could be saved, they had to come into the church by way of Judaism and first fulfill the Jewish rite of circumcision.

The story of how this vital and fundamental question came up is found in the early verses of Acts 15. The entire future of the gospel ministry was in a sense dependent on the solution of this problem. Christianity is the only religious faith in the world that presents justification by grace as the way of redemption; all others follow (more or less) the path of salvation by works.

The question now was: Shall works of the law be mingled with grace? Can Jesus Christ alone save men, or is salvation through Jesus Christ plus something else?

How was such a serious question to be settled? Should argument and strife be permitted to go on until the stronger party prevailed? Better judgment indicated the desirability of a Christian method of settlement.

The final decision of the council is sent not only by Paul and Barnabas, but also by a committee from Jerusalem, a gracious gesture of fellowship.

As a matter of record (a wise procedure in such a case), a letter was sent which, after addressing the Gentiles as "brethren," reviewed the history of the matter and then, without mentioning circumcision at all, put upon the Gentiles "no greater burden than the necessary things." And what were those? Those things which relate to purity of life as those who were enjoying Christian liberty. The law of Moses need not be kept as a ground of salvation. They were saved by grace. But grace can never be the cloak of careless living, nor can liberty in Christ be interpreted as license to live in sin. We are set free in Christ, not that we may sin, but that we may "go and sin no more."

III. Unity in Doctrine (Acts 15: 28, 29).

In non-essentials we should exercise toward other believers the greatest love and consideration. Men have a right to differences of opinion, and must follow the dictates of their own consciences. Let us not be betrayed into controversy on such matters.

There are certain foundation doctrines which must be held if a church is to be Christian; concerning these we stand together. There is a faith for which we are to earnestly "contend" (Jude 3). We are never, even on the grounds of supposed courtesy, to give aid and comfort to false teachers (II John 9-11). Kindly, tactfully, but definitely the Christian Church must stand true to its doctrinal convictions, standing united against an unbelieving world, and if need be, an unbelieving religious world.

WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I, but who later appeared in Hollywood and secured a job with Spratt. Under the name of Kessler, and with his disfigurements, he was not recognized and became a good friend of the Herlongs. While Elizabeth, Cherry and Dick were helping Margaret, Kessler's ward, decorate her Christmas tree, she told them about the man who killed her mother. Kessler later told them the truth of Nazi Germany, how Margaret's parents were driven to suicide, and how thousands of children were killed before they could contribute to mankind.

CHAPTER XIX

He jerked himself back angrily. He had given her the chance to be happy and she had used it; if happiness brought its own penalties that was not his fault or hers. She had a great deal to lose. Nobody knew what the war might do to this country before it was over, and the whole fabric of her life and her children's future might be ripped to shreds in the days to come. She had made that clear to him when she said, "If my world is shot to pieces again I can't go back and start over. I did that once." Elizabeth did not suspect that when he heard her say that he had nearly burst out sobbing with defeat. He had been so sure, back in 1918, that when he gave her the chance to start over it was the chance to build for permanence. Now he had no consolation to give her, or to give himself—nothing but a desperate courage. There was nothing to do but go on telling her what he had already tried to tell her: that in the final analysis life consisted mostly of doing things one did not want to do, and the only way to keep any self-respect through the whole wretched business was to look squarely at what had to be done and then go ahead and do it.

Now he had to tell Dick the same thing. Not tell him to go to war, that Dick was ready to do; but he could understand from the boy's awkward little letter that now Dick wanted to be told what it was all about. It would be so much simpler if Dick could be left with the idea that it was merely a matter of killing Japs and Germans before they killed.

Kessler turned to his typewriter, holding the paper with his thumb and forefinger while he turned the platen with the other three fingers, made steady by the pressure of his palm. He wrote:

My Dear Dick,

Can you come around Sunday afternoon about three? Margaret is learning to skate and will be at the ice-rink with her playmates, so we can count on not being interrupted. I'll be very glad to see you.

Your friend,
Erich Kessler.

Dick arrived at ten minutes to three. They did not waste any time on preliminary courtesies. Dick had a lot to ask and he immediately started asking it.

"You see," said Dick, "I'm just about to be eighteen, and as soon as I'm eighteen I'll get into the service. Maybe I'll join up before then. I kind of like the Marines. That's okay—I'm not saying I'd join the Marines if there wasn't a war, but there is a war, so that's what you do, the Marines or whoever will have you. But there are some things—" He hesitated.

"The day of Pearl Harbor I was so mad I could have lit into every Jap gardener I saw and it burned me up to think I couldn't do anything about it. I just wanted to kill them. I still do. The Japs, I mean. I never did get that excited about the Germans, I guess it was because they were going after other people but it was the Japs who had tried to sink the whole Navy when the Americans weren't doing anything to them. The Germans—I don't mean because you're a German, anyway you never do seem like one—but I'd been hearing about Hitler practically all my life and I guess I'd got kind of used to him."

"I suppose you would," Kessler observed thoughtfully. "You were eight years old when he burned the books."

"Well, I was pretty innocent myself until just lately," Dick confessed with confiding wisdom. "I thought wars were just wars, because somebody had to run the earth and it had better be your side than their side, and mostly wars were fought to take care of trade and profits and it was principally the Morgans who got us into the last one, and we'd never have been in this one if the Japs had minded their own business. Now I see that's not right, you can't go along letting things happen the way they are happening, things like Margaret I mean. But what I want to know is, what can I say to my mother and father? I can't just go off and have them smiling and shriveling up inside the way they are doing. Don't think my mother has said anything to me, Mr. Kessler! She hasn't. She won't either.

"Let her and your father understand that you know what you're doing," Kessler answered. "Don't let them believe that you're going off grinning, as you express it, just to put an end to a lot of toothy villains because mass hatred happens to be the emotion of the moment. It's not merely that they have a right to think better of you than that. But if you expect them, and the rest of the decent people in the world, to get anything from this war except more destruction and suffering, if you want it to be something more than just another war, you've got to have an idea of what you want it to bring about. Even if you know what you want you may not get it, but if you don't know, this certainly won't be anything but just another war."

"Well, what do we want to get?" Dick demanded. He laughed uncomfortably. "I guess you think I'm pretty silly to ask that, don't you? I guess you think I ought to know."

"No, Dick, I don't think you're silly not to know. We who are older than you ought to be wiser, but sometimes we feel we don't know any more than you do. I'll try to tell you how it looks to me. That's all I can tell you."

"Go ahead," said Dick. He added with an embarrassed grin, "I guess I've been talking a lot. But now I'm listening."

Kessler turned his cane under his hand and looked at it, then raised his eyes again.

"Dick, the sweep of history doesn't take much account of individuals. That's hard for us to realize, because we are individuals and we can't think except in terms of ourselves."

"I guess it didn't," Dick acknowledged. "But Mr. Kessler, what's that got to do with us?"

"Don't get too discouraged about your country, Dick. The United States has a standard it's trying to live up to—of course you haven't reached what you're aiming at, but you're closer than you used to be. Look back and you can see the idea coming—slowly, painfully, cruelly, but always on the march. The American Revolution was part of it and the French Revolution another part. They went as far as they could, but not as far as the idea was destined to go. The American Revolution was a war for liberty, but it didn't finish the fight—haven't you ever read about the howls that went up in this country, long after the Revolution, at the suggestion of free public schools for all children?"

Dick shook his head. "I thought they always wanted schools in this country."

"Not for everybody. There were opponents who said compulsory schooling would break up the home by taking children away from their parents and putting them under control of the state. There were others who said it would destroy the ordained order of society by making the working classes dissatisfied with the position in which God had placed them. But the schools came, because they were part of the current toward human equality."

"Gee," said Dick. "You know, you're encouraging. The place is getting better, isn't it?"

"Of course it is. Whenever you're tempted to believe it isn't, you might remember that it was in 1870, a good deal less than a hundred years ago, that the State of Massachusetts was hailed as an enlightened leader of progress when the legislature passed a law that children under twelve should not be allowed to work in factories more than ten hours per day."

Dick nodded slowly. "I'm beginning to see it." He wrinkled his forehead, and exclaimed, "But right now, I don't mind telling you, that big idea sure is up against a lot."

Kessler nodded too, in agreement. "Suppose I try to tell you why it's up against so much right now. Shall I?"

"I wish you would."

"Well, you see, a few years ago the idea had gone so far that in several of the most powerful nations of the world, people were actually asking one another if any commonwealth was benefited by keeping part of its citizens in compulsory degradation. In cases where they were still doing so—as with the Negroes in this country—they were ashamed of it and made excuses for it. The march toward human freedom seemed to be going along very well. But then, certain persons, more farsighted than their neighbors, looked ahead and saw what we were headed for. The result was a long, long way ahead, so far ahead that most of us never thought about it, but for those who did visualize it the very suggestion was so dangerous, such a threat to all nations and all established institutions, that something simply had to be done to stop the march, and quick."

"Gosh, go on!" exclaimed Dick. "What's that suggestion you're talking about?"

"Can't you see it? It's very logical—simply the suggestion that if a country could be improved by releasing the talents of its people, might not the world be improved by releasing the talents of all its peoples? That's a terrible idea."

"Why?" Dick asked with ingenuous defiance.

"Don't be so simple-minded, Dick! Why, that contradicts everything we're used to. It takes away our colonies. It drives us out of places where we've invested our hard-earned money. It means that the coolies no longer have any respect for their betters. It makes us acknowledge we are no longer called of God to meddle with the private lives of the heathen. It turns us upside down and flattens us out and leaves us no better than anybody else."

Dick considered this, slowly and soberly. At length he said, "I believe I get it." He turned it over in his mind again, then ventured, "It means—'all men are created free and equal, endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights—' it means all. Not just us. Everybody."

"Most of the important facts of life are very simple, once you make up your mind to look for them, but they're often very hard to accept. Like that business of loving your neighbor as yourself, for instance—it's very difficult to admit that he's as much worth loving as yourself. Most of us hate nothing so much as an idea that threatens our good opinion of ourselves. We don't like owning up to it that if the earth belongs to us, it also belongs to the Chinese coolies."

Dick began to laugh suddenly, then he sobered again. "Cherry said once that Mr. Wallace thought this war was being fought for the coolies. We laughed when she said it. It sounded preposterous. But you mean it really is?"

"Why yes, though not many of us are willing to admit it. But that's what we mean when we say we're fighting for human freedom.

"This country is still uncertain," said Kessler, "because it has gone into the war on the side of history. The people know it's the right side, they're fighting valiantly for victory, but they're frightened at what victory will mean."

"It will mean—?" Dick stopped.

"That Americans will have to go on, marching through more blood and pain toward a goal they are not sure they can bear to reach. You are fighting for the coolies, Dick, not because you give a damn what becomes of the coolies but because you care a great deal about what becomes of yourself. You don't dare not to fight for them. They've come so close to you that what happens to them touches you already, and will touch your children even more. Don't stop to think of this now if it's too much. I know it's terrifying. Go on and fight for your country. That's what is being asked of you now."

"I want to think about it," said Dick. "But you don't think I'm a dope because I'm—well, kind of shocked, do you?"

Kessler laughed a little. "Of course not. It's the most shocking conception that has shaken the minds of men and women since they were asked to believe that on the other side of the earth people were walking upside down. If you said you weren't shocked by it, I shouldn't believe you."

Dick rambled among his own thoughts for a moment. At length he inquired, "How did you come to think of all this?"

"I was pretty badly hurt in the last war," Kessler answered frankly. "When a man's life is so violently changed, he has to do a lot of thinking. At first I thought in terms of individuals, each learning to manage his own problems. But when hell broke loose again I had to start thinking all over, not in terms of individuals only but in terms of the human race. That's all."

Again Dick was silent. He thought, contemplating himself, the world, and himself again. Finally he said,

"Well, I'm going to stick to my own country awhile. I like Americans and you can say what you please but by and large I do think they're more decent than other people.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Twenty-five years ago passenger cars used only three to five pounds of rubber, not counting tires. Today the average car contains fifty pounds of rubber products.

More than half of all the estimated 100 million automobile wheels in America are now rolling on synthetic rubber.

Nanking University is experimenting with a new type of seed with a view to growing rubber in some of the arid regions of China.

New automobiles built this year will be delivered without spare tires.

Where they are and How they are

Raymond Edward Nelson, S 1-C, U SNR, whose home is at 407 13th St., Clanton, has received his honorable discharge at the Naval Separation Center here, it is announced by the Navy.

Marvin R. Vines, 26, S 1-C, USNR, of Route Two, Clanton, stationed at the Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, Va., for the past 16 months is being discharged after 19 months of duty.

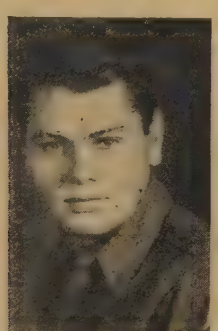
Vines, whose wife is the former Nora Ray, was employed by the Alabama Mills before entering the service.

Marvin T. Minor S 2-C, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Minor of Verbena, Ala., recently was discharged from the U. S. Navy after 18 months service, 14 months of which were spent doing sea duty in the European Theatre of Operations.

Another Chilton County boy, who recently received his discharge from the service, is S-Sgt. Jack L. Lowery, who has seen more than two years of active duty. He served overseas with the 92nd Bomb Group as a Radar Machanic, based in England for one year.

For the past three months he was assigned at Williams Field, Ariz., an AAF Radar Observer School.

Sgt. Lowery formerly attended Chilton County High School and was employed by the Alabama Mills Co.



Jack will reside with his mother, Mrs. Lessie Lowery, until his plans are further developed.

Pvt. First Class Arnold R. Jackson, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson, has been transferred from the B-29 repair base, Harmon Field, Guam, to a personnel center in the United States to await discharge from the Army.

Pvt. Jackson entered the service on May 18, 1942, and arrived at Guam on November 9, 1944, where he served as truck driver. He wears the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre of Operations Ribbon and Meritorious Unit Citation Badge.

Pfc. Arthur Ellison of Route Five Clanton is a civilian again, following his discharge at McClellan Field, Calif. after serving three years with the Army Air Forces.

He was overseas in the Pacific Theatre with the Air Transport Command as a truck driver from April, 1943, to January, 1945. He is the son of Mrs. Emma Ellison, also of Route Five.

CPL. JAMES C. BRIDGES HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Cpl. James C. Bridges arrived here Monday from overseas where he spent months with the Fifth Army in the European Theatre of Operations.

PICKING COTTON WITH THE MECHANICAL PICKER

Cotton always has been picked by hand the slow, tedious way. Now it can be done with mechanical cotton pickers. At International Harvester's recent field demonstration of postwar farm machines, Hinsdale, Illinois, the McCormick-Deering cotton picker was prominently featured. The cotton picker functions in this manner (see numbered illustration): Barbed spindles (1 and 2) pick the cotton from each side of the plant; rubber foffers (3) remove cotton from spindles, and the cotton drops down to air conveyor (4); moisture-applicators (not shown) moisten the spindles; vacuum conveyor (4) delivers the picked cotton to the grates (5) where dirt and trash are removed by air from vacuum fan (6); the cotton passes from grates (5) to rotor (7) and then to air-blast conveyor (9) powered by blast fan (8); the cotton is blown against grates (10) for final cleaning before going into the basket (11). Hydraulic cylinders (12) tilt the basket to unload the cotton into conveniently placed vehicles at the edge of the field.

The crowd at both services at Mulberry were very good Sunday, but we are very anxious to have more attend.

The Isabella P.-T. A. met Monday night with a small crowd present. Mrs. Amye Lecroy was re-elected President, Miss Sybil Langston Vice-President. Mrs. Jessie Summers, Secretary and Bro. Zane Turner, Treasurer.

The Willie Kelly Circle met with Mrs. Bessie Conway Wednesday with regular business meeting. Plans were made to meet with Mrs. Berneice Commings in December and exchange gifts for Christmas for our Community Missions. We are going to give clothing to a needy family.

Elrie Calfee of the U. S. Navy is at home spending his leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Calfee.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Camp and family of Montgomery spent the day Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Tucker here.

Mr. and Mrs. Orna Bell and family of Birmingham spent Sunday here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lecroy.

We all miss the family of Mr. C. C. Williams in this community since they moved to Clanton.

THE VICTORY OVER INFLATION IS STILL TO BE WON

New Cars

The nation's fight against inflation made it necessary to reject demands of automobile dealers that they be exempted from the requirement to absorb increases in manufacturers' prices, OPA District Irby A. Jones said today. This anti-inflation requirement applies to all industries and trades.

Mr. Jones explained that OPA Administrator Chester Bowles last week told the House Small Business Committee the facts clearly indicate that dealers can absorb these increases without hardship. He said a policy which leaves dealers with a substantial increase over pre-war levels in their realized margin per can scarcely be considered a hardship.

In answer to inquires from dealers, OPA declared they are likely to have their best profit year in 1946 because of a greater realized margin and the prospect of greatly increased sales. He added that dealers are now making money on trade-ins instead of losing twenty percent on them as in pre-war years.

"OPA has required cost absorption of all industries and trades. We are under Congressional, Presidential and court orders which give us no choice but to require cost absorption. If we were free to exempt automobile dealers, which we are not, in all fairness we would then be compelled to abandon cost absorption for all other lines of business. This would result in immediate increases in the prices of thousands of products and the cost of living as a whole. It would start an inflationary spiral just when victory over inflation is in sight," Mr. Jones explained.

Installment Price Tag

Garments purchased on the installment plan after November 15 from so-called "credit clothing" stores must bear a tag reading "OPA Installment Credit Price," OPA announced today.

Prices on the installment sales of such garments may be 17 percent higher than on cash sales, provided the retailer, (1) files a statement with the OPA District Office showing that 80 percent of the total sales of clothing in 1944 was on the installment basis, (2) that the merchant has received an acknowledgement of this statement from the District Office, and (3) that he places a label on the garment showing the credit price, OPA explained.

Building Materials

As part of OPA's plan to speed the building of homes at reasonable prices, actions involving $23,069 were brought against lumber dealers in the Southeast for violation of OPA price regulations during the first week in November, the Regional OPA in Atlanta has announced.

Suits were imposed chiefly against Southern pine dealers in Mississippi, North Carolina, Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee, the agency said.

"These actions are part of OPA's program to provide building materials for consumers at prices they can afford," a regional official stated. "Until building supplies are enough to satisfy demand, OPA's enforcement will continue to be intensive," he added.

SAY IT AIN'T SO, MISS MOLLYE. . . . .

In an article released for publication, Miss Mollye Megginson, County Director of Public Welfare of Chilton County, gives some rather alarming figures.

She bemoans the fact that the defeat of the recent amendment had caused her to revive her figures for the fiscal year 1945-46. The article says that this months Old Age Assistance payments would average approximately $15.00 per family instead of the $20.00 per family anticipated under the larger budget.

It also states that the defeat of the amendment caused the loss of some $48,741.71.

Let's juggle that figure a leetle bit The raise, it would seem, was to be only $5.00 per family. That being the case, it reveals the startling figure that some 9,748 persons are drawing some kind of substenance from the Welfare Department in Chilton County. What kind of county is this anyway, and how many people live in Chilton County.

Or, do we have our figgers wrong? —Covington County News.

The magic of the mind is imagination. Imagination transformed America from a wilderness to the greatest industrial and agricultural power on earth. Imagination—plus courage and determination beat the Germans and the Japs.

Imagination will help win the peace, too. For winning the peace can be summed up in one word, prosperity! Yes, prosperity for all and prosperity means jobs. Who makes jobs?

They come from American enterprise. And the Telephone Company is proud to be a part of that enterprise. Because thrilling days lie ahead—big days that mean future prosperity for Alabamians.

The 3,700 men and women of the Telephone Company in Alabama are now putting into effect the greatest expansion program in their history in this state, calling for an expenditure of millions of dollars. Their imagination did not go to sleep during the war years. It remained awake at the drawing boards.

Blue prints are leaping to life with telephones for all who have been waiting for them, just as fast as we can secure the equipment. This is one of our top jobs! Telephones for our farmer and rural friends are also being swiftly scheduled. A greatly expanded long distance service is in process, too. It will include the installation of coaxial cables so we can handle more calls with greater speed and convenience for you, and provide more facilities for television. A lot of construction is to be done and a new service to motor vehicles is also in the offing.

What does it all mean? For one thing, it means a continuation of the pleasant, progressive partnership of the people of Alabama and the people of the Telephone Company. Telephone folks are happy to be a part of this vast program that will lend so much impetus to the state's own industrial and agricultural expansion plans. As we see it, the future beckons Alabama with a busy, prosperous hand!

Far Eastern Turmoil Clouds Allied Talks; Attack Basis For Trial of War Criminals

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

In North China to assist Nationalist troops in disarming Japs, U. S. marines are shown here clearing streets in Tientsen. Right in the middle of fighting as Communists attack central government forces, leathernecks will remain to protect vital American interests, the war department says.

ALLIES:
Discuss Atom

With the international political situation crackling, President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee sat down for momentous conferences in Washington, D. C., with the disposition of the atomic bomb the No. 1 item on their agenda.

Even as the meeting of U. S. and British minds took place, the two Allied statesmen kept an anxious eye on the seething Orient.

In Java, full-scale warfare broke out in the big port of Soerabaja when the British sought to disarm thousands of Indonesian independence troops revolting against a reconstitution of Dutch colonial rule. Talks between the natives and Dutch having collapsed when the Allies demanded that the Indonesians surrender their arms first, big British naval guns and artillery and mortar fire raked Soerabaja to cover street-to-street advances of forces used to suppress the skimpily equipped Javanese insurrectionists.

In Egypt, King Farouk called for a withdrawal of British forces from the country, restoration of the Sudan in the southern Nile valley to native rule, and the independence of former Italian-held Libya.

Throughout the entire Near East, tension remained high over Jewish demands for free immigration into Palestine, with the widespread Arab league embracing 33,000,000 people, and controlling vast oil resources, standing firm for no action on the ticklish question without prior consultation with the U. S. and Britain.

In discussing the future disposition of the atomic bomb against this backdrop of world conflict, Attlee reportedly favored the submission of control of the deadly missile to an Allied commission after the U. S., Britain, Russia, France and China had openly revealed their political aspirations and thus removed the danger of use of the weapon for aggressive warfare.

WAR TRIALS:
Under Fire

Even as the war criminal trial of Gen. Tomayuki Yamashita in the Philippines came under the heavy fire of defense attorneys, a grand allied tribunal sat down to try 22 Nazi leaders in Nuernberg, Germany, under unprecedented procedure in international law.

In going to bat for Yamashita, his attorneys attacked the whole basis for his trial by a military commission, charging that since the Philippines are not under martial law nor occupied by a liberating power, the prosecution lacks jurisdiction.

Petitioning the Philippine supreme court on these grounds, the defense attorneys asked that Yamashita be freed and returned to a concentration camp, to be later prosecuted by the civil authorities of the country.

Meanwhile, the Nazi defense counsels sought to discredit the Nuernberg trials by charges that the defendants had already been convicted before their hearings, citing the allied tribunal's decision that none could clear themselves by pleading that they had merely followed state orders in their actions.

Prominent attorneys in allied countries also have attacked the nature of the trials, declaring they set up dangerous precedents for the future establishment of kangaroo courts with their own rules for retroactive justice to be used by victorious powers which might even be aggressors. Many jurists contend that the Nazi leaders could have been convicted by ordinary civil courts for social crimes

CROPS:
Good Year

Despite a decline in prospects for some crops, Americans will be blessed by another bumper harvest in 1945, the department of agriculture predicted, with the over-all yield only slightly below the record output of 1942 and 1944.

Peak production was forecast for wheat, oats, rice, tobacco, sugar cane, peaches, pears, oranges, grapefruit, almonds, hops and truck crops, while near record crops were predicted for hay, potatoes, flaxseed, peanuts, pecans, walnuts and grapes. Indications also point to better than average yields for barley, sweet potatoes, sugar cane for syrup and buckwheat.

For the first time since 1921, December rye in the high $1.80s sold above December wheat in the Chicago board of trade, representing almost a 30 cent advance in two weeks. At the same time, cash rye maintained a 20 cent margin over cash wheat, chiefly because of the big demand of distillers unable to secure sufficient corn and grain sorghum.

Despite late plantings and a race against frost in many sections, a corn crop of about 3 billion bushels was anticipated, though only 87 per cent will be harvested for grain in comparison with 90 per cent last year. With only a small part of the acreage picked by November 1, farmers were taking every advantage of the prolonged dry spell to let corn cure on the stalks.

PEARL HARBOR:
Red-Hot Inquiry

As the congressional investigation into Pearl Harbor was scheduled to get underway, both Democrats and Republicans charged each other with partisan motives in making the inquiry, with possibilities that the committee would split in the presentation of a final report.

While committee chairman Barkley (Dem., Ky.) pledged a fair and impartial investigation, the GOP minority claimed that the rule forbidding individual members from looking into government records threatened to seriously hamper the inquiry. In this connection, Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) declared that minority Democrats were given free access to all official information in the Teapot Dome quiz of two decades ago, President Coolidge forcing his attorney-general to open the files.

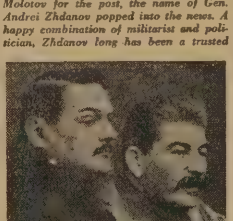
During the tug-of-war between Democrats and Republicans, former Attorney-General William Mitchell, the investigating committee's counsel, came under the fire of the GOP. Senator Brewster (Rep., Maine) charging that he balked at searching the late President Roosevelt's papers for evidence of a secret U. S., British, Dutch and Chinese prewar defensive alliance, and also dallied on studying the pre-Pearl Harbor correspondence between FDR and Winston Churchill allegedly betraying warlike moves.

AIR POWER:
In Spotlight

Three days after salty little Jimmy Doolittle stirred a congressional committee with a plea for a unified military command by pointing up the strategic importance of the airplane in modern warfare, Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, chief of the army air forces, presented a comprehensive program for maintaining America's tremendous air power in the postwar world.

Declaring that the airplane will play an even greater role in the next war in neutralizing an enemy's industrial machine and whittling his military force, Arnold called for a large, well-equipped AAF which would maintain the closest harmony with aviation producers to assure continuous development and expansion.

Harking back to World War II to blueprint the potentialities of the airplane in the next conflict, Arnold cited the devastation visited upon German industry, synthetic oil output and transport, and the burning out of over 169 square miles of Japanese producing and communication centers in 15,000 raids.



Asking for a unified military command to co-ordinate all of the nation's fighting services, Doolittle ripped into what he called antiquated defense notions. Pointing to the AAF's achievements in the Pacific, he declared: " . . . The battleship has been obsolescent 20 years and obsolete 10. The navy airplane carrier has reached its highest efficiency and is going down. . . It was not sea power that compelled Japan to sue for peace. . . . Ninety-six per cent of the bombing damage done to Japan was done by land-based airplanes and 4 per cent by carrier planes. . . . The B-29s made (the invasion) unnecessary. . . . "

In Chicago, Ill., for an Armistice day celebration, Admiral (Bull) Halsey retorted: "If that's Jimmy's opinion I'm sure he's welcome to hold it. But I'd like to remind him that the island bases from which the B-29s took off were conquered by the combined efforts of the army, navy and air forces."

Vie for Red Leadership

From behind the veil closing off Russia from the outside world, come reports of a strenuous tug-of-war between militarists and politicians for succession to the premiership of the ailing Josef Stalin.

Following mention of Gen. Georgi Zhukov and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov for the post, the name of Gen. Andrei Zhdanov popped into the news. A happy combination of militarist and politician, Zhdanov long has been a trusted adviser to Stalin, having worked his way up in the ranks after joining the Communist party upon his graduation from St. Petersburg university at 17.

Wielding personal control over the vital Leningrad area, embracing the Baltic states, Zhdanov was known to have influenced Stalin in grabbing eastern Poland and turning down a British alliance in 1939 to stop Hitler, thus giving the fuehrer the go-signal for his attack on the Western powers and the start of World War II.

GERMANY:
Foresee Trouble

Because of French opposition to establishing a central administration for Germany until the Big Four take up the question of internationalizing the Ruhr and detaching the Rhineland from the Reich, the economic situation in the country may grow increasingly grave and cause the occupying powers serious trouble this winter, British Field Marshal Montgomery declared.

While the Germans presently are docile and well-behaved, Montgomery said, it is difficult to estimate what effect food and fuel shortages will have upon them during the rigorous central European winter.

In view of the growing necessity for co-ordinating the various occupation zones to facilitate a transfer of materials and services and restore essential industry and agriculture, the U. S., Britain and Russia are prepared to work for integration of their districts in case of continued French resistance to a central administration.

PREFER VETS:

Veteran placements in the federal civil service, including both ex-servicemen and ex-servicewomen, totaled 95,000 for the first six months of 1945, an average of approximately 16,000 placements a month, it was reported.

During the same six-month period more than 1,900 widows of World War II veterans and wives of disabled veterans were hired along with 760 widows of World War I veterans and wives of disabled World War I veterans.

Manpower Shortages Cut Tire Production

Production of civilian passenger car tires is running approximately 35 per cent behind requirements, with output failing to reach present monthly capacity of 6,000,000 passenger car sizes by 30 per cent. As a result, little or no progress is being made toward eating into a staggering, four-year-backlog of civilian tire demand, with indications that there are not going to be tires for everybody for a long time to come.

The industry believes that it will be at least late summer or early fall before the average driver can walk into his favorite store and buy his favorite tires in any quantity he may require. One of the chief limiting factors is manpower, with the tire manufacturing industry needing at least 7,000 workers.

Report Army Looms as New Power as Factions Clash Over Broad Participation in Postwar World Affairs.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

What's happening inside Russia? Where there's smoke, there's fire. Vehement denials of the death of Marshal Stalin were followed finally by admission that the man who had more power than any czar could boast of was weary. That he was well, but that he was shedding some of his responsibilities.

It is interesting to note the reaction in this country. The wishful thinking of those who first announced the death rumor over the air and in print was not reflected in official Washington.

The very day before the first story appeared a high government official expressed the opinion in my hearing that the hope for understanding between the United States and Russia depended largely on Stalin. This was after the long series of disagreements beginning with the breakup of the Foreign Ministers' meeting in London, the refusal of Russia to take active part in the United Nations Food organization meeting in Quebec, the objections to various moves made by the members of the United Nations Executive Council. Everywhere "Russia objects" seemed to be the one answer which Russia's representatives had to offer to the suggestions made by the American and other governments.

When the real history of the international conferences, beginning with the Moscow conference which Secretary of State Hull attended, through Yalta and Potsdam, is written, I think it can be shown that Stalin, frequently against the advice of his councillors, was the one who broke the deadlocks and proposed or accepted compromises which were made necessary by his own colleagues' stubbornness.

It will be recalled that when the invitations to the meeting at San Francisco went out it was announced that Russia would not send her foreign minister as head of the delegation, but would leave that post to Ambassador Gromyko in Washington. This made a bad impression, for it looked as if Stalin were damning the affair with faint support. However, after the American newspapers sounded off on the subject, Stalin had a change of heart—or perhaps the death of Roosevelt, which occurred in the interim, affected his course. Molotov was duly assigned to the job.

Molotov proved no simple primrose and more than once, it is reported, Stalin's intervention had to be sought to grease the wheels.

There was another occasion—just which one is not revealed—when the work was completely stymied and finally the President made a direct appeal to Stalin to accept the suggestions of the majority on a point that appeared to have hopelessly deadlocked the meeting. This time, against the counsel of his advisors, who were holding out, Stalin put his O.K. on the request.

Isolationists
Bloc Grows

There is reason to believe that this "no vote" attitude of a number of the Soviet leaders who opposed what many have considered too deep entanglement in international affairs, which has been in evidence for a long time, finally wrecked the Foreign Ministers' conference.

As early as the time of the San Francisco meeting there were hints of a growing "isolationist" opposition inside Russia. Word reached certain members of the conference by a roundabout way, but from a thoroughly reliable source, concerning the status of former Foreign Minister Litvinov, Russia's crack diplomat, who negotiated the resumption of relations with the United States after the long hiatus following World War I. At one time it was reported that Litvinov had been purged. This was not so. But what had happened was that the "Russia objects" element had managed to shelve him because of his more liberal views.

This apparently was the beginning of what many called a "palace revolution," and which some people believe is now flaring up into full flame.

The story of the events which led up to the Litvinov affair has never been confirmed, but it is reasonable to assume that it is true. In brief, there was a split in the all-powerful "Polit-Bureau" of the Soviets. The Political Bureau is a small body chosen from the central committee of the Communist party, which is the government's policy-forming entity. This body is composed of powerful Soviet leaders and it exerts a great deal of influence.

According to the reports touching on Litvinov's position, the Polit-Bureau was sharply divided into "isolationists" and those who looked upon the rest of the world with a less jaundiced view. At that time Stalin was said to be walking a tight-rope between the two and choosing carefully toward which side he would lean. Litvinov, who believed that Russia could not live by herself and who had always encouraged a sympathetic attitude toward the outside world, had been completely shelved for his ideas.

Little more was heard of these rumblings until after the end of the war, when the Red army became the symbol of Russian salvation. Then it appeared that the isolationist Russia, the big-army Russia, the Russia which wouldn't take anything off anybody, had a new and powerful backer—the officers (and perhaps some of the rank and file as well) of the Red army.

In any case, we know that the high officers of the army received all sorts of perquisites, rewards and privileges, which only the highest of the high receive.

Red Army
Strong Factor

The assumption on the part of some observers is that with the ascendancy of the Red army element, not only the isolationists, but the Communist party as a whole, lost influence. There has always been jealousy between the two, though, of course, their membership overlaps in many cases. You will recall that after the beginning of the war civilian commissars were attached to army units and they censored all orders issued by the officers. This proved to be not only highly unpopular with the military, but also impractical. The civilian commissars were then withdrawn and only those with military training were appointed. Their authority, in effect at least, became merged with that of the military.

Now the high army officers are recognized as occupying virtually the same plane as the high party officials.

Just where Stalin stands as a result of this change in the fabric of Russian national policy it is impossible to say. It has been rumored that he has relinquished his function as commander-in-chief. It has also been rumored that he is ready to drop out of the picture completely and choose a successor. In this connection it was hinted that General Zhukov, Russia's Eisenhower, was afflicted with a "diplomatic illness" when he suddenly gave up a widely advertised trip to the United States, which it was said he had looked forward to with considerable zest.

This might have been a signal that Russia was drawing further within herself.

Some believe that it indicated that Zhukov was the chosen successor of Stalin and that, until a new regime was firmly established, the Soviets would maintain a negative policy in foreign relations.

In any case, it is clear that the "Russia objects" policy was inaugurated for some reason and naturally, since in the past Stalin had always been the one who was able to play ball with the Allies, at least to the point where progress seemed to be made toward working agreements, Washington is by no means anxious to see him fade from the picture.

Meanwhile, the one hopeful view which is being taken of the Russian situation is that it may be that there is some kind of a change taking place within Russia and that the present policy of stalling means nothing worse than a necessary marking time on the part of the Soviet leaders until the outcome is settled.

And then there is always another reason which pops up as an explanation of almost anything these days—the atomic bomb.

Good Winter Jobs In Alabama Gardens

Most gardens in Alabama are on the inactive list during the winter months. It is well to remember, however, that a good garden at Christmas should contain beets, carrots, endive, lettuce, collards, cabbage, spinach, mustard, kale, turnips, rape, radishes and onions. It is too late to plant these crops, but there are a number of things that should be done in the garden before the new year.

One of the important winter jobs is to give the garden a thorough cleaning. All old vines and plants should be raked up and burned. As a rule, it is a bad practice to burn anything that can be worked into the soil. However, burning old plants will help to control diseases and insects. After this job has been completed, bean stakes should be taken up and stacked in a dry place.

It is a good practice to plow all of the garden that is not growing vegetables during the winter. This should be done before winter rains begin. Fall and winter plowing will destroy many insects that spend the winter in the ground. Plowing at this time will also allow grass and weeds that are turned under to decay before planting time next spring.

A good gardener will fix a few rows now for late winter plantings. For best results, crops like cabbage, carrots, English peas, and lettuce should be planted in January or February. Most years the garden soil will be too wet to plow at the time the planting should be done. Therefore, it is wise to put in fertilizer and prepare a few rows for planting now.

A good farmer always has a good garden.

FIVE POINT PROGRAM FOR AMERICAN FARMS

P. O. Davis, extension director, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, presents a five point program for solving problems facing American agriculture:

(1) Stability of production on a basis of adequate supply at home and abroad. This will include diversification, low cost, and practical conservation combined with wise use of land and other resources.

(2) World trade, without harmful handicaps, to raise to a high level the term "adequate supply" for both farm and industrial products.

(3) Stability of prices of farm products at parity.

(4) Full employment at good wages in industry.

(5) All of the above for security and a high standard of living for all who earn it by brains, by work, by investment.

When the temperature of drinking water drops below about 40 degrees Fahrenheit, laying hens begin to drink less. When the drinking fountains freeze over, the hens get no water at all until the fountains are thawed out and refilled. Where water is not warmed and kept free of ice at all times, hens may drink up to 25 per cent less during cold weather. Where that happens, egg production is bound to take a tumble, because eggs are more than 65 per cent water.

Hogs intended for slaughter should be taken off feed from 18 to 24 hours before killing, but they should be allowed all the fresh water they will drink. Water keeps the animal quiet, insures a more thorough bleed, and aids in emptying the entrails, which helps to provide more palatable meat.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Oft times it is clothes that make the man. Mark Twain read in his paper one morning this statement, "After the Czar's morning bath it is his habit to meditate before a glass for an hour before dressing himself." Then Mark Twain wrote something of what the Czar of Russia would think of himself without his clothes. "Naked I am. A lank skinny spider. My head looks like a mellon, my ears stand out like flaps and my body looks like and X-ray of a skeleton. I see nothing imperial about me. Would people worship such a nit-wit as I am? No one could worship this spectacle which is me. Then who is it that they worship? No one knows better than I do that the people are worshipping my clothes and not this spider-legged monarch." It is true that the clothes worn by many gain for them the recognition that comes their way. It is not the kind of clothes that you wear that counts. It is the kind of a man on the inside of those clothes.

The Superintendent of an orphan's home was standing in front of his building one day when a little boy clad in rags approached him and said, "Mr., may I enter your home?" "How do I know that you speak the truth," replied the Superintendent in a gruff manner, testing out the lad. "Do you have any friend to speak for you?" The little boy hung his head, and after a moment he replied softly, "Mr. I have no friends to speak for me, but if these here rags won't speak for me, nothing else will." Needless to say that he found a home. There is a language that speaks stronger than words.

A red nosed, bleared eyes, debauched Irishman stood before the Judge charged with the illegal sale of whiskey. The judge stood him before the jury and then said, "Gentlemen of the jury look on this man. Study Mike's face and appearance and tell me honestly, do you truly believe that this man would sell a pint of whiskey when that is all he had?" The sheriff affirmed that he had a pint on his person when they arrested him, but the jury judged from the looks of Mike and set him free. They were of the opinion that Mike's looks indicated that he would have drunk that himself, rather than sell it. We carry a lot of evidence on our faces. Your face is a record of your character.

The clock fixer agreed to repair my clock for five dollars. When the work was done I handed him a ten dollar bill, and then he became very busy tinkering on the works of the clock. "Now," said he, "Your clock is in perfect order." I waited for the return of the other five of the ten, but he made no plans to give back the change. Then I reminded him that I gave him a ten dollar bill. This he denied vehemently. He said that it was a five. This I knew to be false, but rather than create a scene on Main Street, I had to leave him with double pay for what he had done. There are a lot of folks who are doing business on Main Street who cannot be trusted to give a square deal. Some will tell a lie for less than five dollars.

While there are people who will cheat you and you looking them in the eye, yet there are many who will give you an honest deal if you are ten miles away. Honesty shows itself more often than dishonesty. A preacher friend used a small amount of my money for a number of years. In fact I never expected him to refund the money that I had let him have in a time of need. One day this man came to me with the amount borrowed, plus six per cent for its use, and begged that I accept it all. I only accepted the amount borrowed. Here was a man who was honest and could be trusted. God bless all of our honest men and women. They are more precious than rubies.

There are too kinds of honesty, one is to deal honestly with our fellowman, and the other is to deal honestly with God. Did you know that you can deal honestly with your fellowman, and still be dishonest with God? A man in my church was worth one hundred cents in every dollar's transaction that he had with his customers. He was as honest as the days are long, but he was dishonest with God. He had money but he gave nothing to the kingdom, he had talents but no service was ever given to his Creator. he had ability to lead his fellowman, but he refused to serve. This man met his obligations to his fellowman, but he failed to be honest with God. First be honest with God, and then it becomes so easy to be honest with men. Carry this two fold honesty with you every day that you live.

WASHING MACHINES REQUIRE GOOD CARE

For the housewife who will soon be buying a new washing machine and for the one who wants to keep her old machine in good repair, extension service household equipment specialists, Alabama Polytechnic Institute offer six simple rules:

1. Know your machine. Study the manufacturer's printed directions in order to get the best and most lasting results.
2. Was the right clothes load for your machine. Avoid overloading.
3. Keep drains clear of lint, surfaces clean and dry.
4. Take special care of all rubber parts, drain hose, keep rubber free of oil.
5. Keep moving parts properly oiled, bolts and screws tight.
6. Have regular check-overs to avoid trouble and expense.

Y. W. A. REPORT

The Y.W.A. met last Monday, November 12th, with Mrs. Elaine Burdette Ambrose. There was a good attendance and a very interesting program. Miss Mabel Camp gave a discussion on the third chapter in our Mission Study Book, "Give Ye." The last two chapters will be given at our next meeting, Monday, November 26, at 7:00 p.m., in the basement of the Baptist Church.

The Y.W.A.'s are going to sponsor a Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving Day, November 22nd, at 10:00 a.m., at the First Baptist Church. They want to help you get into a Thanksgiving spirit. After all, look what we have got to be thankful for.

We want YOU to attend our service.—Alene Johnson, Reporter.

14 CLUB MEMBERS GIVEN FREE TRIPS

Because of their outstanding accomplishments, 14 Alabama 4-H Club members—seven boys and seven girls—have been awarded trips to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, December 1-6.

As reported by T. A. Sims, State 4-H Club leader, Alabama Extension Service, the members are: Myra Asenath Collier, Elmore, Girls' Best Record; Mary Frances Hudspeth Houston, Food Preparation; Lyda Jean Smith, Etowah, Clothing; Ruth Kelly, Lauderdale, Dress Revue, Josephine Jones, Lee, Canning Achievement; James Wood, Butler, Field Crops; Mildred Grimes, Marshall Poultry; Janice Merle Etheredge, Marengo, Health; James Owens, Lamar, Health. Five boys won trips at the Fat Stock Shows and Sales. They are: George Murphy, Henry; Gene Snellgrove, Dale; E. J. Klinner, Chilton; Harry Sorrell, Chilton; and Wayne Teague, Cullman.

They will be accompanied to Chicago by Mr. Sims, Levice Ellis, extension clothing specialist, and Lillian Cox Henry County home agent.

To protect canned foods from freezing, wrap several thicknesses of newspaper around each jar, or throw an old rug or blanket over the jars. An underground basement or protected storage pit is warmer for food storage than a shed or garage above ground.

BANKHEAD STRESSES 3 - POINT FARM PLAN.

Senator John H. Bankhead put new and bigger emphasis upon three fundamentals in a farm program. They are: (1) price support on a parity basis, (2) soil conservation or improvement, (3) production control through marketing quotas, as, and when needed. Unless farmers support marketing quotas when presented, they'll lose price supports and loans, he believes.

Senator Bankhead is more hopeful than many people are about cotton. He agrees that there are cotton problems but that they are not insurmountable.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

If you do not practice friendship with people you do not like, you will not be able to make friends with people you do like.—Newton.

Looks like Bob's City Grill is fast becoming the "coffee headquarters" around here. Luther, John Morgan and Millard had better start adding another half pound per boiling and get the crowds coming their way again. If there's one thing the Clantonite likes, it's his coffee.

We are publishing the News this week a day early so that "the force" can enjoy their Thanksgiving Dinner at home with their family. This goes into the mails on Tuesday afternoon and if you don't get it until after the holiday, blame it on your Uncle Sam.

That reminds us—only 22 shopping days until Christmas. And that ain't long, believe us. The stores are already stocking up on all the Christmas presents and toys that they can find and that's not many. If you are in town and see anything you want, you better buy it now. It won't be there tomorrow when you go looking for it.

Alabama's record is in the balance. Alabama is the only state in the United States in which every county has exceeded every assigned quota in seven War Loan drives.

If this record is maintained in the Victory Loan, the fair name of Alabama and each county will go down in history for its magnificant war work.

No county in the State can fail. Remember, just one county could be the means of losing an honor which is the envy of every state in the nation.

The past seven drives were war drives and we met the challenge. Will we meet the first peacetime challenge that comes our way?

What is your answer, Alabama? Let's finish our job. Are we going to let Chilton County be the county that let's Alabama down?

Why can't people refrain from throwing their waste and rubbish on the sidewalks? Especially is this noticible around the A & P corner. We guess it is worse there because there are more people hang around there than any corner in town. But that's no excuse. The sidewalks are used by everyone and those careless citizens who throw their rubbish on the sidewalks should think of others.

Dog gone it. We have carried our car to Rip and Sleepy at Clanton Motors three or four times and just now getting it worked on. What we can't understand is why they don't drop the work they are doing and go to work at once on our car. The fact that they have nine thousand, eight hundred and seventy-nine others waiting their turn doesn't seem to occur to us at all. Dog gone it—we want service. Boy, are we kidding? (Service—the word has been forgotten).

WILL THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY MISS THIS OPPORTUNITY

A high official said in my presence a short time ago; that if I was not living in Baldwin he would say that Chilton was the best county in the State. Well, I would not have been offended if he had said it. After all, the people make up the county, and the people of Chilton are among the best in the world. I had most concrete proof of this last winter, when in apparently a worse than hopeless condition, in a hospital in New Orleans. I received many letters and cards, sometimes more than fifteen in one day; numerous telegrams, to cheer me. My room was full of flowers from old friends. And some of the leading officials and business and professional men, came to visit me. None of these people owed me anything but good will; and my obligations were alike to them. What they did then was proof that they were really the best people in the world, indeed. It was, in a great measure, the rainbow that lead me through a dark cloud.

But what I started out to say was, that while Chilton County is one of the most progressive in the State, in many ways; having good schools and churches, good roads, good county officials, and a treasury overflowing with funds, good banks, good business and professional men, etc.; yet, it is away behind in some respects.

The most obvious lack, as I see it, of progress; has been the neglect or refusal of our people to accept the gratuitous gifts that Uncle Sam is repeatedly "handing out" to all that hold out a receiving hand. The people, as I see it, should let their officials know that they are ready to accept these gifts, and the officials will be ready to do their biddings. If the people sit idly by, and let all these good things go to other sections; then they should not blame their officials. They are trying to do what the people want.

Let me mention a few things that I think you should "grab" while they are being passed out.

First, an improved airport. Down here in Baldwin, before the war, Foley had a population of about 800 people and no airport. It is about midway, between Mobile and Pensacola (about thirty miles from either), just as Clanton is situated between Montgomery and Birmingham. Foly got busy started an airport, sold the idea to the Navy. Result, an airport that has grown and grown until I am informed that more than fifteen million dollars has been spent on it, and more than twenty auxiliary fields around it, here in South Baldwin, and across the Florida line. Any and all of these auxiliary fields are better than our Clanton field. The community has grown from that 800 to more than 10,000 in the immediate community. For miles around people have rented every house, barn and chicken house that could be secured as living quarters at fancy prices. Business has increased more than ten fold. Money floated around like chaff in the wind; and big brick and concrete buildings are still going up. Well, I see no reason why the people of Chilton, being midway between Montgomery and Birmingham, could not have interested the Army just as South Baldwin interested the Navy. Now the farmers of this section will have plenty of air fields from which to ship their products. And mark what I say, in less than five years all perishable fruits and vegetables will be going by air, getting to New York and Chicago the same night they leave Alabama fields, crisp and fresh.

Second, by all means the Coosa River should be made navigable. This of course would require the combined efforts of Chilton and other counties, but I could write pages on the benefits to be derived therefrom. This I deem unnecessary at this time.

Third, the most important, right now, is a hospital for Chilton County, that will be adequate in size and equipment and equal to the best. The State Planning Board has made a lengthy and careful survey of every county in the State. Their report says that Chilton County should have fifty-two additional beds located at Clanton. This, combined with what we already have would amount to a hospital of eighty beds, or better, for Chilton County.

Alabama's Senator, Hon. Lister Hill is the author of a bill providing that the Federal Government shall aid the various states, counties and municipalities, who cooperate where and as these Planning Boards have made such recommendations.

The plan, as now outlined, is for the Federal Government to participate ope-half, the State one-fourth, and the local county and municipal government the other fourth. It is further said that the R.F.C. proposes to lend the local governing bodies their one fourth; thus making it possible to acquire the hospital building and equipment without taking funds out of their local treasurys.

Our people in Chilton did not get the big industries and war projects. They missed the business and money that these would have brought in. And, when they wanted to work, they had to journey to Sylacauga, Childersburg, Selma, Montgomery, Mobile; or one of the many other more favored places, in and out of the State. Now, our government, who intends, in the near future, to place hospitals in reach of all; comes, offering to give Chilton and the surrounding area a hospital valued at more than a quarter million dollars. The question is, do you, the people of Chilton County, want it as a free gift, by the government, to be owned and controlled by you and to be used by you and your children in all future time to come?

Don't wait for the doctors to build it. That is not being done any more. The better equipped of the young ones will go where the government has built them. Rural Alabama has less doctors, by several hundred, than it had ten years ago, while its population has increased nearly a million. On the other hand, there has been a ten per cent increase of doctors above that of the population in New York City. Those figures hold reasonable constant in other cities and rural sections alike. The worth while young doctors, most of them, are locating where they have good hospital facilities; and leaving the elder ones and most of the less competent ones to take care of the sections without hospitals.

be by passed as has happened on some

Your taxes are going to help build hospitals all over this United States. Do you want one free; or will you pay for the other fellows and let Chilton County and its good people other occasions? It is up to you. The government is offering it to you. Let your officials know if you want it, but act promptly.

Respectfully,

V. J. GRAGG.

HOW WAR BONDS GROW IN VALUE YEARLY

Yrs.	Increase In Value	Total Value	% of Worth the Yr. Before
1	$ 5.00	$ 755	.67%
2	10.00	765	1.32
3	15.00	780	1.96
4	20.00	800	2.56
5	20.00	820	2.50
6	20.00	840	2.44
7	40.00	880	4.76
8	40.00	920	4.55
9	40.00	960	4.35
10	40.00	1,000	4.17

IT'S SURPRISING—how War Bonds grow in value each year. If held until maturity they earn 33⅓ per cent and they have a yearly added value. The chart tells its own story for a $100 series E Bond. The scale to the left shows how a $1,000 Series E Bond grows. The chart shows that the increase in value is greatest in the later years of the bond's life. Note how the rate of interest goes up in the second three years of the bond's life. Study the increase in the $1,000 bond. Holders of bonds the last few years, considering the above, would literally be throwing money away to cash them prior to maturity. The New York Stock Exchange in the more than 150 years of its existence has never recommended other bonds than those of the United States.

Few Continue Insurance

Concerned with the large percentage of veterans who are not converting their national service life insurance into permanent insurance, or with maintaining their policies in present form, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans' administration director, recently held a meeting with a joint committee of the American Life convention and the Life Insurance Association of America to lay plans for a nation-wide educational campaign on the subject.

"Recent figures indicate that only one out of five veterans discharged is continuing his term policy or is converting it into one of the three types of permanent insurance offered," General Bradley said.

This figure, the committee was told, is approximately three times the ratio experienced after the last war.

A committee of insurance men headed by Alexander Patterson, executive vice president of the Mutual Life Insurance company, of New York, assured General Bradley that the committee "is prepared to go all-out to co-operate with you in your program to present to the veteran the many advantages of maintaining his national service life insurance policy."

Questions and Answers

Q. My husband, a veteran of World War I is sick and disabled and about four months ago put in a disability claim and has not heard from it. Will they write and tell him whether he is eligible for pay or not? —Mrs. W. J. G., Lebanon, Va.

A. Yes, he will no doubt hear from the Veterans administration. If he does not soon, write again to the nearest regional office of the Veterans administration.

Q. My 18-year-old brother is now entering the army. How much time will he have to spend in the service or has there been a definite length of time decided upon. If a soldier re-enlists in the army, then decides within 30 days that he wants a discharge, can he get it?—Mrs. L. J., Pontotoc, Miss.

A. The answer to your first question is that there has been no definite time decided for 18-year-olds in the army. To the second question, the answer is No.

Q. My husband has been in service since February, 1945. He is 31 years old and he has never had any training. Will there be any chance of him getting out soon? He was classified in F-4 and put in A-1.—A reader, Remlap, Ala.

A. Indications are that your husband was inducted as a replacement and that he may be in limited service, but the chances of his early discharge are not good.

Q. How can I get medical care, other than maternity care, for a soldier's family? I have three children who must have medical care and I am under a doctor's care myself. —Mrs. W. R., Wilmington, Ill.

A. Write to the nearest army medical center, or apply to your local Red Cross and they may advise you.

Q. What does the navy get discharge points for? Do they get any points for battle stars or citations? —Mrs. A., Dennison, Ohio.

A. Under present regulations navy discharge points are awarded only as follows: One-half point for each year of age; one-half point for each month of active service; one-quarter point for each month of sea duty; ten points for dependency. Forty-one points are necessary for discharge. Any navy man with three children is eligible for discharge.

Q. My husband was told when entering the service that he would be discharged six months after the war. Will he get out by then or will he have to stay in the army until he has enough points?—L. L., Gloster, Miss.

A. The chances are he will have to stay until he is eligible for discharge under the point system. The war is not officially ended until declared so by proclamation of the President or by congress.

Q. If a man is sent to the Pacific for occupation, how long will he have to stay? — Mrs. K. C., Dennison, Ohio.

A. His service would depend entirely upon the number of points he has earned and the nature of his service.

Q. My husband, a veteran of World War I, did not receive his transportation home after being honorably discharged. Can he still collect his transportation? — Mrs. L. D., St. Maries, Idaho.

A. It is 25 years late, but you might write to the office of the Adjutant General, War department.

Q. How long is it permissible for a discharged soldier to wear a full uniform after arriving home? — M. E. T., Onekama, Mich.

A. The regulations provide a soldier may wear his uniform up to 90 days after his discharge

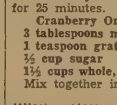
Follow Directions for Tender, Home-Baked Breads
(See Recipe Below)

Hot Breads

If you want to choose one item that will make a company meal out of a plain menu, then add fragrant home-made bread or rolls to it. Fresh-from-the-oven bread or rolls are meal tonics hard to beat.

If you want to add extra nourishment to your menus or to give inexpensive energy to your family, then the formula is bread—or rolls! They contain carbohydrates, some fat and milk and eggs.

Bread can be used lavishly in many interesting ways. A fruited coffee ring for breakfast can mean the difference between a well begun day or a dull, prodding one. And think of the difference between fresh, moist bread in sandwiches for lunch and dry, stale bread.



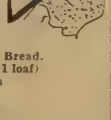
First of all, there's this scarlet-topped and crystal-glazed quick coffee cake to start the day right. Or, if you prefer, it will do nicely for dessert, thank you!

Cranberry Coffee Ring.
(12 Servings)
1½ cups sifted flour
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening
Cranberry Orange Topping.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Beat egg and add milk and shortening. Stir in dry ingredients, mixing only enough to moisten them. Spread topping evenly over the bottom of a ring mold. Pour batter over topping. Bake in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven for 25 minutes.

Cranberry Orange Topping.
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
½ cup sugar
1½ cups whole, raw cranberries

Mix together in order given and use it as directed above.



Now that cheese is plentiful and unrationed, it's a good idea to use it for main dishes and desserts, too. With plump, red-cheeked apples and cheese, you can make this delectable dessert:

Cheese-Apple Cobblerettes.
(Serves 6-8)
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½-1 cup nippy grated cheese
2-4 tablespoons shortening
¾-¾ cup milk

1 cup chopped apples
2 tablespoons sugar

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add cheese and mix lightly. Add milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Roll into a rectangular sheet about ¼ inch thick. Spread chopped apples which have been mixed with sugar over the biscuit dough. Roll jelly-roll fashion and slice in inch pieces.

An old favorite is oatmeal bread which is excellent served while warm, thinly spread with butter. Or, if you seek variety for the lunch box, you will like it for meat and cheese sandwiches. The following recipe takes molasses for sweetening.

Oatmeal Bread.
(Makes 1 loaf)
1 cup rolled oats
2 cups milk
½ cup molasses
2 teaspoons salt
4½ cups sifted flour
1 tablespoon melted shortening
1 yeast cake softened in ½ cup warm water

Pour hot milk over oatmeal and let stand until lukewarm. Add yeast, molasses, salt and shortening. Stir in flour and let rise. When light, pour into greased bread pans and let rise again. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven for 15 minutes, reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees) and continue baking for 35 minutes.

Have you ever looked for a really good roll recipe? Here is one that is easily and quickly made. The trick is to have all the ingredients in the dough at room temperature (lukewarm).

Company Rolls.
(Makes about 2 dozen rolls)
1 cake yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
¾ cup milk, scalded and cooled to lukewarm
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
¼ cup melted shortening, cooled to lukewarm
2 eggs, well beaten
About 4 cups sifted flour

Pour the ¼ cup lukewarm water onto yeast, add 1 tablespoon of the sugar, stir and let stand about 5 minutes.

Dissolve salt and rest of the sugar in milk. When lukewarm, add yeast and blend with 2 cups flour. Beat very thoroughly. Next add eggs and shortening. Mix well and beat 3 minutes. Add remaining flour to make a smooth dough. Knead lightly on board for about 5 minutes. Use only enough flour to keep from sticking. Dough should be kept as soft as possible. Place in a lightly greased bowl. Grease top and let rise until doubled. Fold dough down and let rise again until doubled. Shape into rolls. Let rise in greased pans until doubled. Bake 10-12 minutes in a hot (425-degree) oven.

Shaping Rolls.

The latest in dough tricks is this: after the first rising, shape finger strips of dough 8-12 inches long and wrap around a clean clothespin. Proceed to let rise again until light and bake as rolls. After baking remove clothespin. Fill hot or cold with any desired sandwich filling. Or, proceed in the same manner but wrap finger strips of dough around a frankfurter, dainty or large, hearty size. These make fine snacks for either an evening or children's party.

LYNN SAYS

Bread Baking: For baking bread and rolls, the oven should be fairly hot. On gas, electric or oil ranges, the oven temperature should read from 380 to 400 degrees.

Pans (if more than one loaf is baked at a time) should not stand too close together, so that heat may circulate freely around them. After about 10 minutes of baking, the temperature should be reduced to about 350 degrees and maintained until the loaves are done. Medium-sized loaves require 45 to 50 minutes' baking time, while large loaves need an hour or longer.

If there is no oven thermometer handy, the temperature may be tested as follows: Spread ½ teaspoon flour on an inverted baking tin in a layer ¼ inch thick and place in the oven. At 400 degrees, the flour will become light brown in about 5 minutes. If it darkens more quickly than that, allow the oven to cool before placing bread in to bake.

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

BARRY FITZGERALD, rehearsing for his role of "Judge Fitz" in "His Honor the Barber," remarked "If I'd known how much work radio is I'd never have gone into it." Guest appearances hadn't prepared him for all that toil. Incidentally, they had a deal of trouble finding the right microphone for that brogue of his—finally found an old one that filters some of it out. But the brogue comes in handy in "Third Avenue," the Paramount picture he's working in with Sonny Tufts and Diana Lynn.

It was only after a long, long search that William S. Keighley was chosen to succeed Cecil B. DeMille as producer of that radio theater program. Keighley did some fine pictures—"George Washington Slept Here," "The Man Who Came to Dinner," etc.—before he went into the army. He's working now on "I Love You Truly," based on the life of Carrie Jacobs Bond.

Maureen O'Hara's sister makes her film debut in RKO's forthcoming British production, "Hotel Reserve." Her name's Clare Hamilton, and like her famous sister, she attended the Abbey Dramatic school. Maureen's next is "The Spanish Main."

On location for Bob Hope's new picture, "Monsieur Beaucaire," Director George Marshall demonstrated to Patric Knowles just how he was to skip from rock to rock across a stream. And fell in, of course, acquiring a bruised shin. Knowles did it perfectly.

Olga San Juan has an odd claim to fame—she's Fred Astaire's last screen dancing partner, as he's retiring from picture-making after "Blue Skies." But Gene Kelly, whose dancing is as inspired as Astaire's, saves the day for movie-goers. Both the "Alter Ego" number in "Cover Girl," in which he danced with himself, and the sequence in "Anchors Aweigh" in which he dances with an animated cartoon character, were conceived, staged and directed by Kelly. Furthermore, the lad can act —who can ask for anything more?

An animated cartoon character, "Nixie," steals Columbia's "She Wouldn't Say Yes" right out from under the noses of Rosalind Russell, Lee Bowman and Adele Jergens. People are saying it's the best one since Mickey Mouse was born.

Dinah Shore's trying something different — the singing hostess of "Dinah Shore's Open House," over NBC, will star in Sinclair Lewis' "Bongo" for Walt Disney. She'll act as narrator, sing several songs, and appear before the cameras.

Charity tennis matches to be played by Walter Pidgeon and Van Johnson next spring will get a preview when "Holiday in Mexico" is released. They'll play a practice game for the cameras. Pidgeon goes all out as an athlete in this one—swims, plays golf, rides horseback. He plays the American ambassador to Mexico, just as a change from being Greer Garson's husband.

Betty Hutton saved her boss, Producer B. G. DeSylva, a nice sum in wardrobe rental costs for "The Stork Club." She was to wear a mink coat. The wardrobe department had trouble finding one that was swanky enough. So Betty volunteered to wear her own—value, $10,000.

As soon as Ed "Archie" Gardner's young son had his curls cut he began making the rounds of Hollywood children's parties—within a week he went to one given by Ann Rutherford's youngster and another, a costume party, given by the Lee Bowmans for their son.

ODDS AND ENDS—Comes word that Bing Crosby will probably return to the air the first of the year. . . . According to the latest reports, Art Linkletter's CBS "House Party" has the highest sponsor identification of any daytime show on the air. . . . Leo Gotcher, called the world's champion square dance caller, and his wife, Winnie, appear in RKO's "Badman's Territory." . . . Carol Stewart, vocalist on Marlin Hurt's "Beulah" show, was a sound effects girl only five months ago; she's recently signed a 20th Century Fox contract. . . . Those who've seen "Tars and Spars" say Alfred Drake's better in it than he was in "Oklahoma."

(No shortening and only ¼ cup sugar)

If you'd like to try something brand new in muffins that's truly delicious and saves on shortening, too — try Kellogg's new Peanut Butter Muffins. You'll love their flavor. You'll love, too, the tender, melt-in-your-mouth texture of bran muffins made with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. For ALL-BRAN is milled extra-fine for golden softness.

⅓ cup peanut butter	¾ cup Kellogg's ALL-BRAN
¼ cup sugar	1 cup sifted flour
1 egg, well beaten	1 tablespoon baking powder
1 cup milk	½ teaspoon salt

Blend peanut butter and sugar thoroughly; stir in egg, milk and KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with baking powder and salt; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) about 20 minutes. Makes 10 tender, tasty muffins.

Good Nutrition, too!
ALL-BRAN is made from the VITAL OUTER LAYERS of finest wheat—contains a concentration of the protective food elements found in the whole grain. One-half cup provides over ½ your daily minimum need for iron. Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily!

When buying nuts in their shells, homemakers sometimes are uncertain as to how much "meat" they will yield. This yardstick suggested by home economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture will help eliminate guess work:

One pound of unshelled almonds yields about 1 cup of shelled kernels; 1 pound of filberts about one and 1-3 cups; 1 pound of peanuts about 2 cups; 1 pound of pecans almost 1½ cups; 1 pound of English walnuts a little more than 1½ cups halved kernels; and 1 pound of black walnuts about ½ cup broken kernels.

Vitamin A is essential to people of all ages, so you should get a generous amount of it in food. You get Vitamin A from eggs, cheese and milk as well as from green and yellow vegetables. It's well to have one or more servings of green or yellow vegetables every day.

It would be funny if the victorious powers find it impossible to agree.

KEEP BUYING VICTORY BONDS

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1945 — NUMBER 48

PRIZES AND ENTERTAINMENT WILL FEATURE VICTORY RALLY

Local Talent, String Music, Singing, Free Jeep, Free Nylons, Free Turkey, The Little Bond House And Many Other Wonderful Features Presented Saturday

Chilton County citizens will be proud to know that if purchases continue at the present rate of Victory Bonds our quota should be made by Saturday, December 1. The committee now thinks that this day will be Victory Rally Day IF YOU KEEP BUYING and come to the rally and buy more Victory Bonds. This article goes to press with a shortage of about 30% which should be an easy goal to make in one day if EVERYBODY WILL DO THEIR PART.

Understand that the many prizes to be given away will not be drawn until the quota is made.

BUT—We believe that you want to see our Chilton County get this job done by putting that idle money to work in VICTORY BONDS.

DON'T FORGET! WE A R E PROUD OF OUR CHILTON COUNTY SOLDIERS. MAKE THEM PROUD OF US.

PRIZES! PRIZES!

There will be many prizes given away when our quota is made. Among these are: THE GENUINE ARMY JEEP as 1st prize; three pairs of NYLONS as 2nd, third and fourth; the two LITTLE BOND HOUSES as 5th and 6th; a $6.00 BLANKET as 7th and MANY OTHERS.

If you want one or more of the winning tickets, you had better buy your bonds NOW!

The Bond Committee believes you will buy this quota during this week. If you buy fast and get the job done these many gifts will be given away Saturday afternoon.

DON'T FORGET — Your neighbor is buying — the quota may be made any minute. When it is made, the prizes will go. YOU MUST BUY NOW IF YOU WANT AN OPPORTUNITY TO BE ONE OF THE LUCKY BOND BUYERS.

These prizes will not go until the quota is made. But we believe you will put the job over Saturday and you MUST hold your tickets, you cannot wait until the quota is made by OTHERS and then hope to win one of the 40 worthwhile prizes.

BUY NOW AND BE SURE YOU HAVE A CHANCE.

RULES:

1. You do not have to be present to win.
2. You must hold the ticket with the corresponding number of the stub drawn.
3. Jeep tickets are good for all the prizes; the Jeep going to holder of 1st number drawn. One pair of Nylons going to the holder of 2nd number drawn; one pair to third number and so on.
4. Numbers not claimed at the drawing will be published in the papers for two consecutive weeks, and if still unclaimed, another stub will be drawn.
5. The drawing will not be held until the quota is made. BUT — If you want to BE IN—

BUY THOSE BONDS BEFORE NOON SATURDAY!

BUY BONDS! WHY?

1. To provide money to finance the many thousands of hospital units that serve the boys WHO SERVED US.
2. To finance the armies of occupation.
3. TO help pay the cost of war.
4. To keep down inflation.

AND IF YOU ARE SELFISH and won't buy for any of the above reasons BUY BONDS because YOU GET BACK $4.00 for every $3.00 you put in.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL P.-T. A. HOLDS NOVEMBER MEETING

The Grammar School Parent-Teacher Association's November meeting will be held at 2:45, on Tuesday, December 4th, at the Grammar School.

Every member is urged to be present and visitors are cordially invited. Remember this will be the last meeting in 1945, so be there and help plan for Christmas.

Mrs. Curry Thomas will be in charge of the program and will present the Second Grade Pupils who will bring the devotional message; Mrs. Lewis Williams leading a discussion on, "Discipline or What Have You," and Mrs. Robert Oglesby leading a discussion on, "The Family Builds The Future."

MRS. JOHN T. ELLIS

Mrs. John T. Ellis, age 73, of Clanton, died Wednesday morning, November 21, at 9:25.

Surviving besides the husband, are three sons—Latham Ellis of Mobile John of Montgomery, and Erle of Clanton; two daughters, Mrs. Raymond Smith, Lakeland, Fla., and Mrs. W. L. Longshore of Birmingham; two sisters, Mrs. E. E. Upchurch and Miss Della Latham, both of Clanton; one brother, Luther of Miami, Fla.; ten grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Funeral services were held Thursday morning at the First Baptist Church at 11 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Roswell E. Owens.

Martin & Sons in charge.

Formal announcement that there will be no cotton marketing quotas and no acreage allotments during the 1946-47 cotton production and marketing season has been issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Action was taken in accordance with provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, designed to protect both consumers and producers in maintaining adequate supplies of foods and fibers.

CITY STARTS CAMPAIGN AGAINST RATS

A campaign has started here to rid Clanton of the rats. According to Mr. Peek Kyle and Mr. L. H. King, both of the State Health Department and in charge of the campaign here, when the rat population is reduced then typhus or Brill's fever will be reduced.

The way you can help most in this campaign is to cooperate in every way when they come to your home or place of business to distribute the poison. It is absolutely harmless to domesticated animals and fowls. It kills only rats and if the housewives will understand this fact and refrain from delaying the workers by asking numerous questions, it will speed up the work easurably.

The campaign is being sponsored and financed by the City, the cost to the individual is nothng. The final results is invaluable.

SENATOR HILL SAYS:

I am endeavoring to see to it that every ship and plane that can be used be put into immediate operation to bring our boys home. Give them the best accommodations possible, but remember that our boys are not primarily concerned about the accommodations aboard ship homeward bound. Discomforts did not prevent their going over and discomforts shouldn't be permitted to delay their return home. We should put into immediate operation every vessel available. Pile the boys in and bring them home!

Dorcas Society Sponsors Sale

The Dorcas Society of the Seventh Day Adventist Church will sponsor a sale of fancy work, luncheon sets, vanity sets, pillow cases, quilts, etc., also books for children at the Mullins & Scott Department Store on Thursday, December 6th. The receipts will go to the church and the sale will continue throughout the day.

Legion Post To Sponsor Xmas. Gifts To Wounded

Chilton County Post No. 6 American Legion will again this year sponsor gift packages to be delivered to the wounded ex-soldiers in the veterans hospitals in nearby cities. The Legion will collect these packages and see to their delivery. Members of the Legion or anyone else may prepare the packages under sponsorship of this Post. Appropriate cards will be furnished bearing the name of the doner as well as the sponsors.

These cards may be obtained from J. E. Gore, T. E. Wyatt or Mr. George Parr at Elmore's Store. Packages may also be left with either of these members of the Gift Committee of the Legion.

This is a matter that will cost us very little here at home but will mean a great deal to those boys who are unable to be out on account of injuries sustained while fighting for us. Let's remember them with a nice gift.

NOTICE TO PARENTS OF SERVICE MEN

Parents are asked to notify V.F.W. of sons who will be in hospitals on Christmas Day in order that we may contact them for a little gift of remembrance for those who can't be home. Please notify, call or write C. T. Stephens, in care Chicago Sales Company, Chairman of this Committee.

W. H. Gregory, API extension livestock specialist, warns that through Central and South Alabama "we have built up a large buzzard population because of animals killed by screw worms." He predicts that buzzards will soon get hungry and start killing baby calves and other new-born animals. "This is a good time to erect a buzzard trap in every community, bait it with a few dead dogs and kill out the buzzards," he says.

During 1945 Alabama farmers used 735,000 tons of commercial fertilizer. Of this amount 116,000 tons were superphosphate, 4,100 tons potash, 122,800 tons nitrates, 211,800 4-10-7, and 168,600 tons 6-8-4.

Betty Sue Ellison Seriously Injured In Gun Accident

Miss Betty Sue Ellison, age 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ellison, of Clanton Route 5, is in a serious condition in the Jefferson Hospital at Birmingham, Ala.

She was shot in the right side early Tuesday morning when a hunting companion, Buddy Knox, jarred his gun in a manner causing it to discharge sending the shot into her body.

Latest reports from members of the family stated that it was accidental and no arrests were made after investigation by the Sheriff's Office.

A. J. JONES HAD FAMILY REUNION

Thanksgiving Day was a real Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Chasteen, where there was a reunion of the family of Mrs. A. J. Jones and the late A. J. Jones.

There were eight children, 19 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren present. All these with in-laws totaled 57 of the family.

At noon there was a fine turkey dinner, which had been prepared by Staff-Sgt. Calvin Jones, spread on a table in the yard where 73 guests enjoyed a real dinner.

Mrs. Jones, who is 79 years old, the mother of 16 children, had one guest who was older than she; that was aunt Sis Best, who is 83, whom we were proud to have.

Everyone present seemed to enjoy the day very much.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY PAYS 1945 ADVALOREM TAXES

Alabama Power Company last week completed payment of its ad valorem taxes for 1945 amounting to more than one and a half million dollars.

Of this amount approximately $673,000 will go to schools. This amount, with the $378,000 paid in September into the Special Educational Trust Fund, makes over a million dollars which schools receive from Power Company taxes in 1945.

Based on receipts of the Union Stock Yards at Montgomery, the cattle population is making great strides in Alabama. The first 9 months of 1944 there were 130,941 cattle and calves received at the Union Stock Yards compared with 148,300 head for the same period this year, more than a 10 per cent increase.

Don't drive yourself to fatigue with holiday housework. Take time to eat a good, leisurely luncheon at noon. The rest you will get will add to your energy for the remainder of the day's work.

Christmas Seals In Mail Today

A corp of enthusiastic volunteer workers have been busy with preparations for the Christmas Seals Sale Classes in typing at Chilton County High assisted in addressing envelopes. And they did a big job well.

Boy Scouts in Clanton and Thorsby put out posters announcing the Christmas Seals Sale. Posters are to be distributed in every school, and in all towns in the County.

Postmaster Lowe has advised in a most helpful manner in making arrangements for mailing the seals. Today the seals go out through the mail to all parts of the County.

Members of the Chilton County Tuberculosis Association are confident that the annual Christmas Campaign to raise funds to fight tuberculosis in the County, State and Nation, will meet with great success. The citizens of the County are showing an increasing interest in the importance of a united fight against this dread disease Buy Christmas Seals. Help in the fight against the great killer—Tuberculosis.

Larger Parcels Can Go to Boys Overseas

"Effective now parcels not exceeding 11 pounds or 42 inches in length or 72 inches in length and girth combined containing articles requested by the addressee, may be accepted for mailing to army personnel overseas."

This message was received by R. W. Lowe, Postmaster, this week. Mr. Lowe also asked that all rural patrons put stamps on their outgoing mail instead of dropping change in the mail box to cover mailing of their letters. This will enable the route carrier to give better and faster service. Especially will this be appreciated by Mr. Lowe and the carriers during the rush Christmas season.

Driver Ditches Bus To Prevent Bad Wreck

Several passengers on a Southeastern Greyhound Line bus bound for Birmingham from Jacksonville, Fla., suffered minor cuts and bruises when the bus took to the ditch to avoid hitting an oncoming car in South Clanton late Friday afternoon.

The injured persons were treated by a Clanton physician and were able to continue traveling.

The driver, E. R. Duke of Birmingham, said he swerved the bus sharply to the right to prevent its colliding with an automobile that had unexpectedly entered the highway from a filling station parking lot. The right front wheel was damaged, he said, when it struck a culvert set into the ditch.

RETURNING VETERANS NEED SOCIAL SECURITY CARDS

A veteran returning to a civilian job in commerce or industry will need a Social Security Card when he goes to work, declared M. C. Folmar, Manager of the Birmingham, Alabama, Social Security Board field office today. If his card was lost or misplaced while in service, a duplicate, or an original card if he did not have one before going to war, may be secured at no cost by applying at the nearest Social Security Board field office. Any Post Office will give the address of the office serving his territory.

"If he had a card before going to war," Mr. Folmar said, "he should not get a new number. The same number he had before entering the service is the number he should now have if he and his family are to get all Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits to which they may be entitled in the future."

Scott's Studio Adds New Equipment

Mr. S. E. Scott of Scott's Studio, has recently installed a photostat copy machine. This machine brings a service to Clanton that has been needed badly in the past and will be more in demand in the future. Service discharge papers, letters, legal documents and the like where permanent copies are needed are the principal uses of this machine and Mr. Scott stated Monday that he is now equipped to handle anything in this line and solicits your patronage.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Building the Family

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"There is the secret of building a home; making it a place where everyone has a good time."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE world is full of handsome, useless buildings that have cost incalculable fortunes, and that are no use at all.

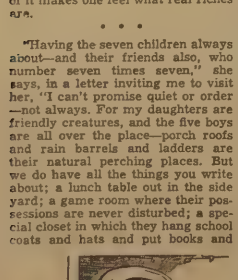
In your town and mine—everywhere, whether you're driving through New York or Newport, Santa Barbara or Forest Lake, you see these gorgeous homesteads—shut up.

Even in housing shortages they can't rent these ridiculous palaces because to keep the bathrooms reasonably warm would take more fuel than anyone can get, to say nothing of the great sepulchral hallways, and the pantries, and the vast cave that once was a dining room.

The history of these old places is a tragic one, not because so much happened in them — but because nothing did. Some rich dull old man and ambitious woman built every one of them, realized very soon that there was something dead about the place, that it would never come alive — and moved on to try something else, build another sarcophagus perhaps, this time at Palm Beach or Hollywood.

I know one house outside of London that cost two million dollars, and never was lived in—not for a moment. I know another, in Hillsborough, Calif., into which the husband and wife never moved. It has 31 rooms, and the floors of all the downstairs rooms are patterned in Parian marbles. These people got a divorce, and for awhile the husband lived on with a servant or two, in the gate lodge. Nobody ever has lived in the house.

Pathetic Monuments.



Up Fifth avenue there are hundreds of these pathetic monuments to man's idea that brownstone walls and plate glass windows, tiles and brocades, boiserie from Paris and rugs from the Orient, will somehow miraculously turn themselves into a home, some day.

The real building of a home must be done with elements that these people never possess and never can buy. Love, to begin with, and dependence upon each other, service, children, work and laughter.

If by any lucky chance you are a woman who has these things, then the best thing you can do—out of a whole world of service—is to incorporate them into a home. Harriet, who writes me from a mid-west town, has a home, and just to read of it makes one feel what real riches are.

"Having the seven children always about—and their friends also, who number seven times seven," she says, in a letter inviting me to visit her, "I can't promise quiet or order —not always. For my daughters are friendly creatures, and the five boys are all over the place—porch roofs and rain barrels and ladders are their natural perching places. But we do have all the things you write about; a lunch table out in the side yard; a game room where their possessions are never disturbed; a special closet in which they hang school coats and hats and put books and pencils in special pigeonholes. We have a ritual for Saturday nights, cookies, cokes and pencil games; we build as many traditions as we can —like a picnic on Dad's birthday and a comfort drawer for serious bumps, cuts, or injustices — this drawer is filled with odd toys and treasures, from which the afflicted one may select. Our children think they are lucky, and other children do too, and that's what I want to give them; household laws of order and helping, happy companionship, home security.

"Builds by some rich, dull old man. . . ."

Work and Fun.

"Of course, I never stop," the letter goes on. "Meals and beds, socks and floors, picking up and sewing together—there is no end to it. I market twice a week, bake once, have my main meal in the middle of the day, and sandwiches —nothing else, but their variety can be endless—and cooked fruit and perhaps cookies or gingerbread or pudding for supper.

"We put unbuttered bread of all sorts on a tray, fill bowls with chopped eggs, mayonnaise, jam, peanut butter, cheese, corned beef—whatever we can get, with tomatoes and lettuce, and everyone makes his own sandwich, and the children feel sorry for other children, who have to set tables and eat potatoes and beans for dinner.

"And what a good time it all sums up into!"

There is the secret of building a home; making it a place where everyone has a good time. All the empty, dusty, magnificent palaces of the world don't hold — have never held—the joy of even one hour in such a home as this. They moulder away in your town and mine, and the children go romping by them, never even stopping to look in at their forbidding gates.

If you want to build a great mansion, build it in the happy simple lives of your family — cousins, uncles, aunts, old people, children. That is the only real building; that is what makes America what she is today.

TRUE WEALTH

Big fine houses of themselves can't bring happiness. It's the people in them that make the differencee. There are plenty of mansions around the world, built by lonely rich people who hoped to get some real joy out of them. Too late they discovered that huge empty rooms are a mockery.

It takes children and their friends, and cousins and uncles and aunts, and lots of acquaintances to put life into a house. They make noise and they wear out the furniture, and they cost a lot to feed, but they bring human warmth and gayety. They make a "house into a home."

Today's letter is from a mother of seven children. They haven't much, as possessions go—just a small house, not big enough for the five boys and two girls and their lively friends—but they have the secret of happiness.

Less Sugar For Us

United States civilians have 982 thousand tons of sugar for their needs during the last three months of 1945. This is about equal to the 1942 quantity, but 562 thousand tons lower than last year. It now appears that the civilian per capita consumption will average about 73 pounds, compared with 89 pounds last year. This allocation includes sugar for commercial food processors. Total civilian supplies for the year are estimated at slightly more than 5 million tons.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

New Veterans' Hospitals

Enlargement of the facilities of the Veterans' administration for more adequate care of returning disabled war veterans is getting under way with the announcement recently that locations had been approved for 19 new veterans' administration hospitals and additions to 15 existing hospitals to provide a total of 15,276 new beds for Veterans' administration patients.

These beds are a part of the 29,100 bed program approved by President Truman on August 4, and funds for the construction program are to be requested for the current (1946) fiscal year. The new hospitals are to be located at or near:

New Haven, Conn., Albany, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., Newark, N. J., Baltimore, Md., Washington, D. C., Gainesville, Fla., Clarksburg, W. Va., Louisville, Ky., Decatur, Ill., Duluth, Minn., Southern Minnesota, Iowa City, Iowa, Omaha, Neb., New Orleans, La., El Paso, Texas, Oklahoma City, Okla., Phoenix, Ariz., and Cincinnati, Ohio.

In the meantime, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans' administrator, has announced appointment of Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, associate professor of surgery at Northwestern university, to be head of the research and post-graduate training program in the veterans' hospitals throughout the country. Dr. Magnuson is considered one of the country's outstanding surgeons and orthopedic specialists.

Questions and Answers

Q. I was inducted in the army and served seven months when I was discharged on account of age. Four of us asked officers if they wished we would get out and they answered, yes. So we went to an employment office in Tacoma and received a slip saying we were more vital to the war industry than in the army and on those grounds they gave us a discharge. Now they tell us we are not entitled to mustering-out pay. At that time we knew nothing about mustering-out pay. Also am I entitled to a serviceman's loan.—C. H., Hammond ave., Superior, Wis.

A. Probably you are not entitled to mustering-out pay. It may be that you were discharged before mustering-out pay was adopted, and if not, you were discharged for your own convenience to take a job in war industry, and without overseas service, are not entitled to mustering-out pay. You are entitled to benefits of the G.I. bill, however.

Q. My husband joined the marine corps in June, 1942. He spent 18 months overseas, received 3 bronze stars and the presidential unit citation, but because his record book was late in arriving at the islands, he has not been credited with the bronze stars. How can this error be corrected? He has just been sent back to the Pacific with 57 points. I have been told all marines with 40 points would not be sent over again. He should be credited with 72 or 77 points. How can this be corrected?—Mrs. L. L., Carpenter st., Northville, Mich.

A. Any superior officer who knows your husband's record could correct his record insofar as the bronze stars are concerned, the marine corps says. It is true that it is the policy of the marine corps not to reship men with 40 points overseas. It is also true that your husband has more than enough points to make him eligible for discharge. The marine corps, however, says there are many reasons why he may have been shipped back for duty, one being, he may have requested overseas service. Suggest you write direct to the marine corps headquarters, Washington, D. C., and ask for details concerning your husband's record.

Q. Can a serviceman stop his allotment to his wife and child?

A. If you mean his family allowance, which is made up of equal contributions from the soldier's pay and the army, no, he cannot stop that. He can stop his allotment, which is a voluntary contribution of the soldier to his dependents over and above his family allowance.

Q. When they start discharging servicemen with two years of service will they include only those already serving two years or will it be effective for all when their two years are up?—Wife, Chelsea, Kan.

A. Under the present ruling, men in the army must be 35, 36 or 37 with two years service before they are eligible unless they have the necessary number of points. The war department says a new ruling may be in effect by midwinter to release all men with two years service, regardless of age.

ARTHUR GODFREY'S one of the most popular men on the air, also one of the most dangerous—anyone who tries to follow the procedure that boosted him to success is headed for trouble. Godfrey made his radio debut 17 years ago, but tiring of monotonous routine, he tried to get fired by smashing records he didn't like, instead of just setting them going, as he was hired to do. He kidded his sponsor and the product, telling everybody they were insane for tuning in. Listeners loved it, the sponsor was swamped by a rush of customers, and today Godfrey has 80 sponsors! He ad libs most of his programs—makes notes on matchbook covers, then loses them.

Lost Diamond Ring Attached to Carrot

When Robert Cox lost a diamond ring at his farm three years ago he gave it up for good. One evening, while pulling carrots, his attention was caught by a sparkling object. To his amazement the diamond ring was about an inch from the top of a carrot. It had grown directly through the ring.

Flyer Back From 'Dead'; Wife Rewed

Waits for Her to Pick One Of Two Husbands.

OAKLAND, CALIF. — Navy Lt. James H. Cales Jr. came back from the "dead" aboard a plane from Japan, but it was several hours before he met his wife, Mrs. Laurie Cales-Bernstein, who remarried after he was shot down in flames at Okinawa.

Cales located her at the home of relatives.

"We met alone," she told reporters there. "He broke down and cried."

Cales took their infant son in his arms and held him while he told reporters:

"I couldn't wait to see the baby. 'Snuffy' is wonderful. This is one of those things you can't explain.

"I think this is going to work out all right. I love Laurie, and I want to stay married to her."

Mrs. Cales-Bernstein said Cales "looked grand," and was "just wonderful in the fine way he took the news" of her remarriage to a wounded veteran of St. Lo.

Laurie has indicated that her decision between Navy Lt. Cales and Army Lt. Ethan P. Bernstein must await a talk between the three of them. Lieutenant Bernstein has filed suit for annulment of the second marriage.

If Laurie will have him, Cales said, he will apply for immediate discharge from the navy. If she chooses Lieutenant Bernstein, Cales reported he expects to stay in the navy "the rest of my life—even if that's 30 years more."

"I read about my wife's marriage in the service newspaper, Stars and Stripes, in Manila. I went right through the overhead (naval term for ceiling)," Cales said. "I did not know what to do. I've got to get this mess straightened out."

Kindness of Churchman Missed by Down-and-Outs

NEW ORLEANS. — He was the friend of the poor, the low in spirit and the down-and-out who flocked to the rectory of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

They called him "Dearie," and well they might, for he had handed out 135 loaves of bread to the less fortunate every day for the last nine years.

The poor of New Orleans lost a great friend recently when Brother James Broderick, S. J., died at the age of 73, ending a long life that had been filled with charity and a goodness of heart.

For several weeks after his death, Dearie's benefactors continued to ask for him. Upon being informed that he was dead, they would go slowly into the church to pray.

His nickname had become so popular that even the parishioners had started calling him Dearie. His job was that of porter, but his cleaning duties were secondary to those of charity. After his death the priests found no clothes in his room at the rectory. Dearie had given them all away, even the new ones that had been bought for him shortly before he became ill.

Woman Asks for a Baby; Finds One on Back Porch

SEATTLE. — A Seattle woman who, in a newspaper story, said she never could have a baby of her own and asked aid in adopting one, found the answer to her prayers in a woodbox on the back porch of her home.

Mrs. Fred Kuhn told the Post-Intelligencer of her wish for a baby after two cases of abandoned infants had been reported.

Returning from a day of visits to possible baby donors, she and her husband found a 12-day-old baby girl sleeping quietly in the woodbox.

To the child's blanket was pinned a note penciled in a school-girlish hand:

"I read your story in the P.-I. And I can see that you will give the baby a good home. Attached to the baby is its formula. It was born September 7, 1945."

Yank Soldier Stops Jap Grenade but Loses Foot

EAST MOLINE, ILL. — On the Villa Verde trail three miles out of Santa Fe, Luzon, Pfc. Joseph D. Womack of East Moline used his head to save his life, but lost a foot in so doing. Now in McCloskey General hospital, Temple, Texas, the soldier said that he was on top of a hill his company had just taken and had gone down into a bomb crater with eight other men. Just then a Jap crawled up and threw a grenade in the hole.

"I just slapped my foot down on it and shoved the grenade in the ground," he said. "When it exploded it blew off my foot."

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A new rubber cement called "Plastilock" for binding metals, woods, plastics, has been developed by B. F. Goodrich.

Latex foam made of synthetic rubber can now be used in the manufacture of mattresses and other cushioning materials.

The goal of the rubber industry a few decades ago was a tire that would run 3,500 miles. Now it's not unusual for a passenger tire to run ten times that far.

Some of the first synthetic tires built in early war days lasted only fifty miles. Mileage of present synthetic tires compares favorably with natural rubber tires.

Tomorrow is Forever

by GWEN BRISTOW

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I, but who later appeared in Hollywood and went to work with Spratt. Under the name of Kessler, he was not recognized and became a good friend of the Herlongs. Kessler told Elizabeth, Cherry and Dick about conditions in Nazi Germany which resulted in the suicide of Margaret's parents. Dick went to see Kessler to get his advice and to tell him just how he could convince his folks that he must go into the war. They had a long talk, during which Kessler explained to Dick what caused wars, and the result if a country did not defend itself.

CHAPTER XX

Dick announced to his parents that he was not going to finish this year at UCLA, and not going to wait at home until he was eighteen. He was going to join the Marines right now, if they'd have him.

Spratt told him to go ahead. "This is one place where you've got to make up your own mind," he said. "I'm not going to boss you."

To her own surprise, Elizabeth was able to answer him steadily. If it had to happen, it had to happen. She said, "Go ahead, Dick. It's all right with me."

"Thanks," Dick said shortly. But he stood there, evidently wanting to say more. After a moment he pulled up a chair with his foot and sat straddling it. "I was talking to Kessler the other day," he began. "He told me a lot about the war, and all that. He said he thought I ought to tell you—" He hesitated.

"Tell us what, Dick?" Spratt prompted him.

"Well—about making you understand that I didn't want to join the Marines just because I was excited or anything like that. About why this war is something we've got to do. You know it's got to be done, don't you?"

"Yes, we know it's got to be done," Spratt answered decisively. "I don't mind saying I'm sorry you've got to do it, Dick. But since you've got to, I'm glad you want to."

"And this war's got to be different from the last one," Dick persisted. "This time we've got to finish it, not leave everything up in the air the way it was before. You understand that too, don't you?" He looked at Elizabeth.

"Oh yes!" she exclaimed fervently. "I'm not very good at praying, but I feel like going down on my knees a dozen times a day to ask, 'Oh God, make this one different!'"

"That's a coward's prayer," Dick blurted rudely.

"Why—what do you mean?"

"I mean it is. Honestly, I've got a lot of things straight I never had before. Kessler didn't say just this, but I mean—well," he said defiantly, "just asking God to make this one different is being like some squash-bottomed middle-aged dame eating chocolates and praying, 'Please God, don't let me get fat.' God answered her prayer when he gave her brains enough to know candy would make her fat. The rest is up to her. If this war is going to be different we've got to make it be different—don't you see? It's up to us. Unconditional surrender, and then go on from there. Don't you see what I mean?"

He spoke with a pleading earnestness. His parents were hearing him in astonishment. They had never heard Dick talk like this before.

But instead of trying to explain it he had tried understand it, and now, in halting sentences full of cliches and schoolboy colloquialisms, he was trying to make them understand it too.

"Well, I didn't figure it out all by myself. I'm not that smart. But in times like this, you do like to know what you're doing." Dick stood up and kicked his chair aside. "I guess you do understand," he said, and gave them a grin that was half embarrassed and half relieved.

Elizabeth came over to him. "Yes, we do. Go ahead, Dick. I mean it." She took his face between her hands and kissed him. It was the first kiss she had given him in a long time, and he kissed her back without minding it.

Early in March Dick and his friend Pudge went down to enlist in the Marines.

Elizabeth was in her room writing checks for the month's bills, when he telephoned her.

"Mother!"

"Yes, Dick? What happened? Tell me!"

"Mother, they took me!"

("This is your chance, Elizabeth," she was telling herself. "Do it right.")

"Oh Dick, they did really? I knew they would!"

"They took us both, me and Pudge both! He's phoning his folks now. They took us both, mother!"

"After all, how could they help it? As if they wouldn't be proud to get you."

"Well, I sort of thought they'd take me, but you know how it is. They said there was nothing wrong with me, and gosh, by this time they'd sure know if there was. You never heard of such an overhauling as they gave us. There's nothing wrong with your son, Mrs. Herlong."

Dick banged up the phone. Elizabeth heard the click and replaced her phone for a moment, then picked it up and dialed the studio. "Extension 269, please," she said. "Lydia? This is Elizabeth Herlong. May I speak to my husband? Spratt, this is Elizabeth. Dick just called from downtown. He's passed his physical. They took him."

"They did? Sure, I knew they would. Nothing wrong with Dick." He hesitated an instant. "And you?"

"Fine."

"You mean it, don't you? You sound like it."

"Of course I mean it. I'm all right, Spratt."

He laughed softly. "Good. Keep it up."

Dick left for basic training. Elizabeth was not sure what effect she or Spratt had said to him. There was a great deal of, "Be sure to write to San Diego. You'll be getting no leave Sundays sometime." "Don't think. "Wait till you see me in my new uniform." Cut. Won't know me." Then a handshake hands with him, and his mother's eyes a faint mist about his. Elizabeth kissed him goodby. As she did so, Dick whispered to her. "You two are swell. Tell the boss I said so. Some of these mothers—the scenes they do put on! You wouldn't believe it."

"Yes, Dick? What happened? Tell me!"

It was an accolade. They got into the car to go home, knowing Elizabeth had done it well.

They got home. Kessler said to her, "Don't stay up to entertain me, Mrs. Herlong. I'll wait in the garden, by the pool."

Elizabeth said good night, and went upstairs while Spratt drove over to the Sterns.' In her room she looked at herself in the mirror. Her face looked back at her, strangely ordinary. She had to speak to him now. It might be more sensible to wait till tomorrow, to be alone first and do some thinking. She could go to bed, and when Spratt came in she could pretend to be asleep; he would stop by her room, glance in a moment, and tiptoe to his own without disturbing her. That might be better. But she could not wait. That man in the garden was Arthur and she had to tell him she knew it.

She went downstairs through the quiet house, out of the back door into the garden. Kessler was there, but apparently he did not hear her footsteps on the grass.

He was sitting with his back to her, relaxed comfortably in a deck-chair by the pool, where a moon in its first quarter threw a faint rippling trail of light. The garden was cool and full of fragrance. Elizabeth halted a few feet behind him.

It seemed to her that it took him a long time to speak, though when she remembered the scene later she thought it might have seemed so because she was too distraught to have a sense of time. He only said,

"Were you looking for someone, Mrs. Herlong?"

For an instant she could not answer. That voice of his—that she could have heard it so often and not have known!

When she did not answer, he said, "There is no one but me in the garden."

Elizabeth came toward him, and walked around to the edge of the pool so she could face his chair.

"Stop this nonsense," she exclaimed. "I'm looking for you and you know I am. Arthur—why did you lie to me? Why didn't you come back before?"

She was looking at his face, but she could not see its expression. Even the faint moonlight came from behind him. Again it seemed to her it took him a long time to answer.

"Mrs. Herlong," he said, "you are making a puzzling mistake. I don't know what you are talking about."

"You don't know!" she repeated. "Of course you know. Stop this, won't you?"

"Stop what?"

It might have been her fancy, or it might have been agitation on his part, or merely his German accent, but his words sounded so thick she could barely understand them.

"I didn't know you before," she exclaimed. "All of a sudden tonight I knew. Arthur, please, please stop it!"

"Mrs. Herlong—" he began, but she interrupted him.

"Why don't you call me Elizabeth? You know me well enough!" She began to laugh, and checked herself. "Don't tell me I'm under a strain from Dick's going away, or that I've had too much to drink. They're both true, but they don't matter right now. Maybe it took that to stir up all the old memories that suddenly tonight showed me who you were. So stop this idiotic pretense, can't you?"

Elizabeth did not know it, but her own talking had given him time to get control of his emotions. Kessler was thinking now that all the time he had been assuring himself that she would not recognize him, he must have been unconsciously expecting this, for he was more ready for it than he knew. His fierce grip on himself made his voice very low when he replied,

"Mrs. Herlong, I repeat that I don't know what you are talking about. You think I am somebody else. My name is Erich Kessler."

"Your name is no more Erich Kessler than mine is. Please, please—I can't bear this! Tell me the truth!"

"I can't tell you more than I've told you," he answered.

"Listen to me," she exclaimed. "You are Arthur Kittredge, you were born in Chicago, you came to Tulsa, Oklahoma, as a research chemist for the Lerith Oil Company, in 1916 you married a girl named Elizabeth McPherson, in 1917 you joined the army—don't tell me you have forgotten!"

Kessler's answer, when he spoke, was like the answers he had given her that other time they had sat outside in the dark talking to each other—steady, rigidly controlled, his only evidence of agitation that restless poking at the grass with his stick.

"I have not forgotten," he said.

Elizabeth sprang up. "Then you do remember me, Arthur!"

"No," he returned quickly. "Sit down, Mrs. Herlong." He spoke so forcefully that she obeyed him. "You interrupted me," he went on. "I was about to say I have not forgotten anything that happened to me before the war. My name is Erich Kessler, I was born in Berlin. I was in this country many years ago, but I was never in Tulsa, Oklahoma, in my life, and I never saw you until your husband brought me here for dinner one night last October. Now believe me." He spoke to her earnestly. Elizabeth sat listening, half convinced by his insistence. "You told me," he continued, "that I reminded you of someone you had once known, and you couldn't remember who it was. Now you have remembered; something about me—I don't know what, since I never saw him—calls your first husband to mind. Tonight, under a great strain, you suddenly realize who it is I recall to you, and your surprise is so great that you are even persuaded not only that I have some traits in common with that man, but that I am that man." He paused a moment, then resumed his argument. "Talk to me about it now, if that will be any relief to you. But there is one thing I beg of you."

"What?" she asked breathlessly.

"Don't say anything to your husband about this."

"Good heavens above, you sound as if I were a lady in a crinoline!" She heard herself beginning to laugh again, and again made herself stop. "Do you think I'm sitting here aghast at the notion that my second marriage isn't legal, that my children—I'm not such a fool as that. There's nothing wrong with my present marriage, Arthur. You're legally dead, the United States Government says you are, they even wanted to pay me a pension. That has nothing to do with it. But you're you."

"Yes, I am me," he returned with an attempt at lightness. "But I am not that other man."

"Then where did you get his eyes, his voice, his mind? I know you, Arthur. I loved you, I was married to you—"

"You were nothing of the sort," he interrupted her harshly. "And if you don't get this illusion out of your mind you're going to be miserable the rest of your life. There is nothing I can do but deny it—no, there is something more I can do, and I'll promise you to do it."

"What else?"

"I'll go away. You'll never be troubled by me again. If I had dreamed this was going to happen no power on earth could have brought me here to destroy your peace. If you say the word, I'll go tonight."

"No!" she cried. "That won't change anything."

"Very well," said Kessler. "But you will make me a promise too."

"What is it?"

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

The knot was tied; the pair were wed,
And then the smiling bridegroom said
Unto the preacher, "Shall I pay
To you the usual fee today.
Or would you have me wait a year
And give you then a hundred clear,
If I should find the marriage state
As happy as I estimate?"
The preacher lost no time in thought,
To his reply no study brought,
There were no wrinkles on his brow;
Said he, "I'll take three dollars now."

There is something we would like to explain to a lot of people. Those we have in mind are motorists. It's about that little button about the size of a nickle that is placed on the floor of your car at the left of your clutch. Lot's of you evidently have never tried using it and don't know what it's purpose is—it is a head-light dimmer. Without a doubt there are fewer head-light dimmers worn out in this part of the country than any place on earth. It's only a matter of common courtesy to dim your head-lights when meeting another car on the highway at night. Try out the little gadget tonight while driving and get in the habit of using it. It doesn't cost you anything and may save a life. At any rate we are sure it will save many a motorist a lot of religion.

Last Saturday night with friends we came to town in search of something tasty to give us indigestion before going to bed. We were sorta tired of the same old things like hot tamales and coffee so we came in search of hot dogs or hamburgers. Brother, we found them. Chas. Gore's Coney Island Stand makes them right. Chas. stays open all night and has built himself quite a trade for being in business there for such a short time. He informed us that the taxi business runs a twenty-four hour a day service also.

Getting to be a heck of a note when an employer can't discharge an employee without a fist fight, isn't it? We understand that very thing happened this week at one of our business houses. The high-tempered party landed in the hoosgow and probably won't start any trouble again soon, but will control himself when his temper gets the best of him.

These "old familiar faces" that keep popping in on us are sure a sight for sore eyes. The latest to reach home is Clark Headley. Clark has been "vacationing" in India for the past few years, but somehow tired of the climate and inhabitants after he received his discharge from the U. S. Army and got transportation home. He tells some interesting tales of the country and it's people. He told us that it was a good place to be from—about ten thousand miles from. That's the distance it is from Clanton.

All of our old printer friends are returning: Carlos Wyatt, Jodie Connell and Clark Headley. John VanDerveer wired that he will be home before the next issue of the News reaches him. Brother Buck writes to put another plate on the table for him about Christmas. That comes under the head of being the best news we have heard since V-J Day. Of course everyone is terribly anxious to get the boys back as fast as possible, but it took years to get them all over there and it is impossible to get them back all in a short month or two—no matter how much wishing we do.

You know, it's a funny thing, when rationing and can goods rationing went into effect folks run over themselves and most everybody else trying to buy everything in the store. This week they took the points off everything in meats and can goods included, but did the same folks start a stampede? They did not. Just goes to show you that they didn't need it, they were just trying to beat the other fellow to it.

CHILTON COUNTY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE AVERAGE LOW

A recent report from the State Department of Education showed that for the first month of school the per cent of enrollment in Average Daily Attendance in 27 counties was 89.1 Ten of these counties averaged 90 per cent and above. The per cent of enrollment in Average Daily Attendance in Chilton County for the first month was 86.50 for the second month it was 87.90.

A report of the per cent of enrollment in Average Daily Attendance in 12 cities for the first month was 93.3. These figures would indicate that rural children attend school four and five per cent less than children in cities. In the cities children are protected by the Child Labor Law which makes it impossible for a child to go to work in the industries before he is 16 years of age. The school attendance law is strickly enforced in the cities which amounts for the better attendance.

BILLINGSLEY CANNING PLANT

Our plant will be open every Tuesday for canning vegetables. We have good equipment for canning meat and cooking lard. Heat is supplied by steam. Appointments may be made any day for canning meats and rendering lard. Sausage may be ground any day on the electric grinder with seasoning added if desired. Meat should be chilled overnight before being brought to the plant.

A supervisor wil be on hand at all times to help in any problems that may come up. Our plant is labor-saving, time-saving and economical. We urge every family in the county to use the plant and get the benefits of the conveniences that we have.

For better canning and more food at home we are sincerely yours, the advisory committee: Mrs. Fletcher Harris, Mrs. Gurley Kent, Mr. D. M. Jones, Mr. Park Mims, Mr. A. F. Bass, Miss Kelsie Nixon and Mr. J. C. White.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We had a good attendance at preaching Sunday. We are very sorry to report that a few members in the community are sick and were unable to attend church. Bro. Cook's father is very ill at the time of this write-up and we hope that he will soon be recovered.

Remember the Second and Fourth Sunday and Sunday nights are our regular preaching dates, and everybody go to church somewhere each Sunday, and we are always glad to have visitors.

Bro. Stucky preached two very inspiring sermons at Mulberry Sunday and Sunday night to a very good crowd.

The program for the week of prayer of W.M.S. will be held at the church two nights next week—Wednesday and Thursday nights, at 6:00 p.m.

The social by the Young Men and Young Women's Sunday School Classes of Mulberry was held in the lunchroom at Isabella School Friday and was enjoyed by all who attended, but on account of the weather the crowd was not as large as was expected. A talk by Bro. Roswell Owens, of Clanton, was one of the main features of the evening.

Mrs. Novice Jones and Mrs. Mollie Smith were in charge.

Miss Lorene Lecroy of Gadsden spent the week end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lecroy.

Lt. Chalmers Jones, who has just returned from overseas, is here spending his furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Evans left Saturday to visit a while in Miami, Fla., with their son, Dr. B. L. Evans, and other sons and their families there.

Pvt. Judson Cummings is spending his furlough here with his mother Mrs. Ethel Cummings.

Mrs. Cuba Conway and Ross of Clanton spent several days here last week with Mr. and Mrs. Denson Conway.

Mrs. D. O. Manning returned home Friday after visiting her daughter Mrs. C. T. Little, in Winchester, Tenn., and her son, Capt. O. O. Manning, in Memphis, Tenn., for several days.

Prof. R. L. Yielding and son, K Lemon, spent the holidays in Cullman County, where he recently taught at Cold Springs High School.

Glenn Jones spent Thanksgiving Day in Birmingham with his brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jones. He carried Little Ronny Jones home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Oliver and children spent the holidays here with her mother, Mrs. D. O. Manning.

Lamar Williams of the U. S. Navy was here last week visiting the high school.

Malcolm Lecroy is at home with a discharge from the U. S. Navy, and will spend some time with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Lecroy, here before going to work.

Lloyd Jones of the U. S. Navy spent a few days here last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jones.

Miss Truman Stuckey spent the holidays in Birmingham with relatives and friends.

CAPT. DAN C. SMITH IS HOME

Like a lot of other boys, he has waited a long time for this "vacation." He and his family, too.

Capt. Smith arrived in Birmingham Sunday and was in Clanton Monday. He has been in the Service for the past four years and has seen plenty of action over in the Pacific. He was overseas 19 months and the latter part of this time he was stationed at Guam.

He has been through the Separation Center and following his 90-day leave he will receive his honorable discharge.

Welcome home, Captain Smith.

The new world organization cannot afford to present the world with a picture of many American republics outvoting the rest of the world.

Misses Mary and Janice Roberts of Montgomery, Ala., were visitors in Clanton for the holidays and attended several parties given for the young people.

We are very glad to learn that Miss Eleanor Lewis is back at her teaching post. Miss Lewis has been away because of a broken ankle she received at school. She is a very determined person and she shows it by attending to her job even though she must do so in a wheel chair. Miss Lewis spent Thanksgiving with her mother in Sweetwater, Ala. Good luck, Miss Lewis.

Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Studdard and sons spent Sunday afternoon in Birmingham. They went there to pick up their daughter, Melba, who had been visiting in Oneonta, Ala., for the holidays.

Oscar Jones from the University was home for Thanksgiving holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pattillo had as their guest last week end Percy Strickland, Jr., of Braggs, Ala. He has just returned from overseas duty with Uncle Sam's Navy.

Mrs. J. C. Jester and Mrs. Julia Lions and son, Richard, of Union Springs, were holiday guests of the George Jesters.

Miss Judy Parrish, who attends school in Birmingham, visited her father here recently.

There are some people in the world who judge everyone by their promptness in paying bills. Usually the critics are the folks who inherited their father's money.

Miss Elizabeth Wade from Judson College spent the holidays here with her parents.

Mrs. Beatrice Bryan had as her guest last week her sister, Miss Mabel Jones, of Montgomery.

Mr. T. B. Jones of Talladega, Ala., visited his brother, Alonza Askins, and family for the holidays.

Misses Janice and Mary Roberts from Montgomery spent Thanksgiving here with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway with Mrs. Raymond Cox, Miss Hazel Taylor and Charles Cox attended the Crippled Children's Clinic ball game in Birmingham Thursday.

Miss "Kakie" Wilkins visited the R. M. Tuckers Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Vaperman of Millville, N. J., entertained at their home with a big turkey dinner on Thanksgiving. Among those present were: Cpl. and Mrs. Dwight Stone, S-Sgt. and Mrs. Tommie Coreasll and Sgt. and Mrs. Wilson Maddox.

T-5 and Mrs. Frank Presswood and son, Frank, Jr., are visiting relatives in Florala, Ala.

Dr. and Mrs. John D. Eiland had as their guests during the holidays, their children, Major and Mrs. John D. Eiland, Jr., and baby, Sgt. Bill Eiland and Miss Margaret Eiland from the University of Alabama.

Miss Betty Jo Foshee and Charles visited Betty Jo's father at the veteran's Hospital in Montgomery last Sunday. Mr. Foshee is improving rapidly and hopes to be home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Hi Younger of Birmingham were visitors in Clanton the latter part of last week. They visited her mother, Mrs. Mark Tucker, and other relatives and friends.

Mrs. Doc Smith, who has been in the Central Alabama Hospital for some time, was taken to a Birmingham hospital Tuesday. She has been seriously ill.

Younger Set Entertained

Last Wednesday evening Mrs. Roscoe Connell entertained a group of her son's, Connie Mack, friends with a lovely party and dance at the City Hall. The program was planned so that the boys and girls were kept busy every minute. The hall was decorated to carry out the Thanksgiving motive, with autumn leaves and flowers everywhere. Candles burned in the windows and the punch table was arranged so that the guests could serve themselves.

Mrs. Connell was assisted by Mrs. Jeff Miller, Mrs. Erskine Connell, Miss Billie Johnson and Mrs. Elaine Ambrose in entertaining and the boys and girls report a grand time was had by every one.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Methodist Start White Christmas Campaign

Methodists of Alabama and Northwest Florida, are again called to rally to the aid of the Methodist Children's Home at Selma through a "White Christmas" campaign which will culminate on White Christmas Sunday, December 23, in contributions from all the churches and their various departments to a fund which will supply the needs of the Home during 1946.

The Board of Directors of this Home, composed of twenty-two outstanding Methodist men and women elected by the two annual Conferences from over Alabama and Northwest Florida, in sending out this Appeal through the Chairman, Kenneth E. Cooper, of Birmingham, point to the ever increasing cost of maintaining this institution in these times, the responsibility on Methodists to "these other children," and urging that a "white" made possible to the "Methodist Children's Home," be sent to Wood Bevan, Superintendent of the Home at Selma.

Campaign headquarters have been opened on the ninth floor of the First National Building here, with Mrs. [illegible] in charge, where any information about the "White Christmas" as well as supplies to be used in the campaign in the various churches and departments may be obtained.

Other friends of childhood are also welcome to take part in this observance for the benefit of 130 children, except no distinction is made as to the religious background of a child, and Superintendent McCrary declares all we want to know is whether or not the child needs us and if we can meet its needs."

Pecans furnish a generous amount of fats and protein, and also B vitamins, together with small amounts of iron and calcium. In pastry, pecans ground fine may substitute for all the fat, say extension service specialists. Mix and bake like plain pastry.

Do not stand on damp ground or wet floor while attaching, detaching or using electrical appliances.

Teach your family not to leave the hamper, waste baskets, brooms and the like on stairs, and do not allow children to play on stairs.

"THE JOB HAS BEEN WELL DONE"
says Secretary of War Patterson

"The transportation requirements of this war have been tremendous. The part played by the railroads of America in meeting these requirements has been so outstanding and of such a high degree of efficiency that it reflects great credit on railroad transportation generally and upon the officers and employees of the individual railroads which make up the whole. The job has been well done."

—Excerpt from a letter of the Hon. Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of War, addressed to the Association of American Railroads.

Thanks, Mr. Secretary, for this tribute!

As a part of the great railroad industry, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, with its 34,000 employees, a 42 million-dollar expenditure for improvements, and splendid public cooperation, helped to make this fine performance possible.

With a further improvement program of 30 million dollars already authorized, the "Old Reliable" is moving forward. It wants its peace time service also to warrant public recognition, good will, and patronage.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Legion Hears "Ike's" Plea for Military Training; Medics Rap Truman Health Insurance Plan

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Bearing out rumors of strained feelings between them, Gen. Walter C. Short (left) passes Adm. Husband Kimmel (seated at right) without greeting at Pearl Harbor inquiry.

AMERICAN LEGION:
Hear "Ike"

Making the 27th annual convention of the American Legion in Chicago, Ill., the occasion for what he called the most important speech of his career, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower threw his full weight behind compulsory military training.

Suffering from a cold himself, and having left the sick-bed of his wife to address his comrades of two world wars, "Ike" easily stole the convention show, 300,000 Chicagoans lining the route from the railroad station to give him a rousing welcome, and pressing about his car so thickly at times that military police had to clear a path.

In pleading for compulsory military training, Eisenhower pointed to the necessity of having a well-trained army to meet immediate emergencies, while also developing a strong striking force to command the respect of other nations in our dealings for a peaceful postwar world.

In answering religious and scholastic critics of such a training program, "Ike" asserted that history had proven that a weak U. S. could not preserve peace, and that if we adhered to our established principles of non-aggression we would have nothing to fear from the organization of a large, well-equipped reserve army.

HEALTH INSURANCE:
Buck Proposal

Mouthpiece of the U. S. medical profession, the American Medical Journal took an immediate stand against President Truman's recommendation for a broad national health insurance program, labeling the proposal as socialistic.

The Journal directed its fire against two of the President's five points, embracing a prepayment plan for care to be financed from payroll taxes or general treasury funds, and calling for government support of public and nonprofit medical educational institutions.

Though the President's proposal would permit the sick to select their own doctors or hospitals, and the latter to pick their own patients, the Journal insisted that the law would lead to political control of medical activities. As to government backing for certain educational institutions to provide a more adequate curricula, the Journal asserted the power to ladle out funds would result in control of medical schools.

Spearheading the opposition to the plan in the senate, Senator Taft (Rep., Ohio) pushed an alternate bill under which the government would increase aid to states and localities to assure proper treatment for the poverty-stricken.

Whereas a 4 per cent payroll tax on earnings up to $3,600, or even a 2 per cent levy, would add up to substantial deductions each week, Taft declared that decentralized state or local administration would be considerably cheaper, plus preserving the independent status of the medical profession.

NEW AUTOS:
Hold Line

By holding down manufacturers' charges and cutting into dealers' profit margins, OPA retail price ceilings on new postwar automobiles have been pegged closely to 1942 levels, with Studebakers 9 per cent above prewar costs, Fords 2 per cent higher, Chrysler machines 1 per cent up and General Motors 2 per cent below.

In announcing the retail prices, OPAdministrator Bowles stated that increases were allowed in consideration of new designing and engineering specifications, assuring better styling, performance and serviceability. None of the new cars will be equipped with a spare tire, however.

OPA reduction of dealers' profit margins by 2½ per cent was decided despite the trade's strenuous efforts to maintain prewar charges. In turning down dealers' pleas, Bowles declared that they actually would make more money than before the war because of the smaller consideration they will have to give for older cars in trade-ins in the face of the huge demand for new vehicles.

Grain Trade Booms

With the European grain crop over 2 billion bushels short of satisfying prewar needs, and with continued heavy domestic demands, future transactions on the Chicago Board of Trade have been the largest since 1937, with over 6 billion bushels changing hands during the first 10 months of this year.

Rye and wheat have been the pace-setters, with rye climbing 88½ cents from the year's low to hit $1.90½ on December deliveries, and wheat advancing 31¼ cents from its 1945 bottom to close at $1.80½ on the December line. Oats have also responded to the heavy demand, advancing 26 cents from a year's low to return 76⅜ on the December deliveries.

With 2 billion, 794 million bushels of rye having been traded up to November 1 and the supply tight, exchange officials sought to prevent a corner and runaway in the market by prohibiting new holdings in December and May rye in excess of 250,000 bushels and raising margin requirements to 35 cents a bushel, up 10 cents over the prevailing rate.

TAX-EXEMPTION:
Groups Report

Complying with provisions of the revenue act, 86,647 tax-exempt organizations reported gross receipts of five billion dollars for 1943, with 4,397 farm co-ops credited with about 40 per cent of the total.

Framed as a request by congress to allow further study on whether to remove certain beneficiaries from the tax-exempt rolls, the order requiring returns followed demands for revelation of labor union contributions to political campaigns, and attacks against certain farm co-ops in competition with private industry.

In commenting upon the reports, Chairman Walter George (Dem., Ga.) of the senate finance committee declared: "It may well be that every return made will show such structure and such a course of business as to persuade . . . or satisfy congress they ought not to be interfered with at all . . ."

With over 2 billion dollars of gross income, farm co-ops led the tax-exempt groups, with literary, scientific, educational, charitable and similar institutions following with 800 million dollars; mutual savings banks, 450 million dollars; labor unions, 389 million dollars; civic leagues and social welfare organizations, 189 million dollars; business leagues and chambers of commerce, 185 million dollars, and social clubs, 144 million dollars.

Accidents Make Farming Hazardous Industry

According to data compiled by the National Safety council the occupational death total in agriculture continues to be the largest of any major industry. With 8.1 million farm workers in the United States in 1944, the death rate was 53 per 100 thousand, whereas in the nation's other industries 35 workers out of every 100 thousand were killed in occupational accidents.

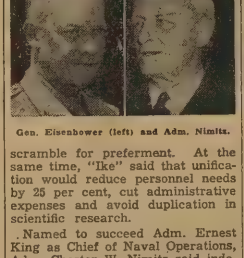
The home, usually considered to be a safe refuge, is where many accidents, both fatal and non-fatal, occur. Last year 6,000 home accidents occurred to farmers, their wives and children and other members of the rural household. Another 4,300 farm people were killed in motor vehicle accidents and there were 4,300 deaths to farmers while at work, including 800 motor vehicle fatalities.

PEARL HARBOR:
'Climb Mt. Niitaka'

Code message ordering the attack on Pearl Harbor, these fateful words were relayed to a Japanese task force of four carriers and escorts on December 5, 1941, when it was between 800 and 1,000 miles off Hawaii, testimony at the congressional inquiry into the greatest naval disaster in American history revealed.

Gleaned from captured Nipponese documents and questioning of prisoners, and presented to the investigating committee by Rear Adm. T. B. Inglis, the disclosure of enemy war plans showed that the surprise assault had been planned as early as January, 1941, by Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, who later told officers that though Japan did not want to fight the U. S., she would have to if America continued to aid China and block off oil shipments.

Despite the Japs' elaborate preparation for the attack, Inglis said, their plans were sufficiently elastic to permit them to turn back if an amicable settlement were made with the U. S. before the assault, or if they were sighted by U. S. units two days before "X" day.



In the event that the attack at Pearl Harbor failed to knock out the U. S. force, Inglis said, Jap plans called for the entrance of the main fleet into action for a decisive encounter. As it was the enemy's low-level torpedo assault by 351 planes sank 4 battleships, 1 medium cruiser and 1 auxiliary vessel; heavily damaged 3 battleships, 3 destroyers and 1 auxiliary vessel, and lightly damaged 3 battleships, 1 light cruiser and 1 auxiliary. In addition, 188 U. S. aircraft were destroyed. Against this toll, the enemy lost 27 planes and five midget submarines.

Because of the insuperable supply problems, the Japanese did not attempt a landing on Hawaii following the devastating attack.

UNIFIED COMMAND:
Pro and Con

Powerful pleas for a unified postwar command by the army to effect co-ordination, economy and progress were countered by equally powerful protests by the navy to assure adequate development of each branch of the service through independent action.

Newly appointed Chief of Staff, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared that only through unification could the air, sea and ground forces be properly balanced, while independence would result in a three-way scramble for preferment. At the same time, "Ike" said that unification would reduce personnel needs by 25 per cent, cut administrative expenses and avoid duplication in scientific research.

Named to succeed Adm. Ernest King as Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz said independence of the service branches assured the safest development of each, further declaring that one could not foretell whether the next enemy of the U. S. might be a great land or sea power. Instead of a unified command, Nimitz asked for a defense council made up of the secretaries of navy, war and state, which could be expected to coordinate action.

CRIME WAVE:
Hits New York

Short 4,000 policemen, New York City has experienced a vicious postwar crime wave, throwing an angry citizenry up in arms with a threat to call for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's removal of Mayor Fiorello La Guardia from office unless remedial action were taken.

Pointed up by the slaying of Patrolman Francis McKeon by a crazed Negro, who beat and shot him to death after running wild in the streets, the outbreak of lawlessness has seen 62 people slain in 70 days. On one day alone, one taxi driver was found shot in his cab; four bandits attempted to hold up a garage, and four more hoodlums robbed a tavern of $1,250.

In seeking to put a clamp on the crime wave, 19 special squad cars equipped with tear gas grenades, machine guns, rifles and searchlights were put into 24-hour service, while city officials also sought to speed up police recruitments by taking in discharged vets who had passed examinations before their induction.

FRUIT STUDY:

It takes at least five times as long to get information on a tree crop, such as apples, as it does to get equally exact information about an annual crop.

Tree fruits, also, are space eaters at agricultural experiment stations. About 2,400 tomatoes may be planted on a fertile acre. Cornfields for grain production may have about 3,500 hills to the acre and 3 plants to the hill. But when trying out apples, not more than 100 trees can be grown on an acre at cropping age.

Washington Digest

Attitude Against Postwar Service Sways Congress

Public Joins Influential Organizations in Objections to Training; Need for Interim Security Force Argued.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W. Washington, D. C.

In the days that followed President Truman's message to congress urging universal military training we, in Washington, waited to see if there would be an echo to the President's words spoken so earnestly but with so little effect on the audience before him. There was an echo all right but it was an emphatic rumble of negation.

I wasn't surprised — I read my listeners' letters.

It was interesting to see the way the members of congress reacted to the President's message as he delivered it. I watched them with one eye on the text of his speech as I stood squeezed into the crowd in the gallery of the house.

Varied Reaction To Proposal

Here are some of the sentences which I checked as bringing response:

". . . above all else, we are strong because of the courage and vigor and skill of a liberty-loving people who are determined that this nation shall remain forever free." (Applause). Well, that was a general, non-compromising sentiment. Nothing to do with the subject in hand.

There was the statement that we didn't lack faith in the United Nations organization, "on the contrary with all we have, we intend to back our obligations and commitments under the United Nations charter." (Mild applause, this time.)

Then came the response to the first direct appeal for the measure in hand. The President said: "The surest way to guarantee that no nation will attack us is to remain strong in the only kind of strength an aggressor can understand—military power." Applause again but I had the feeling it was for the sentiment and not the suggested means of implementing it.

When he said that "the basic reason for military training" is to guarantee safety and freedom from an aggressor, there was another demonstration, but not quite as energetic and many members, I noted, refrained from any applause at all.

The last note is the most emphatic. "Good applause" followed the President's affirmation that "until we are assured that our peace machinery is functioning adequately, "we must relentlessly preserve our superiority on land and sea and in the air." But that is just what the congress is not willing to do because it believes the country is not willing to have them do it. I am sure of that because I know they have been receiving, as I have, far more letters against military training than in favor of it.

Must Sell Public Program

Today, a man who keeps his fingers on the pulse of congress assures me that there will never be a universal military training act until a great deal more "selling" has been done by those who believe in it, than has been attempted so far.

This man, like the writer, is a convert to the cause, so his expression was the reverse of wishful thinking. Both of us, though members of the American Legion, never favored their program for universal service urged upon congress, beginning shortly after the last war.

"There is too much organized opposition," my friend said, "such powerful influences as the federal council of churches, some influential members of the Catholic church, virtually all of labor so far (and this includes the CIO and the AFL which often nullify each other's efforts) the colleges and the unorganized group which might be called simply 'the mothers.'"

Where do the returned veterans stand? It is too early to say. If they follow in their fathers' footsteps they will eventually vote for preparedness. It is the tendency of men who have seen service to place a high value on thorough preliminary training. But they will not become vocal until they join the ranks of the World War I veteran organizations or build others of their own.

There is, however, another force which may change the picture — a change in the international set-up which will inject the element of fear into the people's attitude and since fear stirs the adrenalin flowing that usually means action.

Meanwhile, there are those who feel that complete preparedness not only is essential in the interim, even though a future world security organization is moving swiftly to fruition, but that it will also act as a stimulus toward such a goal.

The argument runs, briefly: We must prepare to enforce peace, or prepare to fight a war. Many members of congress realize this and would undoubtedly support the President's program if they felt they could do so without flying in the face of the majority opinion of their constituents. I do not intend to use this column as a platform upon which to debate the issue now but I would like to present a viewpoint expressed by a medical man which made considerable impression on the comparatively few Washingtonians who heard him address a recent meeting in the capitol. The speaker was Dr. G. B. Chisholm, one of the world's foremost psychiatrists, who served as chief medical officer of the Canadian army and is now deputy health minister of Canada.

'Maturity' Needed For Peace

His thesis is that "this is a sick world, with an old, chronic but evermore extensive and serious sickness. Its sickness has recently become acutely dangerous and the future is uncertain indeed."

It is a sickness which has made us "the kind of people" who fight major wars every 15 or 20 years. The cure is education. Just as individuals become neurotic because they are not mature, and thus are unable to cope with the situations they must meet, so the world has developed a behaviour pattern which produces something which nobody wants: war.

We must have enough people who can show tolerance, be patient, and above all have the ability to compromise. These are qualities of maturity, Dr. Chisholm points out, and people, mature in this sense, would not want to start wars and would prevent other people from starting them.

But the doctor realizes that education will not produce such maturity in one generation. But such a state must be realized or we face one of two alternatives. Either we must become a race of trained killers, or a race of slaves.

Until we can achieve education sufficient to avoid such horrible fates, "for so long as it may take to change the bringing up of children enough in this world, our close watch on each and everyone in the world should not be relaxed for a moment." The first step in eradicating war is an attainable stopgap, Dr. Chisholm believes. Security must be achieved and the valid fear of aggression eliminated. This means legislation backed by immediately available combined force prepared to suppress ruthlessly any appeal to force by any peoples of the world. The administration of such a force is a delicate problem but it can be devised if and when the great power really wants it.

The second step would be to provide the opportunity for all peoples to live on economic levels which do not vary too widely, either geographically or by groups within a population. This means a redistribution of material. This is possible since there are enough resources in the world to go around.

It is impossible in this space to do justice to Dr. Chisholm's views but the main points are these: he feels that man has developed one consistent pattern of behaviour which causes him to indulge in a major war at frequent intervals; that going to war represents immaturity; that immaturity can only be cured by education beginning at childhood with an accent on the "sciences of living"; that until we achieve maturity we must unite ruthlessly to suppress the effort on the part of any nation or anyone in any nation to start a war.

Psychiatrists may not solve the problem of world peace but it is safe to say that immature laymen won't either. Meanwhile, what congress must decide is how dry the country wants to keep our powder.

WELDER'S OVERALLS COME CLEAN QUICK

HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA. — Mrs. Claude Buchanan wrote a letter to Faultless Starch that should interest every woman who has overalls in her wash. Here is what she said:

"My husband is a welder and wears overalls. He gets them so dirty and greasy. They come clean quick and iron so much better when I use Faultless Starch."

Now there is a way to save a lot of hard work scrubbing and scouring dirt and grease out of overalls. Give them a light starch with Faultless Starch! They iron up beautifully. They wash clean in a jiffy — and they feel so smooth and comfortable to wear. Not rough and scratchy—no chafing!

SO EASY TO DO

It certainly is no hard job to give overalls that light starch-finish. Just use a very light starch solution. Dip in the overalls and run through the wringer. It's that easy! And once you try it and see how easy those dirty clothes wash clean you'll starch wash shirts, pants, children's play clothes—and everything that gets real dirty.

By giving these clothes light starch with Faultless Starch you do a lot to keep the dirt out. You see, Faultless Starch is made a special way to make it PENETRATE the fabric. It gets inside—and helps by keeping the dirt outside. When you wash, the starch dissolves instantly—and out comes the dirt!

So try it, this week. You'll be delighted with the hard scrubbing work it saves . . . and you'll like the way it saves the wear and tear on clothes, too. Be sure to ask your grocer for Faultless Starch!—Adv.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

DOAN'S PILLS

BEST HOGS WEIGH 150 TO 225 POUNDS

When home curing is practiced hogs should be butchered in the winter, and the period from December 1st to January 15 is probably the safest during ordinary seasons, in Alabama, according to W. H. Gregory, extension livestock specialist. Cold weather is essential for home curing of meat. Kill in the afternoon, so that the carcass may cool overnight.

"If a cold storage plant is available, butchering may be done at any season when a meat curing service is offered," he says. "Modern meat curing plants will provide meat curing facilities any time during the year that hogs are available. Health should be the first consideration in selecting hogs for butchering. A wholesome and desirable article of food cannot be produced from an animal that is diseased in any way.

"The highest type of carcass can be secured only from young hogs of the right type and conformation that have been properly fed. Smooth, even and deeply-fleshed hogs yield higher quality meat, and with the least waste

"Hogs weighing from 150 to 225 pounds will produce the best carcasses for home use and for the market. The hams, bacon and shoulders are of a better quality and cure more satisfactorily under our conditions than these secured from extremely heavy hogs."

2,975 COMMITTEEMEN TO BE ELECTED IN ALABAMA

The week of December 10 through December 15 will witness the election of 2,975 farmer-committeemen in Alabama to represent their neighbors in operating the AAA farm program locally.

W. B. Crawley, chairman of the State AAA committee, said today that elections will be held within the next 4 weeks in approximately 1,000 communities. Approximately 250,000 farmers in the State are eligible to vote.

Three committeemen—a chairman, a vice chairman, and a third member—will be chosen by secret ballot to represent farmers in each community. Two alternates also will be named, as well as a delegate to the county convention, where a three-member county committee will be elected. The county committee is responsible for administration of AAA programs within the county.

Reminding Alabama farmers of their vital interest in the AAA program, Crawley called for an all-out ballot.

"In these days of postwar problems, such as crop prices, marketing difficulties, and production adjustment," he said, "AAA committeemen will play an important part in helping farmers and the Government to find workable solutions. We hope every eligible farmer will cast his ballot, for only a representative vote can insure a representative expression of agriculture's will."

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Jeremiah said, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the Leopard his spots? Then may ye also do good that are accustomed to evil." Habit is the enthronement of a tyrant over the will. Henry Drummond once told of a man who consulted a London physician about his eyes. The physician examined the man's eyes with a delicate instrument and then spoke to the man, "Sir, you are practicing a certain sin, and if you do not give it up, in six months you will be blind." The man stood trembling for a moment as he faced the discoverer of his hidden sin, and then he stepped to the window and gazing out into a bright world he said, "Farewell, sweet light, farewell." Habit will fasten you soul and body, and you had better beware as to your habits.

My young friend, you are forming a crutch for by-and-by, when you fashion bad habits into your living. Sure, you can form habits of cheating on examinations, you can form habits of loose-living with those of your opposite sex, you can form the habit of slang in your speech, you can build into your character dishonest ideals in money matters, you can form the habit of drink, but hear me, these bad habits will be crutches on which you will limp and hobble in the years to come. Why is it that we have so many men and women now who are limping around on crutches in the business, social and religious world? The answer is found when we go back to that time when bad habits were fashioned by them. Crutches for by-and-by; yes, that is what bad habits are. Never forget that bad habits become tyrants that rule with an iron hand.

A man by the name of Patch was accused of murder. After a rlose examination of the crime made by the District Attorney, it was decided that the murder was committed by a left-manded man. Patch was brought in for trial, and at at the bar he was asked if he were guilty. "Not guilty," declared Mr. Patch. The District Attorney in his examination of the witness, asked if he were not left-handed, but Patch denied this. Then evidence was submitted showing that Patch handled his knife while eating with his left hand, and that when he took oath on the stand that he unconsciously held up his left hand. This was proof sufficient and Mr. Patch broke down and confessed. Your bad habits will betray you and when they speak you fail under conviction.

Terracing

Now is the time, for those who have established vegetated outlets for terraces, to make arrangements for terrace lines to be run. It is also time, for those who are planning to establish meadow strips next year, to stake out the outlets so that when time comes to prepare the land for seeding, no time will be lost.

Farm Plans

Farm plans were made last week on the farms of Mr. W. R. Pike of Enterprise Community and Walter Johnson of Training School Community. Mr. Pike has made plans for a complete farm program which includes a complete water disposal system, soil conserving and improving rotations for each field, critical slopes to be established in a permanent vegetative cover and be used for hay and grazing, and improving his permanent pasture by using plants best adapted to his soil.

New Conservation Aid

Mr. James M. Smith, a native of Chilton County and recently discharged from Uncle Sam's mighty Navy, has entered on duty here as a Conservation Aid. Mr. Smith will be stationed here for about two months for the purpose of assisting the cooperators in the Chilton County Work Unit in establishing soil conservation practices.

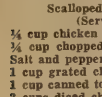
Let Leftovers Play a Starring Role
(See Recipes Below)

Glamorize Leftovers

There is no problem which so consistently faces the homemaker as that of leftovers. Even with rationing, there were always some bits of food that had to be utilized and made into palatable meals.

Leftovers seem particularly prominent after a big holiday dinner. It is then we must bring all ingenuity to bear and bring out well seasoned, attractive casseroles from the kitchen.

It is not essential to disguise a food so thoroughly that it will mystify the family. If chicken or turkey is cut up in a savory white sauce and flecked with bits of green peas and pimiento, then topped with a flaky biscuit crust, no one will object to its being a leftover from the roast bird itself.



So it is with other leftovers. Vegetables can be tossed together with tangy dressing and placed on crisp lettuce leaves. Mashed potatoes can be turned out into golden, crisply fried cakes, etc.

Why not try this the next time you have leftover turkey or chicken? It's a scalloped casserole dish well flavored with cheese and tomatoes:

Scalloped Spaghetti.
(Serves 8)

¼ cup chicken fat or shortening
¼ cup chopped onion
Salt and pepper
1 cup grated cheese
1 cup canned tomatoes
2 cups diced chicken or turkey
¼ cup flour
2 cups chicken stock
1 8-ounce package of spaghetti
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Melt fat, cook onions slowly for 10 minutes. Add flour and stir well. Add stock, stirring constantly until thickened. Mix in salt and pepper to taste. Add cheese and stir until melted. Next blend in chicken or turkey and tomatoes. Place chicken or turkey mixture and spaghetti, alternately in a greased casserole and cover with bread crumbs. Bake for 25 minutes in a moderate (375-degree) oven.

Potatoes leftover? Here's a delicious, mouth-watering way to take care of them:

Hashed Browned Potatoes.
(Serves 6)

3 cups diced, cooked potatoes
3 tablespoons shortening
Salt and pepper to taste
About ¼ cup milk

Use a medium sized skillet. Heat shortening, add diced potatoes, seasoning and sufficient milk to moisten. Cover and cook slowly, stirring only until milk is absorbed. Turn once and let other side brown slightly. Serve.

Meat pie is an excellent way of using up a cupful or two of that dried, leftover roast. Leftover carrots and potatoes go right into it for flavor and variety.

Meat Pie.
(Serves 6)

½ cup diced celery
½ cup diced onion
½ cup diced green pepper
2 cups cubed leftover roast
1 cup cubed leftover potatoes
1 cup peas (may be leftover)
1 cup gravy
4 slices dried bread, cubed

Brown celery, onions and green pepper in hot fat. Add combined meat, potatoes, carrots and peas. Add gravy and season to taste. Pour into a casserole and top with bread cubes browned in butter. Bake in a moderate (375-degree) oven for 30 minutes.

If desired, the bread slices may be omitted and the pie topped with biscuits or flaky piecrust. Cheese may be added to the biscuits for variety in flavor.

If bread crumbs become a problem, use them in a dessert with fruit as in Apple Brown Betty.

Apple Brown Betty.
(Serves 4 to 5)

1 cup buttered bread crumbs
3½ cups chopped apples or other fruit
½ cup honey
1 cup water

Mix all but ¼ cup buttered crumbs with apples and place in a deep, buttered dish. Bring the honey and water to a boil and boil 2 minutes. Pour over fruit and bread mixture. Sprinkle remaining crumbs over the top and bake 30 minutes in a moderate (370-degree) oven.

Sponge Cake Custard.
(Serves 8)

4 cups milk, scalded
3 cups dry sponge cake crumbs
3 slightly beaten eggs
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons melted butter
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Pour milk over crumbs and let stand until they are softened. Combine all remaining ingredients and add to crumb-milk mixture. Pour into greased custard cups or casserole and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for one hour. Serve with sliced bananas or jam.

If there's a bit of sour cream left, then use to advantage in the following recipe:

Veal Chops With Sour Cream Gravy.
(Serves 6)

6 veal chops
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon water
Salt, pepper
¾ cup cornflake crumbs
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup sour cream

Wipe the chops. Dip first in beaten egg to which one teaspoon salt and one tablespoon of water has been added. Then roll in cornflake crumbs. Saute slowly in a heavy frying pan until browned. Cover and cook slowly for 20 minutes, turning occasionally. Prepare gravy by blending flour with ¼ cup meat drippings from bottom of pan and adding the sour cream. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Serve with veal chops and sauteed mushrooms.

Palate-tempting Hints: If you want an icing that is sugar-easy, beat three egg whites until light and fold in slowly one cup of bright colored jelly. Yes, spread it on cake.

You've never heard of cottage cheese griddle cakes? Beat three whole eggs until fluffy, add one cup cottage cheese, salt and pepper, ¼ cup flour and two tablespoons melted fat. Bake on a griddle and serve with maple syrup or jelly and powdered sugar.

Next time you have chicken a la king, serve it on tiny toast points, garnished with green pepper rings, sauteed in oil.

A quick, delicious dessert is made of waffles to which chocolate has been added. Serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Leftover cereal should be molded and chilled, then sliced and fried until golden brown. Serve with syrup or jelly.

Use mushroom soup for creamed chicken or ham. Serve on warmed rusks for a tasty treat.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for December 2

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS ECONOMIC RELATIONS

LESSON TEXT: Deut. 8:17, 18; Luke 12:13-21.

GOLDEN TEXT: A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.—Luke 12:15.

Peace and the postwar period find America, and in fact the entire world, plunged into tremendous economic problems far too deep for any man or group of men to solve. We honor those who are laboring day and night to meet the threat of unemployment, the question of reconversion and readjustment to civilian production, of feeding a hungry world, etc. But we say again, they cannot find the answers in the wisdom of men; they must have the wisdom of God.

We need to turn anew to the economic principles taught in God's Word. If men will only recognize them, and deal with their fellowmen in the light of their teaching, the many knotty problems will surely find solution.

There is need, first of all, of a fundamental philosophy concerning possessions which will make man deal properly with them. The first section of our lesson says to us:

I. Think Right About Wealth (Deut. 8:17, 18).

How trenchant and altogether fitting are the words of Scripture! Nothing could describe our times more succinctly and accurately than verse 17. Men are gloryings in their ability to do things.

Man has even gone so far as to develop a weapon of warfare, the atomic bomb, so powerful that he fears it might be used to wipe out all civilization. Even secular leaders are now saying that we must have a spiritual rebirth if we are to use such things for good and not for evil. Man needs God now more than ever.

We honor those who by skillful hand and brilliant brain produce excellent and thrilling results. But our question is, How many are there who say, God has done this thing; He gave the strength and the skill; His is the honor? Some there are who thus recognize Him, but they are few indeed. Their name is legion who say in their heart, "My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth" (v. 17).

Joseph Parker points out that a deep conviction of the fact stated in verse 18 "would turn human history into a sacrament." He says, "What a blow this text strikes at one of the most popular and mischievous fallacies in common life; namely, that man is the maker of his own money!"

II. Act Right About Wealth (Luke 12:13-21).

Most of us think of money as something we want to get hold of and use for ourselves, but if it belongs to God, and we are only his stewards, we must put away that impulse. "Take heed," said Jesus, "and beware of covetousness" (v. 15). It is a deadly and deadening sin, all too common even among Christian people.

The teaching of this whole passage of Scripture is so directly opposite to all ideas regarding such matters accepted by the world at large, that it may be a total surprise to some readers and attendants at Bible school.

The yardstick of success in the world for an individual, an organization, or a nation, yes, even for many a church, is the possession of wealth, or property, or other "things." Write it in large letters on the hearts and minds of our boys and girls, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15).

The one who was known to his friends (and to himself) as "a rich man" (v. 16), but whom God knew as a "fool" (v. 20), had more than he could use for himself. He had to build new and bigger barns, and could not see the "barns" that were already prepared, for, as Ambrose says, "Thou hast barns — the bosoms of the needy, the houses of widows, the mouths of orphans and infants."

He was a fool who loved money for itself and for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20). If you are similarly situated and have the same attitude, what will you say in that day?

There is an important point which we must note. Jesus expressly repudiated the connecting of His name with the so-called "social gospel" in His reply (v. 14) to the question of the covetous fellow who regarded his inheritance as of more importance than brotherly love.

Those who are ignoring the gospel of redemption and claiming Jesus as a social reformer, or the "judge and divider" of some new economic solution for the world's ills, need to read and ponder this verse.

Every Christian is interested deeply in social problems, but knows that the first concern of Christ and His followers is the souls of men.

Wealthy Fugitive Is Arrested as a Postoffice Thief

Prosperous Business Man, Respected for Years, Is Unmasked as Robber.

MAGNOLIA, DEL.—A prosperous business man respected here for 15 years was unmasked as a fugitive sought for a quarter of a century for an Illinois post office embezzlement, says the Chicago Tribune.

The man is James L. Parks, 67, known here as James L. Harris. He once was a teacher in the junior high school of Chicago's suburban Cicero and previously had been postmaster at Carbondale, Ill.

Until his sudden arrest on the old charge, Parks' whereabouts were last known to authorities in 1925 when he leaped through a window of the Dixie Flyer train as a Chicago policeman was returning him from Miami, Fla., to answer a fraud charge.

Appeared in Movies.

People here knew him only as a prosperous poultry raiser, prominent in community affairs, and a prize winning pie baker. He said he had used the name of Harris since adopting it some years ago when he was a movie actor in New York and appeared in the film, "A Kiss for Cinderella."

When federal and state policemen arrested him here, Parks was said to have had in his possession nearly $50,000 in cash and securities.

He promptly posted bail of $10,000 with 10 bills of $1,000 denomination when he was taken to Wilmington, and arraigned before United States Commissioner A. F. Polk. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of embezzling and waived hearing.

Parks is charged with embezzling $3,336 in World War I savings stamps while postmaster at Carbondale from 1912 to 1918. The loss was discovered after he left office and an indictment against him was returned at East St. Louis, Ill.

Admits His Identity.

Upon his arrest Parks readily admitted his earlier identity and insisted the charge was a result of errors.

At East St. Louis, however, United States Attorney William Hart disputed Parks' claim of errors by clerks and said the arrest followed a complete FBI investigation. The prosecutor said the statute of limitations had not run on the charge inasmuch as Parks had been a fugitive since the indictment.

A fraud charge was placed against Parks in 1924 after he allegedly defrauded Miss May C. Llewellyn, a Chicago school teacher, of her life savings of about $2,000 when they became engaged to marry. He was then married and the father of three children.

'Wing and Prayer' Flier Home on Sad Mission

SAVANNAH, GA. — An army flier, whose exploit in piloting a crippled bomber back to its base in England inspired the song "Coming In On a Wing and a Prayer," was home recently on his saddest mission—to bury his 19-year-old brother.

Capt. Kendrick "Sonny" Bragg was in New York when told of the death of his brother Waring in an automobile accident near Augusta, Ga.

When he boarded a plane for Savannah he met another brother, Lt. Vernon Bragg of the navy, also on his way home on the same mission. Neither knew the other was to be aboard.

It was while he was a member of a Duke university Rose Bowl team that Captain Bragg met the song writer, Jimmy McHugh. From the European theater later, McHugh recalled in Los Angeles Bragg wrote him about "coming in on one engine with the crew praying—so I got an idea for a song."

Captain Bragg, discharged from the army recently, plans to enter Princeton to complete his college studies.

Finger Wave Sisters Are Working on Farm, Too

BROOKHAVEN, MASS. — Four sisters operate a 225-acre farm and a beauty shop in Brookhaven successfully and unassisted, it was reported by County Agent J. H. Price.

They are the May sisters—Myrie, Kathleen, Alice and Edith. The girls began operation of the farm four years ago when their father could no longer work.

In sight is the gradual building of a herd of 40 head of breeding cows.

Emphasis also is placed on using farm machinery as much as possible. The girls do all their own work both at the farm and beauty shop.

The girls say that farming is hard work, but that they love it. They said they hoped "some day to get out of the beauty business."

Fugitive Is Found Dead In a Fumigated House

SPOKANE, WASH. — One of five soldier prisoners who had escaped from Baxter general hospital was found dead in a house where he had taken refuge. The house had been fumigated with cyanide gas, and although warnings had been posted on the doors the prisoner may have overlooked them since he entered by breaking a window. The dead man was identified as Pvt. Robert Geese.

Mix This Cough Syrup at Home. Quick Relief

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Here's an old home mixture your parents probably used. But, once tried, you'll always use it, because it gives such quick, pleasing relief for coughs due to colds.

And it's so easily mixed. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a long time.

You can feel this simple home mixture take right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes irritation, and helps clear the air passages. Eases the soreness, makes breathing easier, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

FIVE-TUBE RADIO transmitter and receiver, in the fuse of the shell, is the brain of the secret weapon. In flight, the transmitter broadcasts a continuous radio wave. Reflected back from the target, this wave explodes the shell at exactly the right moment!

THE SHELL WITH A "RADIO BRAIN"

NOT EVEN the Atomic Bomb was more "hush-hush" than the "Variable Time Radio Proximity Fuse"—a fuse mechanism that decides for itself when to explode; requires no advance setting.

Transmitter, receiver, and detonating mechanism all draw power from a tiny "Eveready" "Mini-Max" battery: a "powerhouse" rugged enough to withstand the shock of the gun's discharge: a force 20,000 times that of gravity!

TYPICAL of "Eveready" "Mini-Max" power in peacetime are these two tiny, powerful batteries! On the extreme left is a 22½-volt battery for "cigarette case" radios small enough to wear! At its right is a 15-volt hearing-aid battery—for lighter, smaller, more economical hearing aids

The registered trade-marks "Eveready" and "Mini-Max" distinguish products of National Carbon Company, Inc.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE

Of hearing of petition of Central Alabama Electric Cooperative for consent to the issuance and delivery of its Bond in the principal amount of $456,000 to the United States of America for the purpose of financing the construction and operation of additional electric distribution and service lines or systems in the counties of Autauga, Bibb, Chilton, Coosa, Dallas, Elmore, Lowndes, Talladega and Tallapoosa, in the State of Alabama.

To All Persons Concerned:

Notice is hereby given that a hearing will be held before the Department of Finance of the State of Alabama at its office in the Capitol Building in the City of Montgomery, Alabama, at 11:00 a.m. o'clock, on December 6, 1945, to determine whether consent should be given to the Central Alabama Electric Cooperative to issue and deliver its bond in the principal amount of $456,000.00, bearing interest at the rate of two per centum per annum, which bond shall be issued under and pursuant to and be secured by a deed of trust made by and between the Petitioner and The Alabama National Bank of Montgomery, as Trustee, as said deed of trust has been amended and supplemented by supplemental indentures made by and between the Petitioner, under its present corporate name, and the Trustee.

The Government, acting through the Administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, has heretofore allotted to your Petitioner an additional sum of $456,000 for the purpose of financing the construction and operation of additional electric transmission, distribution and service lines or systems in the Counties of Autauga, Bibb, Chilton, Coosa, Dallas, Elmore Lowndes, Talladega and Tallapoosa, in the State of Alabama, and in Counties contiguous thereto and for the purpose of constructing a building for additional office space and a warehouse.

Any person having any interest in the matter may attend the hearing and be heard on the question as to whether the issuance of said bond for the purposes above stated serves a public need and is in the public interest.

KEEP BUYING VICTORY BONDS

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUMN XXIII | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1945 | NUMBER 49

Victory Bond Quota Reached -- Drawing Saturday Dec. 8

CAMPAIGN RAPIDLY CLOSING ALL ROADS LEAD TO CLANTON NEXT SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Drawing Of Prizes To Be Held Saturday Afternoon At 3 O'clock

YOU HAVE DONE IT AGAIN! Chilton County is near enough to the top of our quota that the drawing is hereby announcing that the drawing will be held Saturday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. BE IN CLANTON.

Buy Bonds! Until that time the bond booths will be open and we should continue buying VICTORY BONDS. WHY?

Because they are still the BEST INVESTMENT.

Because there is still idle money in the banks.

Because the many hospitals are still in operation and still need money.

Because you still get back $4.00 for every $3.00 you invest.

Because our Armies of Occupation are still in Germany, Japan and many other places all over the world.

Because the Chilton County boys must still receive their mustering out pay.

Because Bonds have helped to bring VICTORY and will help keep the PEACE.

AND BECAUSE . . . .

The many boys who died and the many who were wounded shall not have given that which they have given in vain.

LET US KEEP THEIR FAITH!

SANTA CLAUS VISITED GOODYEAR SERVICE STORE EARLY

Have you been to see what Santa Claus brought Goodyear Service Store for their Christmas present? We will admit that he brought it a bit early but it was for your benefit that he brought it. It is a nice new remodelling and redecorating job. Indirect lighting plays a big part in the effect but Mrs. Tom Johnston, Manager of the store is going to have a mighty beautiful store to work in when she completes her straightening up.

Mrs. Johnston stated this week that she expects one more shipment of Christmas toys and decorations before the holidays and when you are in town doing your Xmas. shopping be sure to pay Goodyear Service Store a visit. Even if you don't find exactly what you are looking for the visit will be well worth your while and the management will be glad to serve you.—M.E.

Central Alabama Kiwanis Convene At Montgomery

Roy Roper President-Elect and Henry Adair Vice-President-Elect To Attend Conference

Kiwanians from Central Alabama will convene in Montgomery next Sunday, December 9th, for the Kiwanis Third Division Organization Conference. The sessions, beginning at 9:30 a.m., will be held at the Jefferson Davis Hotel.

In addition to Montgomery, Kiwanians will be present from Auburn, Clanton, Dadeville, East Tallassee, Opelika and Selma.

Earl P. Andrews, immediate past president of the Montgomery Club and lieutenant governor-elect of the Kiwanis Third Division, will preside.

Distinguished guests who will take part on the program: Kenneth Thomas, of Huntsville, governor-elect of the Alabama Kiwanis district; Dr. E. V. Smith, of Auburn, retiring lieutenant governor; Earl Wilson, of Selma, past lieutenant governor; Bill Popejoy of Huntsville, secretary-elect; Fletcher N. Farrington, of Dadeville and Frank E. Boyd, of Montgomery, both past governors.

The meeting is to assist newly elected officers of clubs in the third division to plan their programs and work objectives for the coming year.

The guest speakers will form a staff to give lectures on duties of the Club officers.

Club presidents-elect in the third division are: R. K. Evans, Auburn; Roy M. Roper, Clanton; Dr. Joe T. Banks, Dadeville; Monroe Davidson East Tallassee; Joe G. Matthews, Montgomery; T. K. Davis, Jr., Opelika; Clyde Cox, Selma.

Club vice presidents elect are: T. A. Sims and Roland Shine, Auburn; Henry M. Adair, Clanton; Dr. H. C. Funderburk and L. Oliver Sanford Dadeville; Morris Segrest and T. Holmes Floyd, East Tallassee; Hoke L. Vandigriff, Montgomery; Phil S. Hudson and J. Z. Fuller, Opelika; Robert Woodfin and Cecil Morgan, Selma.

Club secretaries-elect are: Ben Hagler, Auburn; Lewis McGee, Clanton; Travis O. Burgess, Dadeville; A. M. Daughtry, East Tallassee; Roy R. Cox, Montgomery; F. P. Jackson, Opelika, and Frank Ford, Selma.

250 New Greyhound Buses To Be Delivered

The first of the year will see partial delivery of 250 new Greyhound buses, according to word received here today by Guy A. Huguelet, president of Southeastern Greyhound Lines, from the American Car and Foundry Co.'s Philadelphia plant. The ACF plant is now completing Greyhound's new streamlined buses, pictured above which were ordered several years ago but delivery of which was held up due to the manufacture of heavy tanks and other armored equipment. All the new buses will be delivered in 1946, the first ones being expected some time in January.

The new buses feature advanced engineering design in the power unit and body construction developed from war experiences. New spring construction provides easier riding and there is more "leg room." Newly designed air conditioning units, more compact yet providing greater efficiency, and special luggage compartments are among the many new features of Greyhound's new buses.

Reunion Of The Goodgame Family

Mrs. Ethert Barrett (nee Blanche Goodgame) and Mrs. Katie Harold of Los Angeles were the house guests of the Burns Goodgames and were honored by a number of dinner parties during the Thanksgiving holidays. Mrs. Barrett and her father, S. J. Goodgame of Marked Tree, Ark., arrived in time for the holiday gathering of the Goodgame family at the Hugh Thompsons. About 35 relatives attended the reunion honoring Grandmother Goodgame, who is in her 88th year and their kins people who have been away from Chilton County for 30 years.

CAPT. TOM TIFFIN AND FAMILY ARE HERE

Capt. and Mrs. Thomas E. Tiffin are here this week visiting with home folks. Capt. Tiffin is on furlough, having arrived in the states last week from the European Area. He has spent the past 18 months overseas, during which time he was injured in the chest.

He is possessor of the Purple Heart, the Combat Infantryman's Badge three battle stars and other medals of honor.

When his furlough is up, Capt. Tiffin will report to the Seperation Center at Fort Knox in Louisville, Ky.

Flat omelets, fluffy omelets—whichever you like, the ingredients are the same. One or two eggs for each person, 1 tablespoon of milk for each egg, and salt and pepper to taste. To make omelets fluffy, beat the egg yolks and whites separately. For a flat omelet, beat all ingredients together.

Pastors To Hold Conference

We have a treat awaiting the Pastors' Conference next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the First Baptist Church, Clanton. The Rev. J. W Lester, Pastor at Rockford, will be present to bring the message, following the devotional by Rev. J. D. Hopper and a few minutes general discussion.

Many will recall hearing the Rev. Lester at the associations and will be anxious to attend the pastors' meeting in order to hear him again.

The meeting has been changed from 3 o'clock to 2 o'clock. Please bear the change in mind and make every reasonable exertion to come to the meeting next Saturday afternoon.—M. Lockhart, Sec'y.

NOTICE TO ALL VETERANS

All Veterans or their dependents of Chilton County advised that the office of the County Service Commissioner is moved from the office over the Grill to the new location over Upchurch Drug Store. The office is in the new location having moved Tuesday of this week. All Veterans are requested to come to the new office for any assistance from the Service Commissioner.

The name "strawberry" does not come, as many believe, from the common use of straw in mulching the plant. Nevertheless, there is association between straw and strawberries Over a large part of the growing area the berries need straw mulch for protection from cold. A spring mulch is often used in the South to keep berries clean.

"STEWART WANTS A BOAT"

A note from T-Sgt. Stewart Armstrong, who is in Okinawa waiting with (quote) "11,500 other boys to get a ship home," asks us to give him a little space on the front page. That, we will do, Stewart, and we sincerely hope you will be home by Christmas. Wish we could do something to help the "transportation situation" and get all, you boys home.

When the tip comes off a shoelace, dip it in glue, twist between forefinger and thumbb and let dry over night; the end will be firm but pliable.

Kathleen Norris Says:

The Problem of Sally Kent

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"Pack a suitcase with comfortable clothes and a box with provisions, and put them in the old car. Then say to him, 'get in, we're going places,' and head west."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"MY HUSBAND has come home so changed, after two years in active service as a marine," writes Sally Kent, "that I find myself for the first time in my life with a problem that is too difficult for me to solve. I wonder if other women are facing like troubles, now that the war is over, and if you have helped them and can help me.

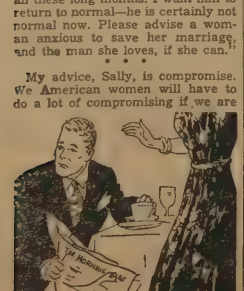
"I am 31," the letter goes on. "David is two years older. He was drafted in 1942, and left me with a baby girl of three and another baby coming. We were both anxious that he should do his share as a soldier, and I tried to do mine at home. We moved to my mother's house, and there my son was born just two years ago. Mother keeps boarders; I had helped her all through my girlhood and took my old place now; planning meals, marketing, making beds, and superintending the changing personnel in the kitchen.

"Mother has always prospered, and in crowded war times she prospered exceedingly. My weekly budget to David — a few lines anyway every day, and often pages — were always cheerful, and snapshots of Di and Jimmy kept him in touch with their progress. This was for me—as for many wives—a lonely time, a time with anxious moments, but a time of much deep happiness, too. Mother's life has never been easy—she found this interval refreshing and delightful, and the children were of course wonderful.

Dislikes Boarding-house.

"David came home willing to accept all this, but within a few days I knew something was wrong, and now everything is wrong. He doesn't like living in a boarding-house, he thinks Diana is badly spoiled and he seems completely indifferent to the baby. Of course, the children did not know him, and when a dark, thin, nervous daddy was added to their little scheme, they didn't like it.

"I try to make allowances for the war-worn nerves of a man who has known nothing of home life for more than two years; I try to keep things serene and cheerful, and of course it is understood that as soon as he resumes work and is able to support it, we will have our own home again.



"But this is not enough. He wants me to leave the children and go away with him. Where doesn't seem to matter. He wants to go West, to buy a farm, to pioneer in the Canadian north, to do anything except settle down here, realize how lucky he is to have a comfortable home, no immediate financial pressure, and a devoted wife.

"Obviously, this is just what I can't do. I'd like a change myself, I'm not in love with bedmaking and dusting. But you can't pioneer with two small children as companions, and financially any such change would be a desperate chance.

"We love each other; there isn't any triangle complication; when we take long walks together, as we do in the evenings, there isn't any quarrelling or unpleasantness. But it all comes out to this; David wants me to throw away the security I have built up so painfully and slowly in all these long months. I want him to return to normal—he is certainly not normal now. Please advise a woman anxious to save her marriage, and the man she loves, if she can."

My advice, Sally, is compromise. We American women will have to do a lot of compromising if we are to help our returning servicemen to re-adjust themselves to conditions that seem strangely smug, safe, self-satisfied to them, after the horrors and loneliness and abnormality of war.

He doesn't like boarding-houses.

Head West in Car.

Get someone to look after your babies, no matter what you have to pay her. Pack a suitcase with comfortable clothes and a box with provisions, and put them in the old car. Then say to him, "get in, we are going places," and head west.

Years ago a nervous husband I knew got this treatment—my own husband, in fact—and before we had gone a hundred miles he was beginning the cure, quiet, amused, expectant, happy. We drove 6,000 miles, the most inexpensive travelling there is, except on foot. The most thrilling, for you may stop anywhere, eat when you like, try anything.

You'll find your old companion beside you sooner than you dream is possible. You find him rested, soothed and presently eager and alert again. You'll talk plans, explain away difficulties, share problems. You'll agree that Diana is a little spoiled; that there is no place for a young couple like their own home; you'll say the baby is exactly like his dad.

Give him a six-weeks break. Give yourself the same. November is beautiful travelling weather, and a marriage like yours is worth saving.

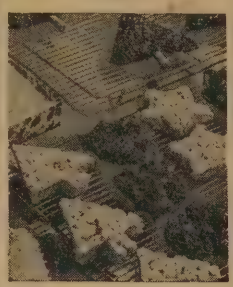
UNSETTLED

That strange and frightening change that comes over men after they have been in military service for two or three years is a great trial to their wives. Women who have been waiting for weary and anxious months to end, suddenly find their dream of a happy future shattered. Here is her husband home at last, and for good. But he is so different! He is not the man who said goodby so sweetly and sadly on that awful day when he left for overseas.

No, he is not the same. He is moody and querulous, unable or unwilling to fit into civilian life. Nothing pleases him. He is indifferent to his loving wife's best efforts. Often he has some outlandish scheme, like moving to some distant part of the country and trying a completely new business.

The story in this issue concerns a returned soldier named David. He wants to leave their two children with someone, anyone just so they are cared for, while he and Sally go West, to look for a farm. He also thinks about pioneering in the Canadian northwest. Farming is completely new to him, but he wants to do almost anything except to settle back to his old job in the old town.

Medical Care in Rural Areas Inadequate, Survey Reveals



In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Rowntree, chief of the medical division of the selective service system, writes: "Surveys of the health situation among the rural families in some of the states indicate that a large proportion of farmers have poor health, that the facilities for health services are below normal requirements and that there is a pitiful inadequacy of the care provided regularly for the lower income families.

An analysis of some of the surveys indicates that between one-third and one-half of the lower income groups have no medical or dental care whatsoever. Of the 18,000 cases of serious illness reported by farm families in Texas and Oklahoma, less than one-half had a doctor's care. Only one out of three births was attended by a physician."

Because of the inadequacy in most rural counties of the public health services and hospitals, the death rate at almost any age level is greater in rural areas than in urban centers.

Bake Cookies Now To Have Them Ready For Holiday Time

Bake holiday cookies before Christmas and store them in wax paper lined tins to keep them fresh and moist. A raw, unpeeled apple will prevent them from drying out.

Sugar-Shy Cookies

Good cookies are always in season, but particularly so at Christmas time. This year, of course, we are still working under difficulties because sugar is not easy to obtain. But that needn't put a crimp in the Yuletide cookie jar.

Corn syrups, honey and unrationed chocolate are all on hand to help with the Christmas baking. You will find the recipes for these substitutes so good that they're here to stay even when we have plenty of sugar.

Cookies made for Christmas are usually prepared ahead of time to save work as the big celebration approaches. It's a smart idea to take precautions with them to keep them fresh and moist. First of all, use nuts and dried fruits whenever possible as these ingredients add moisture. Second, pack them in waxed paper lined tins with a raw apple. Then they won't dry out.

Incidentally, when using honey or corn syrup in cookies, grease the baking pans thoroughly to prevent sticking. Melted fat brushed on the tins usually solves the problem neatly.

Here are two types of cookies, neither of which requires any sugar at all. One uses corn syrup for sweetening and the other, honey:

Fudge Nut Squares.
(Makes 16 2-inch squares)

1 cup chocolate pieces
2 tablespoons shortening
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup corn syrup
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cake flour, sifted
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup nuts, chopped

Melt chocolate and shortening over hot water. Beat eggs thoroughly, add corn syrup and vanilla and beat until light and fluffy. Stir in melted chocolate and shortening, which have been slightly cooled. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add to chocolate mixture. Stir in nuts. Pour into a greased, 8-inch square pan. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

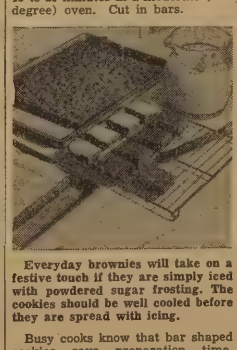
Honey Drops.
(Makes 4 dozen cookies)

½ cup shortening
½ cup honey
1 egg, unbeaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup nuts, chopped
1 cup chocolate pieces

Cream shortening and honey together. Add unbeaten egg and vanilla and beat until light and fluffy. Mix and sift flour, soda and salt. Add to the first mixture. Stir in nuts and chocolate pieces. Drop from teaspoon on a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven 10 to 12 minutes.

Using only a small amount of sweetening, cookies in the following two recipes take on extra sweetness because of the molasses that is used in them. Both contain dried fruits to make them moist:

Prune Cookies.
(Makes 5 dozen cookies)



½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
¼ cup molasses
2 eggs
1¼ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup cooked prunes, pitted and cut in small pieces
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar, add molasses and eggs, one at a time. Sift flour with baking soda, salt and cinnamon. Add to creamed mixture. Beat thoroughly. Add prunes and vanilla. Mix well. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Bake in a pre-heated (375-degree) oven for 12 minutes.

Molasses Raisin-Nut Bars.

¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup molasses
2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup sweet milk
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup chopped raisins or dates

Cream shortening, add sugar and beat until light. Add egg, beat well, then add molasses. Sift flour with dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add chopped nuts and fruit. Spread thinly in a greased shallow pan. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Cut in bars.

Everyday brownies will take on a festive touch if they are simply iced with powdered sugar frosting. The cookies should be well cooled before they are spread with icing.

Busy cooks know that bar shaped cookies save preparation time. These molasses flavored fruit bars are just the thing for holiday time.

Molasses Fruit Bars.
(Makes about 3 dozen bars)

½ cup sugar
¼ cup shortening
1 egg
½ cup molasses
1½ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1½ cups whole wheat flakes
½ cup milk
1 cup chopped seedless raisins

Beat together sugar and shortening. Add egg and blend well. Sift flour with salt, soda and baking powder. Crush whole wheat flakes into fine crumbs and mix with flour. Add to egg mixture alternately with milk. Fold in raisins. Spread batter ½ inch thick in a greased baking pan. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

Pear Schooner Dessert.
(Serves 6)

6 pear halves
6 cupcakes
Raspberry preserves
Whipped cream

Cut each pear half in half. Split cupcakes and lay a piece of pear on each half in dessert dish. Pour a spoonful raspberry preserves in center of pears and top with a spoonful of whipped cream just before serving.

Taste Tips: When all the meat has been sliced off the roast, whittle off the pieces from the bones, grind them and mix them with mayonnaise or salad dressing for sandwiches.

The bone from a roast may be simmered with onion, celery, carrots, bay leaf and parsley. This stock is excellent for casseroles, sauces, or as a gravy base.

To prevent the broiler from becoming dry, fit it with a wire rack, and then the fat will drip into the pan. It is easy to pour off, and the broiler pan is easily washed.

When serving veal, complement the flavor with sausage, spiced fruits or pickles.

Never press meat loaf or hamburgers into tight loaves or patties. When loosely shaped, the meat will be more tender.

Frankfurters will have extra appeal if wrapped in biscuit dough, baked and served with mustard white sauce.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Local Service Centers

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, administrator of veterans' affairs, in a recent statement declared that the most pressing need, insofar as the civilian population and the veteran is concerned, is the establishment of a single service center in every community so that benefits to the veterans can "get down to the grass roots of the home community."

Many communities already have set up these centers where the returning veteran may go for information, for service, for advice, but there are thousands of home communities where no such benefit is available to the veteran.

"We have the plans," General Bradley said, "but you can't help a veteran with a plan. We need the help of business, patriotic and civic organizations, of the press and radio, in solving a problem of space and personnel which is slowing up our job."

In the meantime, the veterans administration has inaugurated a six-point program for amputee rehabilitation to include: (1) direct veteran contact to learn problems, invite criticism and provide corrective measures; (2) a survey to determine availability of prosthetic appliances; (3) to provide each veteran a booklet with essential information; (4) a program of scientific aftercare designed to meet the need of the veteran; (5) a conference with artificial limb manufacturers to establish fixed limb standards; (6) to establish a museum of prosthetic appliances.

Questions and Answers

Q. I want to know if a man who has been in the army over six months, is 30 years old and has a wife and four children, will be sent overseas or will he get a discharge soon?—Wife, Strasburg, N. D.

A. According to regulations at this time your husband is eligible for overseas service. According to the information you give, he has only approximately 42 points.

Q. I want to know if my husband can get a discharge. He has been in service 21 months and overseas 14 months and has four children and is needed at home since his mother is his dependent, too, and very feeble. He is in the army and is 29 years old.—L. B., Pisgah, Ala.

A. Without any points for battle stars or decorations, your husband has 71 points so he would be eligible for discharge.

Q. My husband served nine months in World War I, five of these overseas. While in service, one of his ear drums was affected from roar of guns and he can hear but very little. During this time his service record was lost and now he cannot get help because he doesn't have a record of his ear. Does he have to be handicapped because the army lost his record? He can do very little work.—Wife, Deatsville, Ala.

A. Your husband's service record should be in the war department in Washington. Would suggest that you immediately file a claim for pension, due to disability, with the Veterans administration at Birmingham. Write to the bureau of enlisted personnel, war department, Washington, D. C., concerning his service record, giving all details possible.

Q. I was called for the army September 1, 1918, and went to Fort Riley, Kans., and got my discharge at Fort Riley September 14, 1918. I got the $60 bonus and the whole outfit of uniforms. Did guard duty and my serial number was 3474300. I asked for the soldier tax exemption in Iowa and they turned me down. —E. J. H., Webster City, Iowa.

A. You were apparently in the army only 10 days, but the internal revenue bureau says there is no federal tax exemption for veterans except on disability payments and the $1,500 exemption on active service pay. There may be an Iowa state law providing for some form of tax exemption for veterans. Suggest you apply to your state or local tax authorities.

Q. My husband, who is in the navy, has three children and is 26 years old. Under this new system of discharging the three children, will he be eligible for discharge?—Wife, Vanderbilt, Mich.

A. The navy department says "yes."

Q. How long will boys 18 or 19 years of age, who entered service in the spring of 1945 and are now on their way overseas, remain in the service?—N. G., Lancaster, Wis.

A. Under present regulations, until they have the required number of points to make them eligible for discharge.

Q. I want to know if a man who has been in the navy 21 months, is 34 years old and has a wife and three children will be discharged?—Wife, Owens Cross Roads, Ala.

A. Yes, he is eligible for application for discharge.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Special sponge rubber tablecloths, developed by B. F. Goodrich, attached to tables in factory assembly lines enable assemblers to pick up small metal parts without fumbling.

Officials predict that tire production may jump to nearly 4,000,000 passenger car tires a month during the last quarter of 1945.

Spare tires should never remain idle until other tires are worn out. Rubber needs to be "exercised" to keep it in best condition.

The new B. F. Goodrich all-synthetic Silvertown passenger car tire actually outwears prewar natural rubber tires.

Lamps to Make As Christmas Gifts

IF YOU want to make a really impressive gift, a lamp all fitted with shade is sure to be appreciated. You can make it with the aid of a pattern that shows you exactly what materials to use and how to assemble them. The pattern for the two wooden block lamp bases shown here also gives directions for the shades. If you wish to decorate the child's lamp shade, a painting pattern is available for that.

The lamp at the left has a base about ten inches high made of five blocks put together with four slightly smaller thin blocks stained a darker tone. Very smart and worthy of any living room or study. The gay lamp of toy blocks is just the thing for the children's room. The directions show how to make such a lamp rigid and may be adapted for any height desired.

U. S. Has 101,000 Model Railroads in Operation

The 1,000 American men who own a model or miniature railroad with a steam locomotive consider themselves in a different class from the 100,000 who own an electric model, says Collier's. As such steam locomotives and their rolling stock cannot be bought, they are made by their owners on scales ranging from ¼ inch to one inch to the foot.

Therefore, owing to their size and power, steam systems, unlike electric models, are installed outdoors. For instance, a typical one-inch-to-foot locomotive weighs 200 pounds, requires a 4¾ inch track and is capable of pulling a one-ton load.

Tomorrow is Forever

WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Spratt Herlong, motion picture producer, met and married Elizabeth, whose first husband, Arthur Kittredge, was reported killed in World War I, but who later, unrecognized, went to work for Spratt under the name of Kessler. Dick, 17-year-old son of the Herlongs, enlisted in the Marines. He was convinced that he had a job that must be done. After they saw him off, Elizabeth, recognizing Kessler as Arthur, told him about it. He denied that he was her former husband and told her that unless she forgot it, he would go away. He forbade her to say anything to her husband. He called it an illusion and tried to convince her that she was wrong.

CHAPTER XXI

"That you will not trouble your husband with this. For it would trouble him, more than you can imagine in your present state. He'll be here in a few minutes. Your first impulse will be to blurt out words that tomorrow morning you'd give half your life to take back. Will you promise?"

She did not answer, and he added, "If you don't promise, I'll leave Beverly Hills tonight. I will not be the means of wrecking your peace or his."

"Yes," she said faintly, "I promise that. But you haven't convinced me. Everything you've said — I know you."

The maid came in, bringing orange juice and the morning paper. "Why didn't anybody wake me?" Elizabeth asked.

"Mr. Herlong said not to. He said you were tired."

Spratt had left her a note, scribbled in pencil across a sheet of studio stationery. "Elizabeth — Glad you're getting a long sleep. I told Cherry and Brian to go on to school without bothering you. I have to leave now, will ring you later if anything turns up, otherwise will see you tonight. All well. Chin up, the war news looks pretty good this morning, anyway nothing lasts forever. I love you, thought I'd remind you in case I hadn't mentioned it lately. Spratt."

She got up and went to her telephone. Apparently he had been waiting for her call, for he answered the phone himself. When she told him who she was he said, "Yes, Mrs. Herlong?" and waited expectantly.

"First," said Elizabeth, "I want to apologize for my startling behavior last night."

"Then you do know this morning," he asked eagerly, "that you were mistaken?"

"I don't know that, not yet. But at least this morning I can promise you to behave like an intelligent adult. You told me I could see you today. May I come over?"

"Certainly."

"Now?"

"Whenever you like."

"Thank you."

Kessler's housekeeper told her he was waiting for her in his study. Elizabeth went in and shut the door behind her. Kessler had been sitting before his typewriter, with sheets of manuscript around him. For an instant she wondered if he had been working, or if he had set the stage to make it look as if he found this so unimportant that he could go on with his work without interruption. But she thought of that only an instant. As she came in Kessler put his hand on his cane and stood up. Their eyes met, and Elizabeth said,

"I came here this morning to see if I was right or wrong in what I said to you last night. I was right."

Kessler drew in a quick breath, without answering. Elizabeth came nearer and sat down. Holding her handbag in her lap, she leaned back to look up at him.

She said, "I have not been drinking and I am not hysterical. I had nine hours' sleep, and when I woke up my impression of last night seemed like a mistake based on a chance resemblance. It was not a mistake." She smiled at him, pleadingly. "Arthur, let's face this and talk about it."

"I'll talk about it as long as you like," he answered her, and as he spoke he smiled too, as though sorry for her. "But it's not true, Mrs. Herlong."

But Elizabeth continued, "You have a scar on your arm where you were burnt by a splash of boiling chocolate one night when I was making fudge. You have another scar on your right knee, made when you and I were practicing fancy dives and you hit the edge of the pool."

Kessler sat down, and moved a pencil that was about to fall off the edge of his table. "I have so many scars," he said, "that no doubt you could find two that would fit those you are talking about." Then, supporting himself on his cane, he leaned toward her, and continued, "Mrs. Herlong, my body is such an accumulation of patches and makeshifts that to prove or disprove my likeness to any healthy man would be very difficult. I didn't grow this beard to disguise my face, but to cover some ugly lines on my chin that would make me even harder to look at than I am now. Yet you insist I resemble your first husband."

"You are talking in abstractions. I tell you, I know."

Kessler shook his head.

Elizabeth shrank back into her chair, away from him. "How can you do this to me!" she exclaimed. "Don't you remember how I loved you?"

For a moment she covered her face with her hands. She did not know how thankful he was for that moment, when she did not see the tightening of his eyes and lips that even his grim self-control could not prevent. She got out a handkerchief and began twisting it between her fingers, then carefully untwisted it and folded it again. Her pause to regain her own calmness had given him time to regain his, and when he spoke again his voice was steady.

"Now that Dick has gone to fight for tomorrow's world," he said to her, "it would be a catastrophe to see his mother refusing to give up her dependence on yesterday."

Elizabeth started. "What on earth do you mean?"

He spoke to her in a low, intensely purposeful voice. "Mrs. Herlong, not long ago your son sat where you are sitting, defining in his own mind the question before this generation. At length he understood—I like to think I helped him understand—that he was living in one of the periods when the advance of civilization seems to halt because of forces that are trying to push it back instead of letting it go ahead as it was meant to do. He came to see that his side was the right and ultimately victorious side, because those who fight to raise up the dead past eventually destroy themselves."

Elizabeth shook her head with a puzzled frown. "I understand that, but what has it got to do with me? With us?"

"It has a great deal to do with you and me. This battle between yesterday and tomorrow is only occasionally an international affair. But it's going on all the time in our own lives. Some of us refuse to let go of what used to be. We cling to it even when it is nothing but dust and dead leaves, instead of accepting the fact that we've got to go ahead in time whether we like it or not."

Elizabeth did not answer. But she was listening to him, for he spoke so earnestly that he made her listen.

"Sometimes it's so obvious that a child can see what they're doing—baldheaded grandfathers acting like fools over young girls, women in their fifties making themselves up into ridiculous caricatures of adolescence. Hasn't it ever occurred to you that they do this because they've still got adolescent minds? They've never developed to the point where they can enjoy adult pleasures in the company of adults, so they try to imitate and associate with the children whose equals they are. A ripe mentality is an achievement. It takes effort, and some people have never made the effort. So instead of growing up, they stay half-finished, and spend what ought to be their most abundant years paying their dancing partners and beauty operators to tell them how young they look. You've seen them, and laughed at them."

Elizabeth caught her breath in protest. "But you were just telling me I wasn't like that. I'm not—for heaven's sake, I'm not going to be a fat old woman who gets her face lifted and goes starry-eyed over a gigolo!" She laughed shortly at the idea. "But even if I were, what has this got to do with us now, today, with what I came here to tell you?"

"It has a great deal to do with it, Mrs. Herlong," Kessler insisted. "You're a charming woman, not because you're sixteen but because you aren't. Genuine maturity has a gracious poise that youth never has. The charm of youth is in its physical freshness, but the charm of maturity is a flowering of the spirit. Those others I was recalling to you, they have no youth and no maturity either. You have maturity, you know how fine it is—don't start to be like them. Don't reach back now!"

"I don't understand you!" she exclaimed. "I want to know whether or not you are Arthur Kittredge come back from that German hospital where they told me you had died. What are you trying to tell me?"

He answered her simply. "I am trying to tell you that if you want to believe I am Arthur Kittredge, you can persuade yourself that I am. You can make yourself see me as a living reminder of a period of your life that was very happy—that perhaps has grown happier in your recollection of it."

"I didn't come here," retorted Elizabeth, "to be advised whether or not I should believe in fantasy. I came to be told the truth."

"I am telling you the truth," he insisted. "The truth is that you can stop living in the present if you want to. You can reach back and demand that the past be returned to you. But it won't be returned to you. You won't get back what you have lost, you'll only be destroying what you have.

"For the past few months you have found the present very hard to take. You have been looking back into a time when you weren't aware of the demands life was going to make on you. In those days every minute was delightful for itself. You had what you wanted and you didn't know you were going to have to pay for it. You've personified that lovely thoughtlessness of youth in the figure of the man who shared it with you: You want it back—not Arthur, but the young freedom Arthur symbolized for you."

"Is that what I've been doing?"

"Yes," he said, "it is."

Elizabeth was silent. She felt as if she had been accused of a sin, and found just enough echo of guilt in herself to be unable to speak in her own defense.

"You can't get it back, Mrs. Herlong," Kessler said gently. "But if you keep trying, you will lose what you have. And you have so much to lose now, so much more than you had twenty-five years ago."

Elizabeth moved forward in her chair, listening intently. The curious sense of guilt had not left her.

"As for your first husband—" Kessler began.

"Yes—what about him?"

"How old were you when you married him?"

"Eighteen." After she had spoken she realized that her answer had come as readily as though she had never had any reason for believing he knew this already.

"Eighteen!" Kessler repeated. "What did you know then about loving a man?"

"I thought I knew a great deal," she retorted.

"Naturally you thought so. How could you judge your feeling for him except by the standard you had then? But look at it now and see what it was by the standard of love you have today. A bright girlish rapture it was beautiful, no doubt, but no more than that."

"But what else is a young girl's love? What else should it be?"

"Nothing else. That's what I'm trying to tell you. But what did you lose when you lost Arthur? A lover and a playmate. You had nothing else to lose."

Elizabeth drew back and stared at him, almost angrily, resenting what he said and fighting against having to accept it. He waited a moment to give her time to get used to it, and then went on.

"When we get older, and are drawn into the depths of experience, it is sometimes very tempting to look back and regret the time when we were skipping over the surface without dreaming how thin it was."

Elizabeth still did not answer. All this was new to her, as relating to herself. It was as though he were accusing her of having been foolish just when she thought she was being wise.

"When we do look back," said Kessler, "it means that just then we are frightened at the challenge of being adult."

"I have been frightened," she acknowledged, still astonished at all he was showing her. "You know that."

"What we forget in those moments, of course," he went on, "is that the profoundest joys, as well as the greatest trials, are found in the depths of experience. The happiness of youth is a shallow merriment, it can't be anything else. But the happiness of maturity, I mean real mental and emotional maturity, is strong and deeply rooted because it comes of having tested this and that until we have discovered the permanent values. Cherry is heartbroken if she goes to a party and isn't dressed like the others. Some women your age are too, because they're still judging life by Cherry's standards, but you aren't, because you long ago outgrew letting yourself be heartbroken over things that didn't matter. Mrs. Herlong," he exclaimed earnestly, "you have gone so far—don't turn back now!"

ACKNOWLEDGING A LETTER

Once a year the Chilton County Tuberculosis Association appeals to residents of this community to help finance its work through the purchase of Christmas Seals, its sole means of support.

Buying these Seals is a painless method of assisting a worthy cause. Most of us welcome the letter which arrives each year with sheets of the Seals and we are proud to use these Seals on our holiday mail.

But some of us are careless. We mean well—but we forget to acknowledge receipt of the Seals by sending a check in payment for them. Good intentions are not enough to keep the organized fight against tuberculosis going. If the association is to continue its work it must have funds. And if it is to have funds, then we must answer that letter which came last Thursday. Let's get out that letter today and answer it with a check.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

You have a dollar,
I have a dollar;
We swap.
Now you have my dollar,
And I have your dollar;
We are no better off.
You have an idea,
I have an idea:
We swap.
Now you have two ideas,
And I have two ideas;
Both are richer.
What you gave, you have;
What you got, I did not lose—
This is co-operation.

When we met Highway Patrolman Glenn at Sunday School the other morning he had a good laugh at our expense (and Gene Wyatt's, too). Seems we had been running a classified advertisement in the News for a couple of weeks about a lady's purse being lost and all the time the purse was in the office at The Union-Banner. Some boys found the purse shortly after the lady lost it over that way and carried it in there where it stayed until it was called for. Just like we been telling you—you gotta cooperate if you want to get things accomplished.

The new Methodist minister preached his first sermon at the Methodist Church to one of the largest congregations to attend services in a long time. Everyone who heard him was very much impressed and he is sure to get the full cooperation of the membership. He is the Rev. Carlisle Miller, just out of the U. S. Army, just married and just raring to go to work on we sinners hereabouts.

One of our friends tells us that bathing alone will not keep one healthy, but we intend to keep on bathing alone.

There is only one thing that is better than the second helping of turnip greens and that is the first helping. We say helping for if we called "holpen" which it properly is, few would know what we were talking about. We wouldn't even recognize it ourself. That isn't, however, what we started to say. We were going to mention that our good colored friend, Prof. Whittington from the Chilton County Training School brought us a much appreciated "mess" of the lucious vegetable the other day and we enjoyed them immensely. We understand they are better with fresh pork. And you are right, that is definitely a hint.

But not one out of a hundred in the county knew that we had a weather-man. His predictions may not always be exactly right but we guess his average is about the same as the high salaried weatherman in the big cities. Ours is John Studdard. John ran in the front door the other day when it was raining a cold shower and gave out with, "You want some news? Well, its gonna' snow cause the wind is blowing from Birmingham." Now if you can think of a better reason for it to snow in Chilton County, you can be the weatherman.

Some things are hard to get and some things are hard to keep, but nothing is any harder to keep than an umbrella caught in a strong wind. This fact was strongly brought to mind Tuesday morning when we witnessed the last remains of a great struggle lying on the sidewalk in front of the post office. We know not who the other contestant in the struggle was, but the umbrella lay turned wrong side out—a total wreck. The winner, the wind, blew merrily along in search of another victim.

MOUNT PLEASANT P.-T. A. WILL MEET

The Mt. Pleasant P.-T. A. will meet next Tuesday night, December 11th at 7:00 o'clock. We will have a short program and business session.

We had a splendid crowd at our last meeting and we appreciate Mr. Culp bringing the pictures and showing them. We urge all parents to attend and the fathers are especially invited.

DIPHTHERIA DECREASES

The 126 diphtheria cases reported in Alabama during the month of October included two occurring in Chilton County, the State Department of Health revealed today in making public the monthly morbidity report prepared by its Bureau of Preventable Diseases.

The October total for the State as a whole represented an increase of four over the total for the previous month but a decline of 37 from the total for October, 1944.

JACKSON CHAPEL

Rev. Ernest Jones will preach at Jackson Chapel Sunday, December 9th, at 1:00 p.m. After preaching service the committee will offer plans for organizing a roundtable discussion and other activities of the organization.

The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.—Grover Jones.

ARCHIES CHAPEL

All who will help to clean up the cemetery are requested to meet early Friday morning, December 14th.

Plans are being made for a Christmas service Saturday night, December 22nd. Every one in the community is invited to take part in the program.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

Census report shows that 8,647 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1945 prior to November 14 as compared with 11,833 bales for the crop of 1944.

Governor Sparks Makes Changes In Offices

Montgomery, Ala. — Consolidation of liquor law enforcement activities, hitherto under the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, with the Highway Patrol, in an expanded Department of Public Safety, has been affected by Governor Sparks, by executive order. Van Buren Gilbert remains director of the enlarged Department of Public safety. Clyde Sellers was appointed chief of the Highway Patrol division, and N. W. Kimbrough was named to head the liquor enforcement division. Sellers, for the past two years administrative assistant in the Department of Industrial Relations, is a former lieutenant of the Highway Patrol. Kimbrough is also a veteran Highway Patrol Officer, and until recently was special investigator for the Governor. Governor Sparks announced that functions of the Highway Patrol and the liquor enforcement unit, though now placed under the same department will be separate, with the Highway Patrol continuing its present job of traffic law enforcement.

Governor Sparks stated that the merger was in the interest of efficiency and economy, and that the old arrangement making the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board both a merchandising agency and also responsible for law enforcement, appeared to him to be inconsistent. "One cannot sell a commodity and police it at the same time," the Governor said in announcing his action removing the enforcement end from the ABC Board and placing it under the Department of Public Safety.

Chilton County High School Student Council

(By Tommie Thompson)

This article should interest parents that have children of school age. Today I sat in on a Student Council meeting at the Chilton County High School and was very much impressed as I watched them conduct their meetings.

The Council consists of a representative from each home room that brings the problems of the students before the Principal and the Council, to correct it if it be wrong and to better it if it be right.

The Professor of Chilton County High School, Patterson Hicks, was present at the meeting and being sponser of the Student Council, Prof. Hicks is much concerned about the students' problems that are brought before him and the Council. The Council is as much concerned as to the well being of their school and students as the Principal, Teachers and Parents.

The students that are elected as officers must show initiative and have the ability to be a leader, and to set examples for the other pupils.

If all our future officers are run with as much enthusiasm as the students did theirs today, we are sure to have the best of leaders for our community.

Not all schools have a Student Council, but if they did their school would function better and the students would enjoy school more. The Student Council is for the benefit of the student, and properly conducted, will bring amazing results.

If some of the other schools that don't have a Student Council could sit in on one of their meetings they would start one for themselves more than likely to better their school.

It's a fine thing to see our present day children take such an interest in their school and the way that it is run, because it gives them the neccessary preliminary experience that is needed to meet the public, should they choose to run for some public office, or even if they don't they will need it to cope with the many problems that confront them each day.

We should be proud to have a school, a faculty and a student body as we have here at Chilton County High School, and the students should be equally as proud that they are allowed to have "say so" in the way that the school is conducted.

That is what the Student Council is for, to work for the student and with the faculty. They agree on the correct type of punishment for the student and then if the student thinks that the punishment is unjust he or she has the right to appeal to the Principal. The Council is not supposed to "boss" the students, but to help him to be a better one.

Professor Hicks and the Council are doing a fine job as to the welfare of their school and keeping it that way in the years to come they will continue to have the best school in Chilton County.

Let's keep up the good work, Mr. Hicks and students, and show the other schools in Chilton County what can be achieved by all concerned working together.

FORDHAM - KELLEY

Miss Janette Fordham was married to Eugene C. Kelley September 27th, at the home of Dr. James L. Baggett, of College Park.

Best man was Captain Ben Caton, Dean of the Junior College of Georgia Military Academy. The bride's only attendant was Mrs. Caton, who was attired in lavender, with black accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of pink rosebuds.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Fordham of Savannah, wore an ice-blue crepe dress with navy accessories. Her corsage was of white orchids.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kelley of Maplesville, Ala., has recently returned after 44 months of service in the Army in the European theatre of operations.

The couple will make their home in Birmingham, Ala.

WILLMAN - STEPHENS

The wedding of Mrs. Myrtle Holley Willman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Holley of Clanton to Jack W. Stephens of St. Louis, Mo., was solemnized November 30th, 1945, at 10 o'clock in the morning at the home of her parents. The home was decorated with beautiful white chrysanthemums. Rev. G. G. Williams performed the ceremony. After the ceremony coffee and cake were served to a small group of friends and relatives.

The bride wore a beautiful teel-blue dress and hat with black accessories. Her flowers were gardenias. For traveling she wore a tailored brown suit with brown accessories. She was employed by the Veterans Administration in Montgomery.

The bridegroom was in the service for three years. He served one year overseas in the China-Burma-India Theatre and has recently been released from the service.

The couple immediately left on their wedding trip for St. Louis, Mo., after which they will be at home at Daytona Beach, Fla., where Mr. Stephens will be in the oil business.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Smith visited in Birmingham this week.

Mrs. Mark L. Tucker is visiting in Birmingham this week. She is doing her "Christmas visiting."

Miss Janice Myrle Miller, left last Friday night to attend the 4-H Club Convention in Chicago, Ill. She sends word that she is having a wonderful time; is staying at the same Hotel where Gene Autry is and that he has entertained her personally. She also says that he is a very nice person and she regrets having to leave there so soon. She will return to Clanton next Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Renfro Mullins had as their guests last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hewlett, of Montgomery. Mrs. Hewlett remained until Tuesday and Mrs. Frank Scott and Mrs. Ed Mullins rethrned with her for a couple of days visit.

P.-T. A. MEETS

The Grammar School P.-T. A. was called to order Tuesday afternoon in Mrs. Martin's Class room. The room had been made very inviting with Christmas posters around the room and pot plants in the windows.

Mrs. George Jester, the President presided, and those members who were present voted to buy a set of Encyclopedias for the school, maps for the Fifth and Sixth grades and games for the four lower grades. Other business was discussed.

The second grade pupils repeated in unison, for the Scripture, the 23rd Psalm and sung, with little heads bowed, a lovely prayer.

Mrs. Lewis Williams led a discussion on, "Discipline" and Mrs. Robert Oglesby led a discussion on, "The Family Builds a Future." They were assisted with the discussions by Mrs. Bill Minor and Mrs. Taylor.

The room count went to Mrs. Warr's Sixth Grade.

After the meeting those present were served punch and cookies by Mrs. John Deramus, assisted by some of the other room mothers.

PILOT CLUB MEETS

Members of the Pilot Club met at the home of Miss Flora Harris for their November program. The meeting was called to order by the President, Lillian Simpson, who, after a brief business session, turned the meeting over to the program committee, Olive Fiquette and Mae Vinson. They presented a lovely program of fun and entertainment pertaining to Thanksgiving.

At the conclusion of the program the hostess announced that she was taking them to the Bus Station for refreshments. This unusual idea for their social hour was enjoyed immensely by everyone.

FOR THE VICTORY BOND QUOTA

In the publication of prizes in the press last week, all the merchants contributing were listed, except The Leader. The error is most regrettable as Mrs. Lande has been graciously generous of both her time and contributions.

The three pairs of Nylon hose which Mrs. Lande contributed were obtained under many difficulties, including a special trip to Birmingham for this purpose only, and the committee is glad to express gratitude to Mrs. Lande and to each who contributed, and to take this opportunity to correct the error.

The program will tell the story of the rehabilitation of battle-fatigued airmen.

AAUW Asks For Commission To Study Military Training

In a letter to President Truman, the American Association of University Women has asked for an immediate and intensive review of the whole question of compulsory military training in the light of such new scientific developments as atomic energy and in the light of our international responsibilities. The letter to the President signed by Dr. Kathryn McHale, AAUW General Director, reads

Mr. President:

The Board of Directors of the American Association of University Women, representing 80,000 members in every State, held an executive meeting at AAUW Headquarters on November first to third.

Since the membership had expressed deep concern with the problem of universal military training, the Board gave considerable attention to the subject. There seems to be confusion in the public mind as to how military power can be projected into the new atomic age as a weapon for justice human freedom, and world peace The whole concept of our future relationships with other countries has been changed by the release of nuclear energy and other new scientific developments. The problems they raise involve not only the physical sciences but social and political science. Humanity itself is at stake.

The American Association of University Women feels the urgency of this situation. The members of its National Board believe that the public should be furnished with correct and considered information on the subject before the question of universal military training is decided. They, therefore, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

THAT, the AAUW strongly urges that a representative commission be appointed at once by the President of the United States to study and promptly recommend means of fulfilling our international commitments in the light of new scientific developments and of our responsibilities as a member of the United Nations Organization. We urge further that action with respect to compulsory military training be based upon the relation of such training to our international commitments, as shall be made clear in the findings of that commission.

AAUW local members know from experience with the nations united we stand that when the roots of international tensions and conditions arise that produce divisions among people and nations. They believe an orderly and happy society cannot be evolved with part of the population living mentally in the atomic age and the rest living in the handicraft age.

Therefore, this Association asks that you appoint a commission, representative of men and women in the Congress, the military, the diplomatic services, as well as those in the physical and social sciences, and the humanities. Prompt action in making the appointments and in reporting the findings is sincerely desired

The AAUW National Board also acted to alert the membership to see that the United Nations Charter is effectively implemented through (1) appointment of skilled personnel; (2) adequate financial support, and (3) freedom for its various organs and subsidiary agencies to act, each in its own field of special competence

The Telephone Service Situation
IS IMPROVING

We're On Our Way To Serve Those Waiting For Telephones

WITH the receipt of increasing amounts of telephone equipment from our manufacturers, we are making progress in catching up on held orders for service.

In many places where new additions to outside plant and central offices were not required we are now installing telephones without delay. But in places where additional outside lines and cables are needed or where central office switchboards must be manufactured and installed it will require more time before we can catch up with orders for telephones now on hand.

Building new lines, installing new cables overhead and underground and expanding central office facilities, which, in many instances, calls for new buildings or building additions, is a big undertaking. It's a job that requires a tremendous amount of labor and time to complete.

We are anxious for all who want service to get it. And you may be sure that we are doing all we can to hasten the day when no one will have to wait for telephone service.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Europeans Swinging to Right; Demobilize 4,000,000 G.I.s; Foresaw Jap Break, Says Hull

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EUROPE:
Swing to Right

Running counter to historical experience, European nations given freedom of political action are swinging to the right with slight modifications instead of far to the left as would be expected in the wake of suffering and privation.

Following Hungary's decisive turn to the right, Austria was next to follow, with the Volkspartei (People's party) carrying off election honors and being closely followed by the moderate Socialists. The Communists ran a poor third.

Peculiarity of the first free balloting in Austria after the anschluss of 1938 was that the political sentiment of the country changed but little during the annexation, the recent voting reflecting the same alignment as existed prior to the Nazis' entry. In winning the election, the rightists sought to maintain their grip upon the country, with their leaders planning to seek Allied economic support to relieve the hunger and cold which "drive people to extremes."

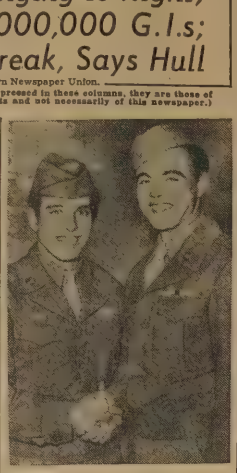
Meanwhile, the rightists continued to gain strength in Italy following the early ascension of leftism based upon partisan activity after the armistice.

Vittorio Orlando

In this strongly Catholic country, with Rightist Prince Humbert figuratively heading the state as lieutenant for King Victor, there has been an increasing agitation for moderation to respect the interests of all classes of the population. Favored by allied policy, the rightists have become increasingly aggressive in speech and action, taking the play from the once powerful partisans.

Because of the non-development of democratic statesmanship during the long fascistic regime, concrete political leadership in Italy has thus far failed to coalesce, with the result that Prince Humbert has considered appointment of famed World War I premier, Vittorio Orlando, as head of a new government to furnish it with both prestige and direction.

PEARL HARBOR:
Diplomatists Testify



Led by former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, ace U. S. diplomatists, testifying at the congressional inquiry into Pearl Harbor, told of the government's efforts to forewarn Japan of the consequences of continued aggression in the far east and revealed the strategy to gain time to speed American preparedness.

Pale and appearing tired, with overcoat draped over his shoulders, the ailing Hull declared the chances of reaching a settlement with the Japs were never more than 100 to 1 inasmuch as this country refused to sacrifice its principles in any agreement. Consequently negotiations were extended to delay an untoward Nipponese move, with eyes focused on possible action in the far east rather than at Pearl Harbor.

While Hull told of the government's delaying tactics, swank former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles told of the late President Roosevelt's warning to the Japanese that continued far eastern aggressions would compel the U. S. to safeguard its vital interests. In addressing the Nipponese ambassador, however, FDR watered down a declaration originally drawn up at the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic conference openly threatening a recourse to arms if the Japs overstepped their bounds.

Denying that he knew of Gen. George C. Marshall's reported statement that the U. S., British and Dutch military forces had agreed on joint action in the event of an attack on their territory or strategic far eastern points, Welles said that he made no policy while acting as secretary of state but merely spoke for Hull or Mr. Roosevelt.

U. S. ambassador to Japan from 1932, bushy-browed Joseph C. Grew revealed that while the militarists exerted strong influence in Japan following the conquest of Manchuria, responsible Nipponese elements strived to reach an agreement with the U. S. until late in 1941 when Tojo took over. Though he had heard rumors of a mass attack on Pearl Harbor in the event of war, Grew said, U. S. naval intelligence discounted the probabilities of such a move.

The two-millionth G.I. to be redeployed from Europe, Cpl. Charles W. Hudgins of Norfolk, Va. (right), is congratulated by Sgt. Albert Procopio of Revere, Mass.

ARMY:
Speed Discharges

With the additional lowering of point scores, making another 783,000 men and women eligible for discharge, the army will have released half of its wartime force of 8,300,000, with about three-fourths of the total coming since May 12.

Meantime, the army expedited the return of all high point men from the European theater of operations, with the redeployment schedule for November and December bringing the number of troops in the area below the fixed total.

In speeding up the rate of demobilization, the army reduced point requirements to 55 for enlisted men, while also freeing G.I.s with four years of honorable service or with three or more dependent children. At the same time, enlisted men 35 years of age with two years of duty; soldiers 38 or over, and overseas vets with 50 points, if declared surplus, remain eligible for discharge.

The rate of officer demobilization also will pick up with the cut in their point requirements from 75 to 73 and their eligibility for discharge upon completing four years and three months of honorable service. WACs also benefitted from the reduction of their point score from 34 to 32 and discharge eligibility of both married officers and enlisted personnel.

WAR CRIMES:
Nazi Plans

Having regained some of their aplomb after earlier humility imposed by surrender, the 20 top Nazis on trial for war crimes at Nuernberg heard Assistant U. S. Prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman outline the party plan for military aggression, with one phase dealing with preparations for fighting "two-thirds of the whole world."

Taken from a naval document, the ambitious plan for global warfare declared that Hitler's aims to make Germany an outstanding power probably could not be achieved by peaceful means, and that the reich was forced to prepare for conflict with England, France, Russia and "in fact, one-half to two-thirds of the whole world."

Despite the grandiose blueprinting of the militarists, however, other documents showed that the Nazis abandoned plans for invading England, capturing Gibraltar and seizing Iceland and the Azores—the project against Britain being discarded because of the lack of transport and the strength of the RAF.

Other papers showed that Germany launched a program of secret rearmament even before the rise of Hitler, contracting for construction of submarines in Holland, Spain and Finland, while also building up a military air force by the training of air lines pilots for combat. To cover up their naval development, the Germans consistently falsified reports as to the true tonnage of their fleet.

Previously, the U. S. prosecution drew from the piles of captured German documents to reveal that Hitler had egged the Japanese on to war against the U. S., though the Nipponese Foreign Minister Matsuoka expressed the belief that America would not fight over China but would move if Singapore were attacked.

JAPAN:
Hit Profiteers

With hundreds of thousands of their men dead, their country heavily battered by bombs, and American forces occupying their homeland, Japanese were further impressed with the dictum that war does not pay by U. S. plans to confiscate wartime profits.

At the same Time, General MacArthur called for the suspension of all discharge allowances or service pensions to demobilized Nip vets, except the disabled, in another move toward ". . . lightening the dead-weight burden which Japanese militarism forced the rest of the country to bear. . . ."

Under the sweeping tax orders issued by MacArthur to the Japanese government, all firms directly engaged in war work would face a 100 per cent levy on their profits, while other businesses would be assessed up to 100 per cent.

In addition to confiscating wartime profits, the U. S. sought to achieve a more equitable distribution of wealth by ordering the imposition of a supplementary tax up to 70 per cent on all capital. Effect of this regulation would be the expropriation of the tremendous wealth of the ruling families, known as the zaibatsu, and the loosening of their monopolistic griup upon the nation.

Besides some six and one-half billion dollars of war profits that would be involved in the confiscation, another three billion dollars of war risk insurance and indemnity to damaged Japanese firms would be affected by the new order.

Meanwhile, MacArthur agreed to permit Japanese importation of food, cotton, petroleum and salt to help feed the hungry populace.

OVERSEAS RELIEF:
'Ike's' Plea

Government requests for an additional 1.9 billion dollars for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration were given a decided boost with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's declaration before a congressional committee that political instability may well follow failure to assist liberated countries' transition to a peace economy.

Asserting the need was great, "Ike" said that the necessarily long time that will be required to re-establish European industry following Nazi centralization during the war will result in widespread unemployment, with dire poverty ensuing unless food and clothing are furnished.

Ragged young Italian eats meal of bread, pointing up UNRRA plea for relief funds for impoverished European nations.

Declaring that the army was not equipped to handle relief while UNRRA was especially set up for the job, Eisenhower urged the continuance of its work. Readjusting operations after early mistakes growing from inexperience, UNRRA now was performing a creditable task, the general said.

RUBBER:
U. S. Key

With its 52 government-owned synthetic plants, the U. S. holds the key to the postwar rubber situation, involving the future of the huge British, Dutch and French plantation industries of the far east.

Precisely because the U. S. is able to supply 85 per cent of its rubber needs through the synthetic product, and such a policy would result in the plantation industry's loss of about half its prewar market, the whole question has entered the diplomatic realm. Strong sentiment exists in this country to retain at least part of the tremendous new synthetic plant for future development and possible emergency.

Because of the strategic position it enjoys, the U. S. may well be able to hammer down the price of natural rubber, pegged at about 18 cents a pound before the war by an international cartel after former fluctuations. While synthetic costs approximated 25 cents during the first five months of 1945, improved technique has since shaved the figure to about 18 cents.

MVA:
Meets Opposition

The proposed Missouri Valley authority suffered a second setback in the form of an adverse report by the irrigation and reclamation committee. The bill, reputed to be the only piece of legislation ever to be referred by congress to three different committees, had already been reported adversely by the commerce committee. It still faces action by the agriculture and forestry committee.

SEABEES DRILL FOR OIL NEAR ARCTIC

Little-mapped wilds of northernmost Alaska hold "Umiat No. 1," where U. S. navy seabees are drilling for oil, says the National Geographic society. The hole constitutes the nearest well to the North Pole that has ever been drilled.

Umiat, not heretofore marked on even the most detailed Alaska maps, is on the Colville, chief river of northern Alaska.

Sub-zero cold enforces a five-month winter holiday on actual drilling at Umiat. The bleak site is about 170 air miles southeast of Point Barrow, Alaska's northernmost projection into the Arctic ocean, and 350 air miles northward from Fairbanks, to which point a pipeline will eventually be laid if the project produces sizable quantities of oil.

UNRRA Test of Sentiment For World Co-Operation

Faith in Ideal Neceessary to Continue Work of Allied Relief Agency After Reports Of Early Difficulties.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

The forces in Washington battling for world co-operation are finding the going tough. It is hard to get people to have faith in collective security when they witness such things as the breakdown of the foreign ministers' conference in London, Russia's reluctance to co-operate in the Far East advisory commission, Argentina's espousal of the ways of the dictators. At times it seems as though, internationally speaking, democracy were approaching the winter of its sorest discontent.

It is unfortunate that in the midst of this period of suspicion and anxiety, a yes and no vote has to be taken on a matter that may mean life or death, and to that extent, peace or anarchy to hundreds of thousands of people in Europe. I refer to the 500 million dollar appropriation for UNRRA which has been winding a precarious way through congress.

By the time these lines appear, that appropriation which congress previously authorized may have been granted. There has never been much doubt as to its final approval. But the danger lies in the effect of proposed reservations.

This appropriation bill is considered a bell-wether. If it goes through unencumbered, it may mean that other measures affecting our relations with other nations are fairly safe and that such isolationism as exists in the country (and, therefore, in congress) is less than one-third of the whole.

It is true that there have been loud and emphatic demands that such knowledge as we possess concerning the atom and its potentiality be kept strictly to ourselves even though scientists say it cannot be less than common knowledge—even the "know-how" to turn it to military or commercial use — within a few years. But I believe that if you will submit to careful analysis the expressed sentiment of congress on this subject, it would reveal a line-up which takes little consideration of any international aspects of the use of atomic energy. In other words, the viewpoints so far expressed have differed as to whether this new force has been looked at as something to sell at home and the question has been whether it be produced under state control or by private enterprise. The question of internationalizing the bomb has remained in the domain of theory.

A look at the arguments for and against UNRRA and the reaction to them gives us a much clearer picture of tendencies, isolationist or otherwise, of the arguer.

U. S. Support Is Vital

When a congressman casts his vote "aye" or "no" on the bill to appropriate the money for UNRRA he is not simply virtually voting aye or no on whether we help feed starving Europe. If he votes no and the noes have it, there will be no UNRRA. True, all contributing nations put in the same proportion of their national income — 1 per cent —but it so happens that 1 per cent of the national income of the United States is nearly three-quarters of the entire sum contributed. Your voter knows this. And he can't help realizing the UNRRA is symbolic of American participation in any world organization. Without this country's advice, consent and support, no world organization can exist. And likewise, with American support no nation can afford not to go along.

Another thing that the congressional voter knows when he votes on UNRRA is that it comes from perfect. He knows that the personnel, the efficiency, the standing of the organization have improved tremendously in the last few months since it has been able to get the personnel it required, which it couldn't get before because of the manpower and brainpower shortage due to the war. But he knows it is still hampered by its polyglot nature and he has to have faith enough in its purpose to make him feel that the risk of failure is worth taking. Because UNRRA, like any international organization, is everybody's baby, it can easily become nobody's baby. Each nation has been only too ready to criticize it, always excluding their own representatives' functions, of course. UNRRA has suffered greatly from a poor press because the task it faced was well nigh impossible in wartime.

The bad news, therefore, overbalanced the good news as far as reports of progress on the part of the active, contributing countries were concerned. From the passive, recipient countries naturally there were plenty of complaints. These "sins of omission" were ballyhooed. The other side of the story was not. It was the sad and familiar tale of priorities, a story many a business man can tell. Even when UNRRA had money in hand for food required (although some of the contributing members are very slow to pay, the United States still was a little less than half of its allotment and authorization), it was impossible to get the combined food board, which decided who got what, to allot any to UNRRA until the armed forces, the domestic market, the lend-lease, and the liberated countries who had money to buy, got theirs. And even if the food was available, frequently there were no ships in which to transport it.

That situation has changed. Food is now being delivered to Europe. By Christmas it will be moving at the rate of half a million tons a month. But the memory of past deficiencies lingers and doubt as to future performance could easily be used as an excuse to defeat the measure unless one is really convinced that UNRRA's job is so important it must succeed. And there we get down to the nub of the whole argument. For to agree with the thesis that UNRRA's objective is desirable is to agree that the good of one is the good of all and the good of the other fellow is the good of the us—"us" standing for the United States.

It is easy to show that millions in Europe will starve this winter unless they get food from outside their own borders. It is easy to prove that in those countries which are UNRRA's concern — the ones which were invaded and which cannot pay for food — starvation will lead to disease, riots, revolt—and death. And we know that under such conditions, nations turn to totalitarianism and when that fails, to chaos. We also know that unless we help tide these people over, we cannot expect to sell them our surpluses because "you can't do business with a graveyard." Nevertheless the isolationist would respond, what of it? Let's stay in our own backyard.

Therefore, the voter, weighing UNRRA's past errors with its future potentialities, will vote for it only if he still believes that world co-operation is something worth taking a risk for.

So UNRRA becomes a test of how well this belief is standing the test of misunderstandings and disappointments on the diplomatic front which we have faced in the past weeks.

We hear a great deal about the difficulty of understanding the Japanese mind and many people have their fears as to how we are going to get along in the years ahead during which we will occupy the country and attempt a reconversion of Japanese thinking as well as economic life.

Recently I had a long conversation with an officer who had interviewed some of the more intelligent Japanese officers captured in the Philippines just before the surrender. Several remarks of one of these men illustrated the difficulty of reaching the enemy mind.

My friend asked the prisoner: "What did you think of our propaganda?"

"It made us laugh," the Jap replied.

"Be specific," my friend said.

"Well, you sent us leaflets saying, 'Surrender; come over to our lines and receive plenty of hot food and cold water.' We laughed at that. We had plenty of cold water in the mountains. What we wanted was hot water."

Water, to a Jap, meant in this case a bath. They bathe in very hot water. That was what they wanted and couldn't get. To the Americans —water means, after the heat of battle, first, a drink.

THIRD SMITH BRIDE GETS GOOD ADVICE

HAMILTON, KANSAS. — Mrs. W. H. Smith wrote a most interesting letter to Faultless Starch about the way the Smith family has used that starch. Here is her letter:

"Forty-seven years ago, Mrs. W. O. Smith, as a young bride, started using Faultless Starch in her home.

"Twenty-five years ago Mrs. O. T. Smith, as the very young bride of Mrs. W. O. Smith's son, started using Faultless Starch in her home. She tried many other starches, but always went back to Faultless Starch.

"Ten months ago I started using Faultless Starch as the bride of Mrs. O. T. Smith's son. I started using it at Mrs. Smith's request, and now I am a stiff backer of Faultless Starch.

"As 'three generations of brides,' we say, 'three cheers for Faultless Starch.'

"I might add that I am very fussy about my husband's shirts. And also that Mrs. W. O. Smith has never used any other starch for over half a century."

What an interesting story! Certainly here is positive proof that Faultless Starch makes wonderful friends that stay for a life-time.

YOU DESERVE FAULTLESS

There is no reason in the world why you can't enjoy Faultless Starch, too. You might just as well make your starch—WITHOUT COOKING—with Faultless Starch. You might just as well stop that "sticky" iron—with Faultless Starch. You might just as well be proud of the absolutely faultless look you get with Faultless Starch!

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

MANY TIME-SAVING IDEAS
IN GUIDE AVAILABLE TO LOCAL FARMERS,
HOME OWNERS AND POULTRY RAISERS

A check list, or planning chart, which farmers say is of great help to them in increasing the efficiency of their farms, is one of the features of a 64-page booklet entitled "Sinclair Farm Time-Savers", now being offered without cost by Sinclair Refining Company.

The booklet includes a variety of practical and proved ideas for making the farm more profitable, more modern and easier of operation. The purpose of the booklet, according to the introduction, is to help make the most of new methods and materials that will make any farm, large or small, a better place to work and live.

The booklet gives a lot of basic information, such as the best way to mix cement, how to make electrical connections, how to protect and care for farm machines, how to build simple pieces of farm equipment, and improvements in the farm home.

In addition, it covers such subjects as better care of animals, first aid for animals, useful ideas for poultry raisers; insect control, household conveniences, painting of farm buildings, sewerage and water disposal, special jobs for tractors, water systems, weather forecasts, and countless modern "tips" to save time and money around the farm.

LOOK
HOW MANY CALLS
ALABAMA MADE THIS YEAR

As Telephone Tommy points out, Alabamians did a whale of a lot of talking from January through November of this year. Fact is, more local and long distance calls were made than in any other similar period in the entire history of the telephone in Alabama.

We wish you could have seen the rush of these calls through our telephone exchanges. They made the signal lights dance across our switchboards with such speed and sparkle as to turn the lights on Broadway green with envy.

You might have felt that with so many calls being handled, the telephone folks were making money because of the war. The best way for Telephone Tommy to prove the company did not profit by the war is to tell you this startling fact. And that is "telephone earnings in 1945 will be the lowest in the company's history, except for the worst of the depression years".

This is because our expenses—wages, taxes, cost of materials, cost of services—increased at a greater rate than our revenues.

Telephone people, however, were glad to be busy handling Alabama's calls. They were not concerned primarily with figures. Instead these 3,700 busy Alabamians were concerned with service—getting your calls through and seeing that lines were kept in order. They knew their job was to serve you well and with a pleasant "thank you".

Where they are and How they are

John A. Rucker, STM, 1-C, son of Mrs. Mary Rucker of this city, is one of the high point Navy veterans whom the "magic carpet" is bringing back to the States aboard the USS YORKTOWN. He will go directly to the separation center and receive his discharge.

We are very glad to get the report from headquarters that Earnest P. Deloach, who has served in the European Theatre during the war, has received his honorable discharge from the Army and is home.

Joseph W. Maddox is home again with an honorable discharge. He served 46 months in the Army as an aircraft mechanic. He received during his service the "Aircraft Medal" and the "Good Conduct Medal" and our dispatch from headquarters tells us that he was flight engineer on the C54's, which carried gasoline, ammunition, etc., over the Himalayas to our forces in China for which service he received the "Distinguished Flying Cross."

Maddox once flew a load of bombs with the detonators already in them (detonators are not usually inserted until just before the bomb is ready to use) without knowing anything about it until they sat the plane down and were watching the crews unload it.

You surely deserve your medals and honors, Mr. Maddox, and we are glad o have you home again.

T-Sgt. James R. Lowery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Houston M. Lowery, has been honorably discharged from the service after almost four years in the Army Air Forces. Sgt. Lowery's last assignment was at the A.A.F. overseas replacement depot at Kearns, Utah, where he served as clerk. He was a graduate of Thorsby Institute and was engaged in farming before entering the A. A. F.

John VanDerveer, Jr., is home at last and looks fine and healthy in his "civilians." His friends, and especially his father, are happy to have him back in Clanton. Of course, John has his honorable discharge.

James L. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Johnson, has been promoted from Private, first class, to Corporal in the Army overseas. He is serving as a mechanic with the Port Battalion, stationed in the India Burma Base Section. This organization, now under the command of Brigadier General Robert R. Neyland, has led military installations throughout the world in the handling of vitally needed materials of war.

Cpl. Johnson has been in the India-Burma Theatre since January, 1944.

Cpl. Luther W. Sammons has received an honorable discharge from the Army Air orces and will be home again with his family. Cpl. Sammons spent three years and seven months in service, two years and four months overseas. More than a year of his overseas service was with the military police in Italy. Later he was with the Air Transport Command in Arabia, India, Persia and Egypt.

Cpl. Sammons has the honor of wearing the European, African, Middle Eastern and Asiatic Pacific Theatres of Operation Ribbons and the "Good Conduct Medal."

Edward C. Staggs, Cox. 1-C, is home from the South Pacific after serving about three years there in the Navy. He is home now with an honorable discharge and is to be married on Christmas Day. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Staggs of Clanton Route 1. He has five service ribbons for battles in which he participated.

Robert L. White, Jr., Phm. 1-C, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob White of Clanton, received his discharge November 24th, from the U. S. Marines. He will be in Clanton with his parents until after the holidays, then he will go back to his job in Anniston, where he was with Usrey Funeral Home.

He served three years in the South Pacific.

Cpl. Milton E. Diefenderfer has received an honorable discharge from the Army after serving in the capacity for the past 48 months, twenty months of which were spent overseas. He served as a Rifleman during this time. He wears the Infantryman's Badge, the Badge for Good Conduct and Service Ribbons for the American and European Theatres.

Sgt. William C. Gray, whose home is in Maplesville, Ala., has received an honorable discharge from the Army after 45 months service, 35 of which he spent overseas. He was General Clerk and Record Keeper for his group.

Pfc. Melvin I. Langston has an honorable discharge after 42 months in the service. He received three battle stars in the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre: the Philippine Liberation Battle Star and is a wearer of the Good Conduct Medal.

Cox. Wiley C. Banar, son of H. E. Banar, after twenty-one months in the Atlantic and Pacific areas and who received three battle stars for service in three invasions, has received his honorable discharge from the Navy.

The Bronze Star Medal award was given to Pfc. Leon D Sansom for gallantry in action against an enemy while crossing the Roer River in January, 1945. He was serving as a scoutman, working from the Infantry back to the artillery and successfully completed his mission by laying telephone wire across the river despite heavy artillery fire and straffing from enemy planes. He also wears four other battle stars and the Good Conduct Medal.

Pfc. Sansom is now a civilian again, receiving his honorable discharge in November.

M.O.M.M. 2-C William R. Alston has received his honorable discharge from the Navy after 21 months in the service, ten of which were spent in the Pacific Area. His home is in Mc Creek.

SF 1-C Aubrey E. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Smith of Stapleville, Ala., has been honorably discharged from the Navy after twenty months in service.

A.M.M. 1-C Henry H. Brown, after fifty months in the service of the Navy, 22 months in the Pacific Area, has been honorably discharged with such honors as the Good Conduct Medal and three unit citations.

G.M. 1-C Garvis N. McGee has been serving for the past 41 months overseas, was n four major engagements and three invasions and wears the Good Conduct Medal, now has his honorable discharge and is out of the service.

T-Sgt. Robert Coker, colored, who was driver for Taylor Wholesale Grocery Co., before entering the service 56 months ago, has received an honorablhe discharge. He served two years overseas with the 364th Infantry. He wears service ribbons for the Asiatic-Pacific. American and Pre-Pearl Harbor Theatres.

CONTROL OF TWIG GIRDLER IN PECANS

Damage caused by the twig girdler, which cuts off bearing branches of pecan trees, reduces pecan yields considerably each year, reports W. A. Ruffin, API extension entomologist in advising that farmers and nut growers can control the twig girdler by gathering fallen branches and burning them.

"By cutting off the tops of branches the twig girdler greatly reduces the fruiting area of the tree the current year and the following year," Mr. Ruffin explained. "The best way to control the twig girdlers is to pick up all twigs that have fallen on the ground as well as those lodged in the trees and burn them. It is also advisable to destroy fallen twigs from hickory and persimmon trees near pecans."

SEVERAL JOBS NOW FOR FRUIT GROWERS

If you have fruit trees or grape vines on your farm there are several jobs which need your attention, W. A. Ruffin, API extension horticulturist and entomologist advises.

"All scuppernong and grape vines must be pruned before Christmas. Pruning done later is harmful to the vines," Mr. Ruffin said. "All fruit trees should be pruned before there is any sign of growth in spring. The sooner this pruning is done the better—too often pruning is put off until it's too late. To help control diseases and insects burn all limbs and vines which have been cut away.

"Oil emulsion should be sprayed on all fruit trees while they are dormant to destroy scale insects. Before buds start swelling in the spring peach trees should be treated with concentrated lime sulphur. This spray controls brown rot and peach leaf curl. Both of these sprays should be used as directed by the manufacturer."

COTTON CORD TIRES DO WELL IN TESTS

Truck tires made with improved cotton cords gave outstanding performance in Government tests conducted during the war years according to a summary report prepared by the testing agencies. The improved tires made from selected varieties of cotton, stood up under rough driving markedly better than tires made from standard cotton cord.

Passenger car tires made of cotton cord and also tested during this period were still in good driving condition after nearly 70,000 miles of high-speed driving.

The first of these experimental tires were truck size 7:50-20 and were made of 90 percent synthetic rubber and 10 percent natural rubber. Low-gage cord was used in the tires.

Official testing was done at the Army ordnance tire testing grounds at San Antonio, Tex. The testing vehicles were 2½-ton trucks carrying a 5,000-pound pay load. The test course consisted of 70 percent paved roads, 15 percent gravel roads, and 15 percent cross country terrain. The tires were rotated every 800 miles.

All experimental tires gave satisfactory results, but those made with the improved cotton cord gave higher mileage and better impact resistance to rock ledges and other obstacles than those made from standard cotton cord used as control comparisons. Tires made with cotton of the Stoneville variety were roughly 20 percent better than the standard cord; those made from SXP, 75 percent better and those made from Wilds, 132 percent better.

Before the war, cast iron kitchen utensils were "seasoned" at the factory and were ready for use after washing. Now they come unseasoned and unless properly treated will rust and discolor food. To season, rub inside with unsalted fat and heat over low heat on top of stove for several hours. Cool, rub inside with clean cloth or paper, but do not wash. Repeat treatment several times. Do not wash with soap and water until the pores of the surface are filled with unsalted fat well baked in, extension service specialists advise.

Railroads are reported in need of 20,000,000 cross ties. With crops out of the way, Alabama farmers can make a good daily wage and at the same time find a market for low grade trees, and tops of trees cut for lumber, reports C. E. Clapp, API.

The Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion has announced that by June 30, 1946, the following wartime subsidies will be off: Dairy production payments, a regional fluid milk, feeder cattle, beef, sheep, lambs and flour.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

A drunk man staggered into a seat on the train, and seeing a minister in a seat across the aisle, shouted to him, "I do not believe there is a heaven." The preacher did not lift his eyes from his paper. Then in a louder voice the drunk man said, "Sir, I do not believe there is a heaven." To this no reply was made. Then for the third time the drunk man fairly screamed, "Did you not hear me? I said that I do not believe there is a heaven." Without even looking in his direction the minister replied in an even and smooth voice, "Very well then, my brother, you go to the place that you do believe in, but please go quietly." The man saw himself as he was and for the rest of the journey he was quiet. Every man, sober or drunk is on his way to one of two places; heaven or hell, and we should learn the art of making our journey in quiet.

A loud voice from Pasadena, Calif., was heard recently to tell all mankind that on the 21st day of September, 1945, God was going to split every atom in the universe, and that would be the last of the earth. He said that our souls would be left suspended in space, waiting for God to rush us away to judgment. It is sad to say that some of the simple-minded believed what he had to say, and became very apprehensive as the hour approached. The atoms did not crack as this fanatic had proclaimed. When will sanity prevail among those who profess to be in touch with God? Pastor Russell vowed by the Eternal that the end of time would take place on the 14th day of October, 1914, but his words were false. Pastor Russell to the contrary, this old world still goes on. That leads me to say that if you ever hear any one predicting the end of time that you are listening to one who claims to be wiser than Jesus. He said that He did not know the day, or the hour.

Did you know that Peter the Great, the father of the Russian Navy, would shudder at the sight of water? He never entered his palace garden because the River Mosora flowed through it. His coachman was ordered to avoid roads that passed streams or crossed bridges. At the very sight of water this Monarch would break out in a cold sweat and would tremble like an autumn leaf. He had a strong aversion to all bodies of water. It would be well for the individual and for the world, if every man would have a like aversion for all forms of moral evil.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Two experimental plantings of Blue Lupine have been made in the Chilton County Work Unit this season. These plantings have been made for the purpose of determining how well Lupine will survive the winter here in this section of the state. The plots of Lupine are located on the farms of C. R. Childress and C. L. Wilkins.

Complete farm plans were made on the farms of Mr. W. B. Bailey of Maplesville and Walter Johnson of the Training School community. Mr. Bailey plans to establish sericea in water disposal areas for erosion control and a source of hay. Sericea will grow well on wet and low places where other crops sometimes fail.

Dr. Nix of Maplesville has done a very good job of establishing an area of Crimson Clover and Rye Grass to be used for winter grazing. This is the first time that Crimson Clover has been grown on the field; but, with the exception of a few plants that failed to become inoculated, the stand looks good.

Wilson Bryant of the Training School Community is harvesting the seed from an acre of crotalaria. He intends to sell all the seed that he does not need for next year's planting.

NAVY DEPARTMENT WANTS WORKERS

The Navy Department is still in great need of stenographers, typists and telephone operators in Washington, D.C., according to Miss Irene Kimes, Civil Service Representative recruiting for the Navy Department who is stationed in Room 429, or Room 431, Post Office Building, Birmingham, Ala.

The need for this big job has been brought about in part by the returning of WAVES, Sailors and Marines from the far corners of the world. These boys coming in with incomplete records are creating more and more jobs in the above listed categories. Young men and women coming to Washington to serve the Navy Department as Civilian Employees have many advantages that are included in the benefits of the Navy's Job Replacement Program.

Each new employee is interviewed in the Reception Center when they first arrive in Washington. They are then assigned to one of the Navy's twelve Bureaus, according to their ability and the real needs of their services. The Navy guarantees you housing in cheerful, pre-inspected rooms. You can eat three meals a day, including Sundays, in the Navy's Cafeterias at a minimum cost of $1.25 per day.

Recreation facilities are offered by the Navy, plus many outside recreational activities other than what the Navy has to offer in the Nation's Capital City. Those of you who are interested in continuing your education can attend one of the many accredited colleges offering courses that can be pursued during your off time while employed by the Navy.

The minimum age limit is 17½. Persons eligible for these positions are Veterans, former Federal Government Employees, or employees of the Federal Government who are facing reduction in force. Employees are also eligible who have already received their notice of reduction in force, as well as persons who have never been employed by the Federal Government.

All interested persons, male and female, should call or write Miss Kimes at the above address for appointments. The telephone number is 3-0545.

Let's help the Navy finish the job!

COTTON IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM NOW UNDERWAY

An extension seven point cotton improvement program will be undertaken by Alabama farmers and growers in other cotton states during 1946.

Improvement in cotton grade is already putting $66,000,000 in southern growers' pockets each year. Over $5,000,000 of this amount goes to Alabama farmers.

Extension workers of Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina recently met in Atlanta and agreed to promote a seven point program aimed at balancing crop and livestock production, lowering cost of producing cotton, providing better cotton and enabling cotton growers to make higher profits.

The highlights of the seven points in the south-wide cotton program:

1. Fit cotton into a balanced farming program by planting only on best suited land, considering land needed for other crops.
2. Put every acre to its best practical use and treat it according to its needs.
3. Cooperate in producing one-variety cotton on a community-wide basis.
4. Use methods and improved machinery to save labor.
5. Use most effective methods in controlling insects and diseases.
6. Pick and gin cotton for higher grades.
7. Sell cotton for grade, staple and variety values.

New evidence that penicillin may be of tremendous value in coping with one of the dairy farmer's worst problems —, mastitis — is reported by the American Veterinary Medical Association.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PLACE IN THE LIFE OF HIS NATION (Temperance Lesson)

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 5:13-16, 43-48; I Peter 2:13-17.

GOLDEN TEXT: Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.—Psalm 33:12.

Men make up nations. Human beings in a land like ours determine by their interests and attitudes the direction in which the entire social order moves. That in turn determines what kind of government we have.

If the totalitarian philosophies have colored our thinking and caused us to forget the importance of the individual in the life of our nation, let us turn at once to the right view.

Particularly important is the bearing which individual Christians can and should have on our national life. We have tended to draw back and fail to use the power and position which we have by God's grace.

Nowhere does that show more than in our failure (perhaps one should say shameful failure!) to bring Christian principles to bear upon the appalling liquor problem. This is temperance Sunday. Do not fail to stress that phase of Christian citizenship today.

How should Christians make their influence felt in the nation? By being what they ought to be and contributing to its life. Note these things in our lesson—the Christian gives:

I. Salt (Matt. 5:13).

We are the salt of the earth, and the pungent savor of Christ is to be evident in us as we touch life round about us—in the church, in the home, and in the nation.

True salt is antiseptic and purifying. It fights corruption wherever it is found. How effective the spiritually salty Christian and church should be against the corrupt political system, the liquor industry, vice and sin of all kinds. Have we lost our savor (v. 13)?

II. Light (Matt. 5:14-16).

A light is intended to give illumination to all round about it. It always does unless someone hides it under a cover, and then it becomes not only useless but dangerous.

A life lighted by faith in Christ will shine to the very ends of the earth and, as a missionary once said, "The light that shines farthest shines brightest at home."

We are the light of the world, but if we cover our light we deny the very essence of our natures. Here is no thought of proud or selfish display. Light does not shout about itself, it just shines.

Who will deny that there is need of some real spiritual light in some of the dark corners of our national life? Who is to shine in such places but you and me, fellow-believer?

Then, too, let us not forget that God has sent us out to light other lights. We can best serve our nation, and best meet the challenge of liquor by turning men to Christ.

That doesn't mean that we should neglect other "good works," but it is well to keep "first things first."

III. Love (Matt. 5:43-48).

"Love your enemies" (v. 44); that is the standard which Christ has established for His followers. While the love one has for the brethren is without doubt a more intimate relationship than the love one may have for an enemy, we must not seek to minimize the real love we should have even for those who curse and revile us.

It is to move us so deeply that we not only treat them kindly, but also pray for them. Humanly speaking such a thing is impossible, but in Christ it is not only possible, it has actually been demonstrated in life.

It is so easy for Christians to speak with derision that borders on hatred about "the devil's gang," and to lose all love for the crowd that hangs around the tavern and the gambling house. Let us hate their sin, but may God help us to show that we really love them.

Love will do more to reach the world for Christ, and more to direct our national life into right channels than any other influence we can bring to bear. Let us do all we can, but let us do it all in love.

IV. Loyalty (I Pet. 2:13-17).

The loyalty of the Christian to right authority should be glad and free, not by necessity or by coercion.

The believer will see in all men the image of God and will honor them even though he may not be able to respect or approve their way of life. The dignity and position of the individual is always recognized by Christianity.

The brotherhood of true believers should call forth a peculiar love. We need to renew that brotherly affection between believers.

Fear of God, that is, the desire to do His blessed will, shows itself in the best kind of citizenship. Government would serve itself well if it encouraged every effort to win its citizens to Christ.

CONSTANCE COLLIER helped Paulette Goddard deceive Charlie Chaplin when Paulette was Mrs. C., and doesn't mind telling about it. "Mr. Chaplin preferred that his wife should be the lady of his house and should give up any thought of an acting career," says she. But Paulette was ambitious. So Miss Collier, whose name has long been famous in the theater, coached her at every opportunity. "And we just didn't tell Charles anything about it," she adds. She's seen in "Kitty," in which Paulette stars. Miss Collier has helped many another actress; this list includes Mary Pickford, Norma Shearer, Claudette Colbert. But husbands didn't have to be deceived in their cases.

Bonita Granville's certainly growing up; she shoots her first man in Monogram's "Glamour Girl." It stars Bellita, the ice skating ballerina, but this isn't one of the standard plots that ice skaters usually draw—"Glamour Girl" is an emotional story which ends in violent death. "Dillinger" is one of Monogram's pet pictures; somebody called "Glamour Girl," "Dillinger on Ice."

Keeps Rendezvous With Death, 4th Try

SANTA ANA, CALIF. — Coroner Earl Abbey said that Mrs. Albertina Merriman, 72, committed suicide with a shotgun. She left notes stating she had previously tried three pistol bullets fired into her mouth, turning on the gas and slashing her wrists.

"I will now have to use the shotgun," the final note read.

Wartime Crooks Keep FBI Active

Impersonator and Racketeer Present Hard Problem.

WASHINGTON. — In addition to keeping the home front free from enemy agents, the FBI also has had to cope with another "fifth column" in our midst—the wartime racketeer and confidence man. Preying upon our citiens preoccupied with the war effort, they have been a definite threat to the very things for which the war was fought.

Impersonation and illegal wearing of the uniform are two violations in this category coming within the FBI's jurisdiction. During 1945 convictions in these categories totaled 974 and 390, respectively, and together they represent a 25 per cent increase over 1944. Some of the cases are almost unbelievable.

One clever impersonator posed as an army officer and contacted the relatives of men who had been reported lost in action. He told them that the servicemen actually were still alive, and he concocted dramatic stories of his own and their experiences in the Pacific war. By thus ingratiating himself he borrowed money and then disappeared. Apprehended by the FBI he pleaded guilty to impersonation and went to prison for a year and a day.

Not all these racketeers are men. In an eastern city a young girl of 16 dressed up in a nurse's uniform and called at homes dislaying service star flags. Several unsuspecting persons gave her money with which to arrange furloughs for loved ones before the fraud was exposed. She received two years' probation.

Generally they are stalked by tragedy but occasionally there is a humorous case. Discharged from the army when his true age was learned, a 16-year-old boy later showed up at a servicemen's canteen in a marine uniform. During the evening's entertainment he was chosen as a visiting movie star's "pin-up boy." His undoing came when their pictures together appeared in the newspapers.

The FBI has found that these fakers usually are very talkative, but they quickly become evasive when asked to substantiate their identities. Any suspicious person should be reported immediately to the FBI or the nearest law enforcement agency.

Big Nazi Dynamite Ring Jailed as Blonde Talks

FRANKFURT. — American army intelligence agents, working with lightning speed, completed the cracking of a German underground sabotage ring even before it had a chance to destroy one American installation.

Quick-witted members of the counter-intelligence corps, helped by a 19-year-old German blonde who talked too much for her lover's good, have captured 1,200 pounds of dynamite and arrested more than 40 saboteurs, including the ringleader.

The blonde and her girl friend were first picked up by the C.I.C. for routine questioning. Frightened, they revealed that a notorious Gestapo officer, after fleeing Cologne, was working as a baker in Weimar and planning with other Germans to disrupt American communications and transportation.

The organization's leader, who was in love with the blonde, suspected nothing when—at the suggestion of the C.I.C.—she asked him to meet her at the gang's hideout.

Admits Slaying 'Sunshine Girl' Then Goes to Sleep

BELLE VERNON, PA. — A husky discharged sailor confessed recently to slaying pretty, 17-year-old Anna Elizabeth Dreyer, the "Sunshine Girl" of Fayette City.

Then 18-year-old Frederick I. ("Red") Hauser, a wounded veteran of South Pacific warfare, dropped into a sleep which the flash of a photographer's bulbs failed to disturb.

Hauser admitted to District Attorney H. Vance Cottom that he beat Miss Dreyer into unconsciousness with his fists when she reneged on a promise to pet, then strangled her with a black leather belt she was wearing.

Cottom said he will file charges after Hauser signs the statement he made.

Girls Start Fire for 'Excitement'; Spanked

LANCASTER, PA. — Four girls, aged 9 to 12, set a $30,000 blaze in the Pennsylvania railroad union stockyards because they "wanted excitement," reported Fire Marshal Robert M. Strauhan.

Strauhan said the girls told him they had organized a club but that playing with dolls became dull. He ordered them sent to juvenile court, but first turned them over to their parents for spankings. He said they got the spankings.

FBI Nets Alleged German Spy After Six-Month Hunt

Bring in Nazi Called Privy To U-Boat Saboteurs, Snared in Trinidad.

WASHINGTON.—The department of justice announced recently the capture of a 25-year-old German it described as a Nazi espionage agent who had been sought for six months by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, says the Associated Press.

The FBI identified the captive as Hans R. Zuehlsdorff and said he was an associate of William C. Colepaugh and Eric Gimpel, the German agents who were arrested by the FBI in New York after landing from an enemy submarine at Hancock Point, Maine, in November, 1944.

Zuehlsdorff was apprehended by British authorities in Trinidad, on August 9, and was brought to Miami by an FBI agent, John Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau, said. A search throughout much of this hemisphere "paid off," Mr. Hoover said, when Zuehlsdorff was identified by Allied authorities on August 9 at Port of Spain, Trinidad, as a passenger on a Spanish ship, and using the alias, Juan V. Collens, equipped with forged Argentina documents and posing as an Argentine citizen.

Held for Action.

He is being held for action by United States authorities, Mr. Hoover said, because "it is known he had an espionage mission for the Germans in the Western hemisphere." Zuehlsdorff, the director said, admitted his identity to the FBI.

"The investigation into the landing of the two German espionage agents in Maine," Mr. Hoover said in a statement, "had disclosed that Zuehlsdorff and two other German agents, Oscar M. Wilms and Max C. Schneemann, were being 'groomed' by the German intelligence service for important roles in the last desperate attempts of the German high command to obtain vital information concerning Allied military and political intentions."

Colepaugh and Gimpel, after an army trial, were sentenced to death, but President Truman commuted the sentence to life imprisonment. Wilms and Schneemann still are at large.

An Active Nazi

Zuehlsdorff, the announcement said, was born in Guestrow, Mekl, Germany, but had spent most of his life in Latin America, where he traveled extensively. He was reported by the FBI to have worked for German firms in Latin America and to have been prominent in Nazi activities, which resulted in his expulsion from Colombia. He was interned in the United States in April, 1942, as an enemy alien and was repatriated to Germany on an exchange ship, in July, that year, the announcement added. Immediately after his repatriation, he went to work in Berlin as an English language propaganda broadcaster and singer, the FBI said. He attended the school for German espionage agents at The Hague during 1944, according to the bureau. In February, 1945, the announcement continued, he was flown from Berlin to Madrid, where he assumed his alias and set out for Argentina.

Couple Seeks Vets to Replace Their Dead Sons

CATTARAUGUS, N. Y. — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Milks are looking for two homeless war veterans to share their farm home and take the place of their two sons who died as war prisoners of the Japs.

They wrote to a Buffalo newspaper asking help in locating "one or two homeless or crippled returned service boys."

"We prefer to take in boys who have no folks or home, and who are unable to support themselves," they said.

Cpl. Stanley Milks died in Cabanatuan prison in 1942, and Robert, a private, went down with a Jap prison ship sunk off the Philippines in 1944.

'Toff' Cafes of London Insist on Dinner Coats

LONDON.—It matters not how sparse the fare, London's swank restaurants are decreeing that, now the war's over, customers must wear evening clothes.

Head waiters in several west end places hand customers neat little cards telling them to wear evening dress next time. Other spots are warning that full dress will be necessary during Christmas.

"Out of courtesy to the ladies," says one notice, "it is expected that gentlemen will wear uniforms, evening dress or dinner jackets."

Girl Gets in Tight Fix By Sticking Neck Out

ST. PAUL, MINN. — Virginia Triplett, 19, elevator operator in a bank building, staged a contest with her elevator here and lost by a neck—her own. She was leaning her head outside the car on the first floor when the automatic doors closed. Passers-by tugged on the doors to keep the girl from choking while maintenance employes climbed down the shaft to free the jammed control.

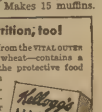
Try ALL-BRAN Apple Spice Muffins!

(No sugar, no shortening, but lots of praise!)



It's hard to believe such luscious muffins are sugarless and shortening-less—but they are! They owe their wonderful flavor to a combination of ginger, cinnamon, molasses and the tasty, nut-sweet goodness of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. And they owe their tender texture to the fact that ALL-BRAN is milled extra-fine for golden softness.

2 cups Kellogg's ALL-BRAN
½ cup molasses
1½ cups milk
1 egg, beaten
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
¾ teaspoon ginger
15 slices raw apple or other fruit
cinnamon-and-sugar mixture

Add ALL-BRAN to molasses and milk and allow to soak for 15 minutes. Add egg. Sift flour, soda, salt and spices together and combine with ALL-BRAN mixture. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full. Dip apple slices in cinnamon-sugar mixture and place on top. Bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) about 20 minutes. Makes 15 muffins.

Good Nutrition, too!

ALL-BRAN is made from the VITAL OUTER LAYERS of finest wheat—contains a concentration of the protective food elements found in the whole grain. One-half cup provides over ½ your daily minimum need for iron. Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily!

Chilton County was well represented at Chicago when the 4-H'ers adopted their 10-point program for 1946.

Representing the Chilton 4-H Clubs were Perry Sorrell, son of Mr. John Sorrell, Verbena Route 1 and E. J. Klinner, son of Mr. E. F. Klinner, Maplesville Route 2. Janice Ethridge, who recently moved to Chilton from Marengo County, was also present. Miss Ethridge is at present a student of the Chilton County High School. Janice represented Alabama as the State's Good Health Representative.

Chilton County's representatives joined with 1,600,000 members in other states in promoting a 10-point program. Their 10-point program is:

1. Developing talents for greater usefulness..
2. Joining with friends for work, fun and fellowship.
3. Learning to live in a changing world.
4. Choosing a way to earn a living.
5. Producing food and fiber for home and market.
6. Creating better homes for better living.
7. Conserving nature's resources for security and happiness.
8. Building health for a strong America.
9. Sharing responsibilities for community improvement.
10. Serving as citizens in maintaining World Peace.

The uniforms will bear the name of local business establishments.

PATTERSON HICKS ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF ALABAMA EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

PATTERSON HICKS

Prof. Patterson Hicks, Principal of the Chilton County High School, has been elected Vice-President of the Alabama Education Association. The choice of Prof. Hicks for the position was made by the Executive Committee of that association.

Prof. Hicks has been principal of the Chilton County High School, Clanton, since 1936, when he came to Clanton from Florala, Alabama.

He received his B.S. degree from the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, and the M. A. degree from Columbia University. He has held various offices with the Alabama Education Association as a district officer and member of state committees.

The next meeting of the Alabama Education Association is, at present, scheduled to be held in Birmingham in March, 1946.

No Fireworks In Clanton This Yule

There will be no fire cracker shooting in downtown Clanton this Christmas season.

Mayor Thompson informed the News this week that the City of Clanton police force has been instructed to rigidly enforce the city ordinance against the shooting of fire works in the fire district of Clanton. The fire district is the main business section of Clanton and adjacent blocks.

The mayor was asked about shooting fireworks in the residential section. He said it was permissable so long as no fire crackers or other fireworks were fired near the fire district.

OLD-AGE PENSION MOVEMENT TAKING ON NEW LIFE

Last Friday morning the organizer of the Old-Age Pension Crusade throughout Alabama, the Honorable George W. Beasley, called at the office of this paper and we had a very pleasant visit together.

Mr. Beasley and a number of his associates in the pension work are holding meetings with associations and committees which he organized many months ago. Mr. Beasley in passing through Chilton County last Friday conferred with a number of committeemen in the county as well as with many others in adjacent counties.

Pfc. Hollis Jackson Glass is home after spending 17 months overseas. He arrived in the States last week from Germany. He has seen much action in the European Area, but he is looking forward to receiving his discharge from the service and enter civilian life again.

Local Stores To Close Two Days Christmas

After a canvass this week by some of the local dry goods merchants it has been decided that all dry goods stores will close December 25th and 26th, for the Christmas holidays.

All merchants have agreed to remain open next Wednesday afternoon, December 19th, instead of closing as has been the custom for the past several months.

Kiwanis Club Presents Fighter Plane To School

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton has subscribed funds and presented to the Chilton County High a Naval Fighter plane.

The plane is not in yet but will be flown to the Clanton airport in the near future by a local boy, Beeman Ruthven.

The plane is being presented to the high school solely for study and observation. It will be stored in the bus garage until a suitable hanger or building can be constructed.

Music Study Club Has Beautiful Christmas Program

The December meeting of the Study Club was held on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. E. Gowan, with Mrs. John Higgins as hostess. The living and dining rooms radiated warmth and cheer with their decorations of holiday greens, bells and traditional candles.

Reading of the Club Collect opened a half hour's business session, presided over by Mrs. Norman Roberts, president. Mrs. A. B. Foshee and Mrs. Robert Oglesby were welcomed into the Club.

A program of Yuletide music was offered. Mrs. Raymond Mims, director of music at Chilton County High School, presented a selected group of girls and boys from the Glee Club of 150 voices. Programs in the form of miniature Christmas trees were given out by Mrs. Grady Heflin, chairman. Among the beautiful hymns and carols sung are the following:

"Holy, Holy, Holy," arr., Fred Waring; "Onward Christian Soldiers," Glee Club Singers; "The Christmas Story," Miss Mabel Camp; "Gesu Bambino," Pietro Yon, Mrs. Mims; "My Christmas Song For You," Boyo; "Medley of Christmas Music," Glee Club Singers. Carol singing, assembly.

J. Arkie Mahan Killed By Run-Away Truck

Mr. John Arkie Mahan, age 67, resident and businessman of Clanton and Chilton County was killed by a runaway truck on Thursday evening, December 6th. The accident occurred at the approaches to the ferry just below Mitchell Dam, on the Coosa side, about 4:00 o'clock, p.m. Mr. Mahan was rushed to the Central Alabama Hospital where he died about 5:15 Thursday.

According to reports received at the News the accident occurred as Mr. Mahan and the driver, Albert Pounds, were descending the hill approaching the ferry. The driver applied the brakes which failed to operate. As the truck headed down hill the driver, Albert Pounds, told Mr. Mahan to jump. Mr. Mahan refused. Pounds leaped from the truck, 1½-ton Ford cargo. Mr. Mahan remained with the truck trying to regain control and save the truck until it crashed into an embankment on the curve.

Mr. Mahan was a life-long resident of Chilton County having been born out at the old Mahan place on Yellow Leaf Creek which is at present the Thompson Mill. He has been a lumberman and millworker since 1900. At one time he was an employee of the Dixie Construction Company which constructed all the [illegible] plants in Chilton County. Since that time he has been in various businesses dealing with lumber or millworks. He had operated the Mahan Cabinet Shop in Clanton for several years previous to his sudden death.

The deceased is survived by his wife, the former Susie Bean; two sons, R. D. Mahan of Jacksonville, Fla., and L. H. Mahan of Fort Pierce, Fla.; one daughter, Mrs. W. M. Davis of Montevallo, Ala.; three brothers—Z. R. Mahan of Montgomery, H. B. Mahan of Mobile and Earl A. Mahan somewhere in Italy; two sisters, Mrs. W. C. Giles of Clanton and Mrs. Phillip McWaters of Jacksonville, Fla. He is also survived by thirteen grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 2:00 o'clock Sunday p.m., December 9th from the Church of Christ, Clanton, conducted by Howard L. Foshee of Montgomery, and J. S. Astin of Birmingham. Burial was in the Clanton Cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Luther Bean, Windol Bean, Willie Bean, J. E. Mahan, Travis Mahan and Edwin Mahan.

Honorary pallbearers were: C. B. Cox, T. L. McKee, Luther Teel, Jimmie Bell, C. Reese Mullins and Bob Oglesby.

What do you see in the woods?

Remember the old saying about the man who "couldn't see the forest for the trees"? Lots of people are like that. All they see is trees. Others look at the forest and see it filled with books, magazines, newspapers. They see the raw materials of many great industries which depend on pulpwood, such as rayon and plastics. They see cartons and boxes, and many other products manufactured from pulpwood.

They see jobs and wealth. Security for the workers and prosperity for the entire community. And if this forest wealth is properly harvested, it will increase in value in the years to come.

Let's take another look at our woods. Let's look at the trees and see the opportunities that lie within.

"Tuberculosis is one worry we bovines do not have to worry about"

Mrs. Cow is telling you the absolute truth. No cow has died of T. B. in the U. S. for years. Because cows were a valuable property and their T. B. a menace to other cows, as well as to people, the known method of prevention was applied and with 100 percent effect. There are no more tubercular cattle in the United States. Humans were interested enough to bring that about.

In humans too

T. B. is UNNECESSARY!

There has been a known method of cure for more than half a century. T. B. is an open book to science. Its cause, its method of spread and the right way to prevent occurrence are common knowledge to our medical men. . .yet. . .55,000 Americans died of T. B. last year. Each death is a record of failure. . .the failure to apply the known methods. We made peace with Japan and Germany following a war which took the lives of 253,000 Americans. We can't make peace with T. B. In the war years 206,000 Americans died of it. It is the enemy that never surrenders. . .it must be destroyed. Having the knowledge to prevent T. B. . . .knowing the method for curing T. B. . . .having the machinery for detecting T. B. early when it is most susceptible to treatment, we can't relax for a single second. Those who die of T. B. are really dying of neglect. . .neglect of individuals who will not learn of modern methods of treatment. . .neglect of our community if it fails to provide the effective and known means of prevention and cure. T. B. is your problem . . your responsibility. . .

Here's a preview of the feed outlook for 1945-46 as compared with 1944-45:

Prices of feed grains and other concentrates, except oats, probably will average about the same.

Supplies of all feed concentrates per animal unit are indicated as slightly smaller than last season's large supplies.

Supplies of high-protein byproduct feeds, on the basis of oilmeal equivalent, probably will be slightly smaller.

The supply of hay for the 1945-46 season is one of the largest on record.

Formal announcement that there will be no peanut marketing quotas and no acreage allotments during the 1946-47 production and marketing season has been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

COOPERATE WITH NATURE FIT CROP TO LAND

"Cooperate with nature and the Almighty by making your crops fit the land and the shape of the land, instead of trying to make the land fit your crops."

This is the advice to farmers from Dr. H. H. Bennett, chief of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, who was recently named as 1944 "Man of the Year in Southern Agriculture," by a leading Southern farm publication.

In setting forth a 10-point "Southern Soil Conservation Platform," Bennett emphasizes the importance of proper use of the land by explaining that primarily this means using the most level land on each farm for row crops, moderately steep slopes for grass and grain, and keeping all very steep slopes in [illegible].

As another point in the 10-point platform, Bennett suggests "A better [illegible] especially better planned rotations, less land in row crops, and a better balance between crops and livestock.

Contour farming, listed as point No. 3, is another form of cooperation necessary to save soils, Bennett declares, adding that "straight line [illegible] a sloping country defi[illegible] invites disaster."

Grow soil-holding and soil-building crops with or after all soil-robbing crops, with [illegible] and annual lespedeza among crops for saving Southern [illegible] point No. 4. The slogan, "The South will come into its own when its fields are green in winter," deserves constant emphasis, he say

It is for reason that the teachers of vocational agriculture and teachers of home economics in Alabama are working together for a complete food program in every community.

COMMUNITY FOOD CENTERS SYMBOLS OF BETTER LIVING

These forty-five school community food centers in Alabama are symbols of better living. They dramatize the family's food supply. They lead to diversified agricultural production. They suggest farm planning with the objective of living at home. They invite education in making an adequate family food budget which incidentally involves all principles of adequate nutrition.

SAVE COTTON SEED TO PLANT IN 1946

Farmers who have good cotton seed with acceptable germination should save them for planting purposes, advises J. C. Lowery, API extension agronomist, who predicts that the demand for cotton seed for planting next year will exceed the supply of improved and wilt-resistant varieties.

"Weather conditions during the fall damaged a great deal of cotton seed," he says. "Farmers who have a surplus of good seed of wilt-resistant varieties should save them as there will be a big demand for such seed next spring."

Cotton seed being saved for planting next year should be stored in a dry place. Seed stored in large piles should be checked frequently to make sure that no hot spots develop.

The Underpaid Man In The White House

(By J. E. Jones)

At $75,000 per year, President Truman is "the poorest-paid man in the United States," any and all protests to the contrary. Jonathan Daniels, former White House press secretary, contends in an illuminating article in Collier's magazine.

In the days when President Taft resided in the White House—our nation's "great boardinghouse"—he boasted of saving $100,000 in four years from his $75,000 annual stipend, Daniels relates. But expenses obviously have risen since then and—blow and blows—there is now a heavy income tax.

Out of his $75,000, President Truman has to pay approximately $46,000 yearly in income taxes, leaving $29,000, according to the Collier's article. At a minimum, the cost of running the White House, over and above expenses paid by the taxpayers, is said to be $25,000. This leaves $4,000 yearly.

President Truman's home State of Missouri then taxes him about $1,000, leaving him only $3,000, with which he must pay his insurance premiums, keep up an extensive wardrobe, contribute to the Democratic Party, respond to appeals from charity institutions, buy War Bonds, etc.

If President Truman lived as Taft did, paying the same for groceries and other necessities, "the best he could do would be to leave the White House $100,000 in debt," Daniels reports. "For Harry S. Truman will have to pay in a four-year term nearly $200,000 in State and Federal taxes which did not exist when Taft counted his luck and thrift."

Under the circumstances, now that President Truman has recommended salary increases for Congress, it's not beyond the realm of possibilities that Congress itself will say "tit for tat" and raise the President's salary.

the post should certainly be liberated of personal financial worries.—Alexander City Outlook.

Christmas This Year

The Spirit of Christmas in Chilton County seems subdued this year in spite of the fact that this is our first Christmas without war in the past four years. Christmas commodities are scarce and the stores are finding it hard to get the things that their cutomers call for. Reckless buying even to the extent of our war-time Christmases is out, and shoppers are going about the business of buying Santa Claus in a cautious manner. We believe that the fact that there is no war and our sons, brothers and husbands are returning home will be enough Christmas for the most of us.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Heap big Clark Headley has joined 'um News force, ugh. That's the way Clark has us talking around the office since he returned from India. He thinks we don't know that the Indians now speak with a Brooklyn accent or a Southern drawl—probably. No fooling, Clark has joined our force and will be handling the job of writing the news as well as superintending the plant. He has had much experience in writing and has a style that is popular with the folks here in Chilton County. Watch for his feature stories about army life in India.

You are reading Folks & Things this week through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Wade (Chas. and Minnie). Our old typewriter broke down and we couldn't get any service on it for at least a week and that left us without anything to write on. Mr. and Mrs. Wade came to the rescue with the loan of their machine which we appreciate very much. In fact, we appreciate it so much that we aren't going to say a thing about them this week that isn't good.

You know, we got a Mayor that is a go-getter. Our prediction is that Clanton will long remember the things accomplished under the Thompson administration. Right now he has several things that he is working on that is for the betterment of Clanton, but we can't talk about as yet. One funny incident though we have to tell you about what happened while he was in conversation with some officials of the Highway Department the other day. Seems Leo asked the Departments permission to move a sign about three hundred yards. The officials gave their consent immediately and the Mayor asked whether they wanted him to move the sign for them to move it. They said it didn't matter. Well, the Mayor agreed that he would move the sign. The hitch came: The officials wanted to know what was on the sign. And that was the end of that. The sign bore the legend: "State Maintenance Ends."

This would have been the eighth Christmas that we have bought our Christmas tree from Arkie Mahan who was killed last week in a truck accident. Each year he has come around just before the holidays and told us that our tree was ready and to come and get it. Sometimes he delivered it to our door. Mr. Mahan was a lovable character and leaves many friends here to mourn his passing.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Marcus have gone into the flower business in a big way. For years Mrs. Marcus has raised a few flowers to help out on funerals and elsewhere when they were needed. Now the Marcuses are building a green house and really going into the business. It is something that Clanton needs. We believe that the Marcuses will have more calls than they can supply as soon as the fact that they are in the business gets well advertised.

Went to Cooper Saturday afternoon to get some fireworks for the Junior's Christmas. Instead of getting fire works, we just got the works. When they start talking about little torpedos that used to sell for a dime a dozen, selling at five cents a piece — well, that's too much. And fire crackers selling at a nickle a piece. That's too much. Of course, it isn't the fault of the store owner. The trouble goes higher up than that. But, nobody twisted our arm and made us stick our neck out. That noise around our house will NOT be fireworks.

Ran into Mrs. Archie Taylor at Cooper. She wants Jim Folsom to be the next Governor. You know that's a good thing about Jim Folsom fans. They don't mind speaking out and telling the world that they are for Jim Folsom for Governor. The next Governor is like that too. He speaks out and let's everybody know exactly where he stands.

Mites in the laying house reduce egg production and poultry profits as well as lowering the health and vitality of the laying flock, poultrymen of the Extension Service declare. Painting the roosts and nests with carbolineum is the best way to control mites.

Looks like Bob Windham at City Grill will just keep growing. We mean his business. We don't think Bob will grow any more—he's too old. But that's off the subject. What we were going to say was, business has increased so much that Bob has called in his brother to take over one of the shifts as manager. That's Loy. You remember Loy he was associated with his father, A. B. Windham, when they operated the Smokehouse. Then the war came along and Loy entered the service. Well, he's out now and will be with his brother at the City Grill. Drop around and say, howdy.

Just run across the proper definition of a gold-digger: "One who uses the males to defraud." Which also reminds us, do you know the difference between a millionaire and a gold-digger? The millionaire has what it takes, and the gold-digger takes what he's got.

Rats rats, rats, rats to the left of us and rats to the right of us. Thank the Lord, there's no rats in the middle. That's the way the State and County Health Officers left Clanton. Dead rats everywhere. It would be putting it mild to say that the rat campaign was a big success. Rats spread typhus fever and typhus fever was increasing throughout the state. That is the why of the rat campaign, and we sincerely believe that the results were well worth the effort.

That Corley boy from Selma was in to see us this week end. We haven't anything of interest to say about Ewart but he asked that we include his name in the column. He is tired of working at Selma and wants to come home to stay for a while. That sounds bad for Ewart because when he decides to come home—he comes home. What he is doing or where he is doesn't have a thing to do with it. You can look for Ewart back home in the near future.

JERSEY HEIFERS PLACED WITH 4-H CLUB MEMBERS

Ten purebred jersey heifers have been placed with 4-H Dairy Club members during the past week. This was the first group of purebred animals to be brought into the county in quite some time. Most of the heifers were from eight to eighteen months old and were well developed for their age.

The club members who placed orders for these calves purchased these purebred heifers to be used as foundation stock in trying to produce higher quality dairy animals so they can replace their grades with purebreds. All dairy club members plan to breed their animals to proven purebred jersey males so that they may increase the quality and number of purebred animals on their own farms.

Through improved breeding and selection these boys realize that in a few years they can have a small herd of purebred animals that will bring much higher prices when they have animals that they wish to sell. Better bred animals will also give higher production and in marketing milk the heavier milkers will produce the most economical milk.

Plans are being made to bring some more purebred jerseys, both males and females into the county for 4-H Club projects later on. These animals will be shown in both local and district shows.

Dairy animals have a definite place in Chilton County's agriculture and there is no better way to encourage work of this kind than with Chilton County's 4-H Club boys and girls who did such an outstanding job in 4-H beef work.

Below are listed the names of club boys and girls who have purebred jersey heifers as a 4-H Club project:

CARTER URGES BETTER USE OF ALABAMA'S RESOURCES

The average Alabamian lives in a region rich in natural resources of which he is not making full use, according to Dr. Ed J. Carter, State Supervisor of Resource-Use Education. "Comprising over two per cent of the nation's population, he receives less than one per cent of the national income," Dr. Carter said. His average earnings for the year of 1942 totalled only $480 because he has not yet learned to take full advantage of his agricultural and industrial opportunities. He buys more of his milk, butter, and cheese from the north central states than he produces at home, even though his soil and climate are well suited to dairying. He eats salted peanuts grown 'round-about him but processed elsewhere at a good profit. He likes fried chicken but had to import 962 carloads of dressed chickens and 5,943 carloads of eggs to set his table in 1943. His state ranks fourth in the production of lumber but he watches his trees felled and shipped forth to be returned as furniture and other finished products. He's a grower of cotton, but he buys his clothing from eastern markets. He annually spends four and one-half million dollars for women's and misses' dresses but he manufactures none of them. He yells for foreign capital to establish industries in Alabama while multiple millions of his dollars are on deposit in banks and bonds.

To make better use of Alabama's resources, Dr. Carter stressed the importance of education, including the making available of findings of scientists and research workers in a form that can be readily understood. "Practical information on nutrition, health clothing, housing and the proper utilization and conservation of our resources should be made available to all our people," he said. "This should be begun as early as possible in the life of the child. It is a long-term program and one that demands the best efforts of every Alabamian."

MAXIMUM PRICES ARE LISTED FOR MATERIALS

The Alabama State AAA Committee has determined that the maximum fair price for basic slag under Alabama's 1946 program will be $9.75 per ton.

Maximum fair prices for superphosphate are as follows: 20 per cent, $19.20; 19 per cent, $18.59; 18 per cent $17.97 per ton.

The prices named for slag and superphosphate are determined on the basis of delivery at the vendor's warehouse or from car door.

Maximum price which can be approved under the purchase order plan per thousand.

A. W. Jones has been named state director of the Production and Marketing Administration in Alabama, with W. R. Sewell as assistant director.

With the aid of an ordinary food or meat chopper the home cook can convert some of the abundant crop of nuts to butter or paste for sandwich fillings. These butters may be used in soup, scalloped vegetables, stuffing, omelet, or as part of the fat in biscuits, cookies and cup cakes. For a half pound of peanut butter: 2 cups blanched and roasted nuts; 1 tablespoon bland table oil; ½ teaspoon salt. Grind through finest plate of the chopper two or three times until the nuts have the consistency of butter. Add oil and salt. Mix well and pack in a tight container.

The Alabama Production Committee suggests that Alabama farmers plant 22,100 acres of early commercial Irish potatoes for harvest in 1946 compared with 25,000 acres in 1945.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

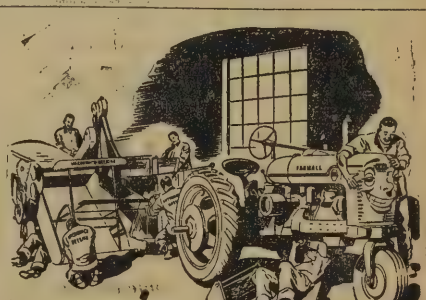
Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion," thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.



2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Mr. Eubie and Roy Mahan from Florida was called home on the account of the death of their father, Arkie Mahan.

The christening of William Posey Claughton III, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Posey Claughton II, of Auburn, Alabama, and of Harold Jaynes Bingham II, son of Major and Mrs. Harold Jaynes Bingham (nee Elizabeth Claughton), took place Sunday morning, the second of December, at the Methodist Church in Verbena, Ala. Dr. Charles Northcutt of Montgomery officiated at the ceremony.

Master Bingham wore a christening robe of French lawn which had been made, with tight bodice and full skirt, by his great-grandmother, Mrs. S Jonathan Dawson, (nee Ruth Brantley).

The babies are descendants of Marguerite deVane, King, and William Rufus King. Revolutionary patriot, and of their son, William Rufus King, vice president of the United States, Senator from Alabama, and Minister to France.

Following the christening ceremony Dr. and Mrs. William Posey Claughton, grandparents of the babies, were hosts at a candle luncheon. Their home in Verbena, "Morningside," was decorated with white carnations and ferns, and lighted with white candles.

That afternoon, Dr. and Mrs. Claughton were at home in honor of the babies' parents. For tea, Mrs. Claughton wore pink carnations with a purple gown, and Mrs. Claughton H wore white carnations with a black taffeta gown. With her gown of black and white metallic cloth, Mrs. Bingham, too, wore white carnations.

Mrs. Siddey Lanier Gibson received the guests. Mrs. Barnett Deramus and Mrs. Spence invited the guests from the drawing room to the dining room, where Mrs. Charles Strock and Mrs. Lila Williamson Sheppard poured. Misses Judith Gibson, Sandra Creene, Carolyn Deramus, Millicent Deramus and Mary Ann Deramus served. Mrs. James Fort and Mrs. Irby Deramus bid the guests goodbye as they departed through the parlor and by the covered well.

Guests invited from out of town included: Dr. and Mrs. C. Gillespie Sharpe and Misses Susan and Joanna Sharpe of Montevallo; Dr. and Mrs. T. S. McDermid, Mrs. Lee Hanson, Miss Rosamond Hanson, Mrs. Alto V. Lee and Miss Lely Lee of Gadsden; Dr. and Mrs. Leslie Callinson and Miss Carol Callinson of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. M. M. ORDINANCE NO. 1. T.

Granting to E. A. Fulmer, trading as City Bus Lines, a franchise to operate motor buses for the carriage of passengers for hire over, along and upon the Streets, Avenues and Highways in the City of Clanton, Alabama, and its Police Jurisdiction.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF CLANTON, ALABAMA, AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. The exclusive right and privilege is hereby granted to E. A. Fulmer, trading as City Bus Lines for the carriage of passengers for hire over, upon and along the streets, avenues, alleys and highways of the City of Clanton, Alabama, and the police jurisdiction for and in the consideration of the sum of $1.00 and other valuable considerations and agreements hereinafter set forth to be paid to the City of Clanton by the said E. A. Fulmer, said franchise being granted subject, however, to the conditions, agreements and provisions of this ordinance hereinafter set forth for a period of twenty-five years from and after the effective date of this ordinance. Said consideration is to be paid upon the acceptance of this franchise by the said E. A. Fulmer and subsequent considerations are to be paid as hereinafter stated.

SECTION 2. That as a condition to the existence of said franchise, the said E. A. Fulmer as aforesaid, shall operate reasonable schedules with adequate equipment over, along or upon each street, avenue or other public thoroughfare at such rates as may be approved by the City Council of Clanton, Alabama; routes, schedules and rates having been once approved by the said City Council, shall not be abandoned or changed without the subsequent consent or approval of said Council and any violation of this provision of this ordinance shall subject the said transportation company to the cancellation and forfeiture of this [illegible]

SECTION 3. That the acceptance of the said E. A. Fulmer and the said E. A. Fulmer to provide adequate and continuous service subject to the rules and regulations now in existence or that may be made by an ordinance of the City of Clanton hereafter adopted.

SECTION 4. This franchise shall be exclusive within the corporate limits of the City of Clanton and its police jurisdiction; but should application be made by some other operator, [illegible] company to operate motor transportation over, along or upon streets, avenues or other public thoroughfare in the City of Clanton, or its police jurisdiction over which the said E. A. Fulmer is not operating and in the judgment of the City Council transportation over said other route is necessary and desireable, thirty days after [illegible] said application shall be given to the said E. A. Fulmer and if he fails to furnish adequate and reasonable transportation over the proposed [illegible] such portion of the [illegible] as in the discretion of the City Council will serve the needs of that particular part of the City within the thirty days period, a franchise may be granted to said new applicant for the operation of a motor transportation for hire over said proposed route.

SECTION 5. Nothing in this ordinance shall be construed as prohibiting the operation of taxi cabs or jitneys under the rules, ordinances and the regulations prescribed for the operation of the same within the City of Clanton or its police jurisdiction.

SECTION 6. The said E. A. Fulmer may designate, subject to the approval of the City Council, bus stops and have the right to equip the same with appropriate markers indicating to the travelling public where the buses will stop. Adequate space or zones on which to transfer, receive and discharge passengers shall be designated and other vehicles, or motor vehicles or conveyances shall not be permitted to block, park in or interfere with the said bus stops, to the end that the City of Clanton and the welfare of the passengers and the public may be safe guarded.

SECTION 7. The character and type of transportation or equipment on all routes for general service shall consist of modern motor buses propelled by internal combustion engines, using gasoline as fuel. But with the approval of the City Council the said transportation company may use buses otherwise propelled.

SECTION 8. All equipment and motor buses shall be of such size and seating capacity adequate to fulfill the needs of the routes over which the same are operated. The motor buses shall be properly equipped, dependable and in reasonable good condition. All buses shall be uniformly painted and all drivers shall be selected with care and subject to all laws of the State of Alabama and of the City of Clanton as to qualifications, and character. Said transportation company shall also provide spare equipment to insure the required service at all times.

SECTION 9. The said E. A. Fulmer shall maintain a reasonable, proper and adequate schedule and service for the accommodation of its patrons and passengers upon the initial route that may be established by the mutual consent of the said E. A. Fulmer and the City Council. The initial schedule shall be as contained in a proposal submitted to the City Council by the said E. A. Fulmer. The said E. A. Fulmer shall also by December 1, 1945, file with the City Council the fares which is proposed shall be collected for the carriage of passengers within the City of Clanton and its police jurisdiction and no fare shall be collected unless approved by the City Council. No schedule or bus shall be operated by the said E. A. Fulmer within the City of Clanton and its police jurisdiction unless said schedule and route is first approved by the City Council. The City Council may from time to time as conditions warrant permit the lowering or raising of the fares to be charged and collected by the said E. A. Fulmer and may from time to time make reasonable rules and regulations as may be necessary with reference to the transportation or carriage of passengers for hire and police officers, firemen and the carriage of school children.

SECTION 10. The said E. A. Fulmer shall obtain and file with the City Clerk and shall continue to keep the same in full force and effect a liability insurance policy or bonds of indemnity as the said E. A. Fulmer may elect for the protection of passengers and persons suffering injury, loss or damage to property by virtue of the operation of motor buses under this franchise and which bonds of indemnity or insurance policies shall be with companies or surities and with condition as shall be approved by the City Council. Such bonds or policies shall be in the sum of not less than $5,000.00 for injury or death to any one person and not less than $2,500.00 for death or injury to all persons suffering injuries in any one accident and not less than the sum of $5,000.00 for damage to property in any one accident, such coverage to be for all vehicles used in transporting passengers and for servicing vehicles and equipment used in connection with the carriage of passengers for hire. The said insurance policies or bonds of indemnity to the amount required by this ordinance shall be in effect during the entire time such motor buses are in operation under this franchise and said bonds or insurance policies shall also contain a provision that they shall not be cancelled except upon ten days written notice by registered mail to the City Council. The said bonds or policies shall also hold harmless and protect the City of Clanton against all claims against the City for injuries of persons or property in any manner growing out of the use of the streets and avenues and public highways in said City for the operation of said motor vehicles, and in the event any suit or any claim shall be filed against said City of Clanton or account of any alleged act of said E. A. Fulmer operating as City Bus Lines or any servant, agent or employee otherwise connected with the said E. A. Fulmer or the City Bus Service, the City of Clanton shall give notice to the said E. A. Fulmer within ten days after the filing of any such claim or suit and in the event of the judgment against the City on account of any of the acts complained of, the said E. A. Fulmer shall pay said judgment and all costs of litigation including attorney's fee and shall fully and completely hold the City of Clanton harmless therefrom.

SECTION 11. The said E. A. Fulmer, for the privilege of operating motor buses for the carriage of passengers for hire under authority of this franchise shall pay to the City of Clanton one cent per mile for each mile covered or traveled by each bus operated in the City of Clanton or its police jurisdiction. Said amount to be based on the routes and schedules approved and established by authority of the City Council as provided in this ordinance. The said E. A. Fulmer shall on or before the 10th of each month succeeding the effective date of this franchise pay to the City Clerk the amount due the City of Clanton under this franchise, said amount when paid shall be accompanied by a detailed statement of the mileage travelled by each bus within the City or its police jurisdiction and the schedules and route made by each bus, during the preceeding month. At least one month in each calendar or fiscal year of the operation under this franchise the said E. A. Fulmer shall file with the City of Clanton a copy of an audit made by a competent and qualified auditor of the operation under this franchise for the previous year and which audit shall set forth the gross revenues of the said E. A. Fulmer for the carriage of the passengers for hire under authority of this ordinance and which shall include passengers transported within or partially within the City of Clanton or its police jurisdiction whether the said passengers board the bus within the city or its police jurisdiction, or departed from the bus within the City or its police jurisdiction.

That the payment of said license or privilege tax shall in no way affect the payment of advalorum tax on the property used under authority of this franchise nor shall payment of such license or privilege taxes exempt any motor vehicle used under the authority of this franchise from the usual and annual license for tags nor shall such vehicles of said E. A. Fulmer be exempt from taxes on gasoline, oils or other motor fuels used in the operation of said transportation system.

The operation of motor vehicles under authority of this franchise shall be in accordance with all laws and ordinances governing the use of streets and highways by motor vehicles.

That any violation of any part of this ordinance shall subject the offender to a fine of not more than $100.00 and not more than six months in prison, one or both.

It shall be unlawful for any person to park or leave standing, whether attended or unattended, any vehicle in any place reserved for, designated, or set aside as a bus stop within the City of Clanton.

This franchise, nor any rights or privileges granted under authority of this or any subsequent or amended ordinance, shall be sold, assigned, or used by any person, firm or corporation except the City Council may by appropriate ordinance authorize the sale or use of said franchise or rights granted herein.

The City Council may cancel or revoke this franchise, in whole or in part, for the failure to pay the franchise or privilege tax herein provided as the same is to be paid, and for the failure to carry out or perform any material substantial provision contained herein.

The said E. A. Fulmer shall pay to the City Clerk within thirty days after the effective date of this ordinance all expenses for the publication and preparation of this franchise.

This ordinance shall take effect upon its adoption and approval.

Read, adopted, and approved, this the 4th day of December, 1945.

F. LEO THOMPSON, Mayor
BERNICE C. WINGARD, Clerk.

STATE MERIT SYSTEM EXAMINATION

The State Merit System Council for County Departments of Public Welfare announces a competitive examination for the position of Case Workers II on January 12, 1946. Graduation from an accredited college or two years training in an accredited college plus two years of full time paid experience is the training required for this position. Any qualified person interested in social work as a profession has an opportunity for permanent employment and promotion in this field of work. The salary is from $120 to $145 per month.

Application forms may be obtained from the County Welfare Department or the Merit System Council, Room No. 1, Highway Building, Montgomery, 4, Alabama. All applications must be received in the Merit System Council Office on or postmarked before Mid-night of January 5, 1946.

ARMY RECRUITING REPRESENTATIVES TO BE IN CLANTON

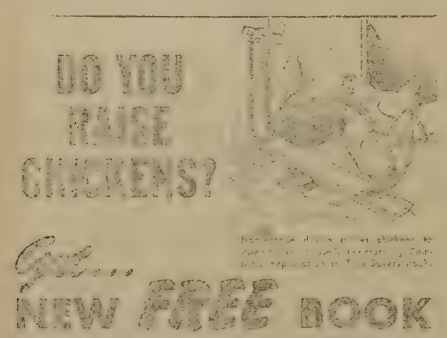
S-Sgt. Archie W. White and Sgt. Billy G. Francis, representing the Army Recruiting Service, will be at the Post Office in Clanton, Ala., every Monday between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. to interview all men between 17 and 34 inclusive who are interested in enlisting in the regular army.

This announcement was made today by Lt. Colonel Joseph F. Decker, Commanding Officer of the U. S. Army Recruiting Station in Montgomery, Ala., which serves this area. He said they will be interested in talking with any man who desires to enter the Regular Army, whether he has had previous service or not.

Lt. Colonel Decker urges that interested men contact his recruiters during their visit in Clanton, Ala., or write to the U. S. Army Recruiting Station, 519 Post Office Building, Montgomery, Ala., for complete details on the Regular Army.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.



In this time when the high tips are tumbling down and the mighty of the earth are being stripped of power, it is a good time for us to remember the speech that Shakespear put into the mouth of Richard II as he gave up his crown. "I give this heavy weight from off my head, and this unwieldy scepter from my hand, the pride of kingly away from my heart; with mine own tears I wash away my value. With mine own hands I give away my crown, and with mine own tongue I deny my sacred state." It was Hitler who thought that he could rule the world. Tojo made a mad rush for power. "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." Let truth be forever on the throne.

Tamalcane, the bigot of long ago, stood before his generals and addressed them thus: "Men, go to battle in the name of your king and bring to him one hundred and fifty thousand skulls out of which to build a monument to my honor." That same ideal was in the minds of the recent dictators who marshalled the force of men and machinery, and went out to conquer the world. They have claimed, not the small sum of 150,000 skulls, but skulls by the millions. Skulls sky high have been piled at their feet, but no monument of honor has been erected to any one of them. There was never a truer saying than, "They that use the sword, shall perish by the sword." The mills of the gods grind slow, but they grind just the same.

A new recruit on a sailing vessel was ordered by the captain to climb the mast pole and put the ships pennent-halyards above all the riggings of the vessel. For a moment the young man looked up at the heights and then at the sailing master and then [illegible] he asked, "Did anybody ever do that? The answer was, "Yes, [illegible] you think that I would ask God to do something that was never done before?" The young sailor looked once more at the top of the mast pole and at the captain and then replied, "If anybody ever did it, I can do it." And he did. I would like to say to all high school students. The heights are before you, and now is the time for you to say, "If anybody ever climbed to that height, I can do it."

Farmers want better health services. More than four-fifths of those interviewed by U. S. Department of Agriculture said they favored more public clinics in rural areas. More than three-fourths said they would like to subscribe to some flat-rate prepayment plan to cover possible hospital bills and the cost of doctors and nurses for themselves and their families.

Alabama's 1946 spring pig crop goal is 660,000 pigs and 110,000 sows to farrow. This is a slight increase in the number of sows to farrow.

When You See One of These Trucks You See a Sign of Service

YOU SEE these trucks in all kinds of weather, in all kinds of places, and at almost any hour of the day or night. When you see one, you know that it's going to or coming from a job either to improve or maintain your electric service. The job may have been to repair lines broken by storm or a fallen tree. Or it may have been the construction of a new line, or the installation of a new piece of equipment.

The trucks are rugged, and the crews on them are skilled. You don't meet them on the job often because most of their work is done in out-of-the-way places. But whether you see them on the job or not, you can be sure that improvement or construction is underway.

INCREASED LIVESTOCK PRODUCTION BEST MEANS OF INCREASING FARM INCOME

Chilton County farmers should raise more and more livestock as a means of increasing their farm income in the opinion of Dean M. J. Funchess of the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dean Funchess says that by adopting methods which have proved successful at experimental sub-stations about over the state, a feed and forage program for livestock can be developed in Chilton County.

Dean Funchess believes it is reasonably safe to say that Alabama farm income may be doubled by the development of farm programs that greatly increase yields of crops and provide for feed, forage and pasture systems.

He warns, however, that the greatest possible educational effort will be needed to put over a program that calls for shifting from the old, simple cotton program to one that calls for production of cotton on a part of the land, and also requires handling of livestock that must be supported by pasture, grain, forage and temporary grazing crops.

ELIGIBILITY OF VETERANS FOR GUARANTEED FARM LOAN

Veterans of World War II who want to qualify for a guaranty on a farm loan must meet five specific requirements according to J. H. Yates, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bibb-Chilton National Farm Loan Association.

The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, who must approve the guaranty of a loan under terms of the G. I. Bill, has announced that a veteran of World War II is eligible for a guaranty on a loan, who:

(1) Has served in the active military or naval forces between September 16th, 1940, and the official end of the war:

(2) Was discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable, either (a) after active service of 90 days or more or (b) because of injury or disability suffered in line of duty regardless of length of service.

(3) Applies for the guaranty within two years after separation from the service or within two years after the official end of the war, whichever is later—in no case later than five years after the end of the war.

(4) Has such knowledge of farming and such character and industry as to indicate ability to succeed in farming; and

(5) Is in a financial situation (including any "readjustment allowances" due) that makes it likely he will be able to carry on the farming enterprise successfully.

ALL NIGHT SINGING

An all night VICTORY singing, sponsored by B. B. Comer School and P.-T. A., will be held at B. B. Comer Memorial High School in Sylacauga, Ala., New Year's Eve, December 31.

The program, consisting of class singing, quartets, trios, duets, solos and special instrumental numbers, will begin at 8:30 p.m.

The our Tones of Chattanooga, Tenn., will be featured in one hour of clean comedy, vocal arrangements that will amaze you, and magic that will fool your mother-in-law.

Frank Stamps, brother of the late V. O. Stamps, and his quartet, who made, "Give The World A Smile," famous, will also be present, along with other outstanding quartets of the South.

See and hear these outstanding singers, as well as other local talent. Come one and all. Admission, including tax, will be 55c to everyone.

WANT TO BUY A JEEP? NEW PRICES REVEALED

Prices on the jeeps will run as follows: For 1943, 1944 and 1945 models, $782.00; 1942 models, $695.00 and 1941 models, $598.00.

Nutrition research workers advise against the wide and indiscriminate use of mineral oil as a substitute for animal and vegetable fats. Studies have shown that too much mineral oil prevents proper utilization of vitamin A, which is fat soluble, and of two important minerals—phosphorous and calcium.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME XXIII — THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20th, 1945 — NUMBER 51

Thorsby To Have Big Xmas Program

Thorsby is setting the pace in Chilton County's celebration of this peacetime Christmas with a big program of Christmas music, Christmas tree and decorations for the town. The program, very elaborate and extensive, is being sponsored through the splendid cooporation of the Civic Club Churches and Schools.

The big Christmas tree in the center of town has been decorated for the special celebrations. There will be Christmas music at the tree on Friday and Saturday evenings. On Sunday at 6:30 p.m., there will be a pageant followed by caroling throughout the community. The musicians have been organized into groups for certain streets and roads so that every home will be visited where there is a lighted candle in the window.

For weeks committees have been busy making decorations for the big tree, planning the program and practicing the parts. The Civic Club, Churches and schools are cooperating in this community celebration of Christmas. By talks, discussions and posters, leaders in the community have been helping to develop sentiment for a peaceful, joyous Christmas. Returned servicemen are not to be reminded of war days by the inappropriate fire crackers or by the loud, irreverent talk of drinkers. Many are praying for the real spirit of Jesus to be felt throughout this Christmas season.

Folks outside of Thorsby are invited to come and join in singing around the community Christmas tree.

PROGRAM OF CAROLS AT METHODIST CHURCH

A program of Christmas Carols will be presented at the Clanton Methodist Church on Sunday evening. The program will begin at 5:00 p.m.

Special Christmas singing will be in the offering as well as group singing of carols.

Everyone has a special invitation to come on out to the Methodist church and hear and join in on this program.

OUR WISH FOR CHRISTMAS

Humanity's hope and civilization's cry for a brave, new world is perennially strengthened by the light that shines from the eyes of children as they stand in the presence of their Christmas idol—Santa Claus.

This light can pierce that darkness.

And again this year, these eyes will shine, these faces glow.

Let these rays be cast on us and warm us. Warm our hearts. Kindle the spark. Light the way.

For great things are all cradled in the land of simplicity and faith—the land of a childish face.

And peace in the world is the great thing in our hearts this Christmas.

And lasting peace must spring from those basic truths that generate this light that shines in the eyes of children.

That those who lead the world out of a period of darkness will gaze this Yuletide into the faces of little children—and gazing catch the spark—is the Christmas wish and message of this newspaper.

We know too, that it is the Christmas wish and message of this community.

The wonder of these faces unfolds mankind's greatest lessons.

"Peace on earth, good will toward men."

For here is faith resplendent in its simplicity.

Here is unselfishness, unadorned.

Here is devotion, unalterable.

Here is goodness, in its glory.

The magic of this light shines outward from the world of childhood onto the pathways of our adult world—pathways sometimes darkened.

"Neglected colds often pave the way for numerous other diseases that are much more serious and even fatal. They include tuberculosis, influenza pneumonia, and infections of the nose, throat and ears. By lowering physical resistance, colds make it easier for germs of those diseases to get a foot-hold and begin multiplying.

Persons with colds were urged by the State Health Officer to remain in bed as much as possible both to speed their own recovery and to protect others against exposure to the disease.

EIGHT POINT CHICK PROGRAM FOR 1946

John Ivey, API extension poultryman, says that Alabama farmers can succeed with poultry during 1946 by following an 8-point program. The eight points are:

(1) Decide the number of chicks to brood. (2) Determine what equipment will be needed and what must be bought. (3) Determine source of baby chicks and equipment. (4) Decide when the chicks will be started. (5) Contact hatcherymen or breeders from whom chicks are to be bought. (6) Place orders for chicks to be delivered on or about the day wanted. (7) Place order now for equipment to be purchased. (8) Get housing equipment ready for arrival of chicks.

If straight run chicks, pullets and cockerels, are bought, it is advisable to buy 300 chicks for 100 choice pullets to go into the laying house. If sexed chicks are bought the number can be reduced by 50 percent, Mr. Ivey said.

It is best to buy good chicks from a hatcheryman near you who is following a good breeding and disease control program, Ivey advises.

Place orders early enough to insure delivery when chicks are ordered. December is not too early an order for next season's chicks. Placing early orders applies especially to those who plan to grow turkeys.

NO EXTRA SUGAR, EXCEPT FOR JAMS AND JELLIES

Industrial and institutional users of sugar were advised today that allotments will be continued at the same levels for the first quarter of 1946 as during the fourth quarter of this year. The only exception is for products which include jams, jellies, fruit butters and marmalades.

Sugar allotments for institutional users for the January-February period will be computed on the basis of the same per-meal allowances as at the present, OPA said.

The civilian sugar allocation for the first quarter of 1946 recently announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture is not sufficient to permit increasing rations to various types of users, OPA said.

ELBERT HENSON SERVING WITH OCCUPATIONAL FORCES IN JAPAN

Corporal Elbert H. Henson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Henson, Route 2, Maplesville, Ala., has arrived in Japan with the 32nd "Red Arrow" Infantry Division.

As part of the occupation forces in Kyushu, Southernmost Large Island in the Japanese group, Corp. Henson's unit, Headquarters Battery 32nd Division Artillery is stationed in the city of Oita.

The occupation climaxes the 32nd's many smashing victores over the Japanese in the Southwest Pacific. Elbert is seeing first hand the people whose army the 32nd Division defeated at Buna, Saidor, Aitapa, Biak, Morotai, Leyte and Luzon. The Division amassed total of 654 days of combat time in World War II.

Corp. Henson entered the army in October of 1943. He embarked for overseas duty on May 10, 1944, and holds the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre ribbon with two combat stars, the Good Conduct Medal, the Philippines Liberation ribbon and the Purple Heart.

The 32nd Division under the leadership of Brigadier General Robert B. McBride is a part of General Walter Krueger's Sixty Army.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLAN FUTURE IN DAIRYING

Though the fighting is over there the Alabama farmer's battle for a better dairy farm program has only begun.

That was the statement of C. E Teague, API extension dairyman, in telling farmers that now is the time to lay plans for their future in milk production. "While milk and cream prices continue to be, good farmers can get into the business with less difficulty," he said.

The farmer is interested in what financial condition he'll be in five or ten years from now. Dairying, as is true of most farm enterprises, is a long-time business proposition. If a farmer is looking ahead to selling milk or cream either as a main or supplementary income, he should begin now to build his herd and develop feed crops.

The number of farmers selling milk in the state climbed steadily until last July, but records show that there has been a gradual decline since that time. "Milk i as much in demand as during war time and indications are that this condition will continue." It is to the farmer's advantage not to drop out of the dairying business but to build for the future," Mr. Teague said.

SEN. HILL'S HOSPITAL BILL RECEIVES SENATE APPROVAL

The Senate has passed the Hospital Survey and Construction Bill introduced by Senator Lister Hill and former Senator Harold Burton of Ohio.

The Hill-Burton Bill will provide approximately $700,000,000 for a hospital construction program throughout the United States over the next five years. The Bill provides a system of Federal grants of money varying from 33 1-3 percent of the cost of the hospital project or health facility in the states with the highest levels of income to 75 percent in the states with the lowest levels of income.

Non-profit hospitals, municipal county and state hospitals and health centers in Alabama will be eligible to receive a Federal grant of 71c for every dollars' worth of hospital and health center construction undertaken under the Bill.

Senator Hill estimated that approximately $3,000,000 in Federal funds would be available each year for the construction or enlargement of hospitals and health facilities in Alabama. This sum would have to be matched with $1,200,000 of local and state contribution, thus giving Alabama an annual hospital and health construction program of over $4,000,000, or a program of some $20,500,000 over the 5 year period.

The Bill also provides an annual fund of $5,000,000 for surveying hospital needs and developing state-wide hospital and health programs and from this fund the states will be entitled to a 50 percent grant for the expenditures made for these purposes. Under the Bill special consideration is to be given to rural areas in the construction of hospitals and health centers, and all hospitals and health centers constructed must meet minimum standards prescribed by the particular state.

Senator Hill stated that the Bill will now yo before the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the House of Representatives and that he was hopeful that the Committee in the House would take early favorable action on the Bill.

MISTLETOE ANCIENT MYTHOLOGY SYMBOL OF DIVINE FAVOR

The custom of kissing under the Mistletoe descends from Scandinavian mythology.

Frigga, goddess of love and beauty — counterpart of Venus — so grieved when her son Balder was struck down by an arrow fashioned out of Mistletoe that her tears became the white berries of the plant: Balder was restored to life by the concerted efforts of the gods and Frigga, grateful for her son's restoration, legendarily bestows a kiss upon those who pass under the Mistletoe.

The Mistletoe was sacred to the Druids of ancient Britain and, in Virgil, it is the Golden Bough which enables Aeneas to descend to the underworld and return safely.

Considering its heathen associations, the Church has never sanctioned the use of the mistletoe as a decoration appropriate to a religious edifice. However, no restrictions have been strong enough to banish the parasitic plant from the home where it continues to be emblematic of peace, friendship and true love—sealed by a kiss.

Rules for Sending Cards to Personnel Of Armed Forces

With so many of our friends still in service, the code of military etiquette is quite important in signing and addressing Christmas cards again this year.

When sending greeting cards to commissioned officers, the rank must be designated. However, when sending a Christmas card to an enlisted man, the use of the rank is optional. The best thing is to follow the form the serviceman or woman used as a return address.

In sending Christmas greetings when the husband in service is not at home on furlough, a simple note may be added to the greeting, saying, "John's wishes are included with mine and we hope to see you when next he is home on furlough." Be certain both names are on the card.

Whether the card is sent to a person in service or to someone in the immediate circle of friends and relatives, it is always wise to be certain that the card chosen reflects the degree of intimacy that exists.

Using first names, or even affectionate nicknames is permissible on Christmas cards for close friends and relatives. Some married couples still retain the formal "Mr. (or Captain) and Mrs. Jones. Most younger couples, however, prefer the friendlier "John and Alice Jones." It is perfectly proper to include the children's names and even the name of the family Scottie. Or make the signature all-inclusive and simpler by writing "The John Lanes."

Because Christmas cards are the personal expression of your regard for the person to whom they are sent, you should double check to be certain that all cards are correctly signed and addressed. The best etiquette directs that they be mailed with first-class postage. When you use first-class postage on your Christmas cards, you are, in effect, saying to your friends, "I'm not taking any chances that this greeting will be delayed on its way to you."

Bean Winner Rules On Twelfth Night

Epiphany, or the Feast of the Kings, is the great homecoming day in France; servant girls would rather lose their positions than miss the family reunion and expect to receive an extra month's pay to wit.

The elaborate dinner features a cake in which a China bean has been hidden; the cake is cut into as many pieces as there are persons in the party. Whoever finds the bean in his or her piece of cake automatically becomes King or Queen of Twelfth Night and proceeds to choose his or her partner. The King and Queen reign over the ensuing festivities — each member of the party being obliged to obey their ridiculous commands.

Clerical employees expect a bonus and tradespeople anticipate Christmas bokes on Epiphany and Christmas trees are set up in stores and public places around which patrons pile heaps of gifts to be distributed in hospitals and among the poor.

PLEASANT GROVE — JEMISON

On Wednesday night, December 26, we will have a twilight singing instead of prayer meeting, beginning at 5:00 o'clock. We cordially invite all surrounding communities to come and take part in the singing.

We had a good attendance at preaching Sunday morning. Bro. Atchinson delivered an inspiring message on, "Will Man Rob God." There was not many present Sunday night, but the ones who were present enjoyed the sermon on, "The Devil's Sifter." We only wish there had been more present to hear it.

There is quite a number ill in the community. Miss Alice Childers is confined to her bed with flu. Mrs. J. M. MisKelley is ill again. Master Arthur Waldrop was ill last week. Vaughn Lenoir was ill this week end. Mrs. Ruth Cleckler is also ill and others. We wish for all a speedy recovery.

Miss Mary Clements visited relatives in Birmingham over the week end.

Mrs. Thulia Foshee had as her guests this week end Mr. and Mrs. Albert Foshee and daughters of Birmingham and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Foshee and daughter of Thorsby.

Miss Betty Ann Lenoir was shopping in Clanton Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. V. MisKelley had as their guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davenport of Jemison.

Mr. Frank Cox of Birmingham spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Franklin.

Miss Vela Price of Jemison and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. MisKelley and Billy, were he dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. Waldrop and Arthur, Sunday.

Baling Hay the Automatic Way—A small, automatic, tractor-drawn and tractor-operated hay baler, designed for the farmer's own use, is new equipment for postwar. International Harvester Company included this baler, now in preproduction, in a big field demonstration of new farm equipment, recently at Hinsdale, Illinois. With this compact machine the farmer moves into the field and bales the crop directly from the windrow when it is ready, thus assuring better quality hay. Operated by power-drive direct from the tractor, the baler picks up the hay from the windrow automatically, makes the bales, ties them securely with baler twine, and delivers them to the rack.

THE MESSIAH

A full program of selections from Handel's immortal oratorio, THE MESSIAH, will be presented at the First Baptist Church, December 23rd, at 7:00 p.m. This is a musical and spiritual event long awaited by many Clanton people, and it is the plan to repeat the oratorio each year either at Easter or Christmas. THE MESSIAH in its entirety expresses the great need of God's people for a Savior, the rich prophecies of His coming, His birth, death and triumphant resurrection. The selections chosen for this program will include favorite arias and choruses from all parts of the oratorio. The choruses to be sung are:

And The Glory of The Lord
O Thou That Tellest Good Tidings to Zion
For Unto Us A Child Is Born
Glory to God
Lift Up Your Heads
Hallelujah
Worthy is the Lamb

Instead of the conventional individual soloist, most of the contralto and soprano arias are to be sung by solo choirs of 16 young voices from our high school. The arias are:

O Thou That Tellest
He Shall Feed His Flock
Come Unto Him
He Was Despised
How Beautiful Are The Feet of Them
I Know That My Redeemer Liveth

The director, the accompanists and the 40 singers who will participate in this program cordially invite the public to Clanton's first presentation of THE MESSIAH.

OPA will continue to suspend white potatoes from price control through next March 6, the District Director said today.

This action was taken in view of the plentiful supply of potatoes in the present crop, Mr. Jones explained. This year's crop is reported to be the second largest in history, he added.

Fatalities resulting from accidents at highway grade crossings and to trespassers on railroad property accounted in 1944 for more than two-thirds of the total number of fatalities arising from railway accidents of all kinds.

Sixty-six percent of an egg's weight is water. So to get more eggs keep plenty of clean, fresh water before hens at all times. On cold freezing days give hens lukewarm water to drink. This will cause flock to drink more water — vital to maximum egg production

One Variety Cotton Communities should obtain breeder seed for 1946. Demand for breeder seed is much greater than ever before and the supply is less than normal due to weather conditions

Whether a house plant grows its foliage or to bloom may depend on the size of its pot. Plant scientists say that plants grown in homes for decorative foliage, such as the bright leafed coleus, need large containers with plenty of space for expanding roots to favor heavy leaf growth. Flowering plants, on the other hand, give more bloom in small pots when cause roots to be "pot bound." All plants should be repotted occasionally to provide fresh nourishment.

To each of us the word Christmas summons many happy memories. To some it recalls a ride over the frozen countryside to grandma's, sleigh-bells tinkling all the while. To others it recalls happy reunions in mirth-filled living rooms, gay banquets and glowing Christmas trees. But to all it recalls days of charm and endearment, the happiest days of our lives.

May you know this happiness in all its fullness once again, dear friends, this Christmas season of 1945.

• PLEASE don't put off this important job any longer. You're going to want all of your equipment in good shape when field work starts. It's our job to put it in condition. We'll handle your repair jobs the way you want them handled if you'll let us know in advance.

Stop in now, or phone us, and get your work on our schedule. Then you're sure to have the machines when you need them.

You know our reputation for repairing farm equipment. That's our business.

We have expert mechanics and a well-equipped shop. And our bins are loaded with genuine IHC parts—the same parts that are built into the machines at the factory—and you can't beat them.

Take one day and go over every machine on your place. Tag each one with the things that need to be done. You can count on the same service in our shop that you get from McCormick-Deering equipment in the field. Say when and we'll get busy.

BE WISE · BE AN Early Bird · ORDER NOW

Dear Joe . . .

(By CLARK HEADLEY)

Ben "Folks and Things" Tucker, our boss by the way, made some bright remarks about us in his column last week. So, we'll just begin by telling this one on him.

As you noticed Ben had a good bit to say about the rat extermination campaign. Well, the other night we were in his "private" office reading some proofs. Over in the corner, just as big as you please, played a little mousie. See what a guy will write to fill a column?

Now we will do a little explaining about this column which we hope to have for you weekly. If you noticed the heading we have pinned the title as "Dear Joe." That is what we meant—it is going to be a weekly letter to the Clanton and Chilton County GI's who are still in the service and away from home. We will try weekly to give a little inkling of the doings of the queer ducks around Clanton and vicinity. In order that your favorite GI may receive this while it is still fresh we hope it will be clipped and mailed as First Class mail.

Being a veteran of two years overseas (India) we think we are capable of knowing just what he is thinking: Girls, girls, girls, and a round three meals a day under a Chilton County table. Well, Joe, here it the dope on that as we see it all:

It is a soothing sight at the number of girls, many, many which you have never seen, that are parading between Lancaster's Bus Station and the Wadedonian Theatre. It's just a heavy of vari-colored skirts. There seems to be more than enough to go around. (Married men are not supposed to read this, incidentally).

Liquor, Oh, brother, forget it. Chilton is the wettest dry county in Alabama, it seems. But the hooch you buy here costs like mad. For instance: If you pocket a pint in some back alley it will cost you in the neighborhood of $7.00. That is a far cry from the $2.00 you used to pay for it. Of course, the ABC stores are just forty miles away but the better brands are rationed. Don't ask us why it is rationed. That is a mystery.

If you are interested in filling a bread basket, well, the chow situation in Clanton is top-notch. These Clanton people are really on the ball when it comes to chowing a veteran. And, it is hog killing time now too—plenty of fresh pork and spare ribs and crackling cornbread. They have not got around to serving the new-fangled eggs yet and still rely on the old fashioned type you have to crack—lucky people.

It is Christmas time around Clanton again. Of course nobody did their shopping early. At least that is the opinion we have gathered. The town is pretty well lighted up but at present the lights that used to hang over the roads entering town are missing. The tune a lot of people tell you when buying is, "They are as scarce as white shirts." But, Clanton will have a little better Xmas. this year than last. Many of the GI's are home and more and more are coming in daily. Then, too, there are a few more items on sale this year than last, they tell me.

That is it until next week when we will try to tell you something about the loafing veterans in Clanton, or maybe we'll talk about something else. Who knows?

Christmas is always a welcome event with us, for two reasons:

First, because we enjoy the spirit of friendliness that is all-prevailing; second, because it affords an appropriate opportunity of expressing our sincere appreciation for your valued patronage.

It has, indeed, been a pleasure to serve you, and in sending you our best wishes for a Merry Christmas we do so with the hope that the Christmas season of 1945 will transcend all of its predecessors in real happiness for you.

BIG TERRACING JOB AHEAD FOR FARMERS

Alabama farmers are on the last half of their 8-million acre terracing job. "But," warns J. B. Wilson, A.P.I. extension agricultural engineer, "we must terrace the remaining 4 million acres quicker than we did the first 4 million.

"Farmers can't afford to continue losing their top-soil from these acres which haven't been terraced. The sooner the terracing job is finished the richer Alabama farms will be," he said, in advising farmers to terrace as much land as possible this winter."

Though slightly more than 4 million acres have been terarced, some of this work will need to be done again because proper maintenance was not carried out.

With the marked increase in power equipment now on Alabama farms and the trend toward every increasing mechanization, the last half of the terracing job can be done quicker and cheaper than the first half. The cost of building terraces on an acre of land, in fact, will not be much greater than the cost of properly plowing the same acre.

Building and keeping terraces in shape has been reduced to a fairly simple job. Farmers can do the job for themselves as time and weather permit, or can hire the work done by other farmers or by other who will contract to build and maintain terraces.

"The important thing is for farmers to plan now to begin a definite program of terracing which will be completed at the earliest date possible," said Mr. Wilson.

Alabama's Top 4-H'ers in 1945

ALABAMA state winners in the 1945 4-H meat animal, dress revue, dairy production, dairy foods demonstrations and Victory garden award programs, named by state club office, and brief outlines of their club records, are as follows:

Billy Avery

Julius Wilson

Ruth Kelley

Joe Vinyard

Josephine Smith

Adelle Atchison

Billy Avery, 15, of Five Points, receives a 17-jewel gold watch from Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago, for having the highest rating state record in the National 4-H Meat Animal award program. During five years in club work the boy handled 14 baby beeves. He won many placings on his meat animal exhibits, including $272.00 in cash prizes. He exhibited the grand champion heifer in 1942, the grand champion baby beef in 1943 and reserve champions in 1943 and 1945. Billy is in partnership with his dad on a purebred herd of Herefords.

Julius Wilson, 15, of Bolling, has been named Alabama's entrant to be considered for a sectional award of an all-expense trip to the Chicago Club Congress in the National 4-H Victory Garden Activity; awards in which are provided by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation. His 4-H record shows that he raised a total of three acres of garden during five years of club work. He also raised an acre of watermelons and sold $55 worth. Eight state co-winners this year receive a $25 U. S. Savings Bond.

Ruth Kelley, 17, of Florence, wins top state rating in the 1945 4-H Dress Revue. Her Chicago Club Congress trip award is provided by the American Viscose Corporation. Ruth's winning outfit is a smart one-piece aqua wool street dress, which has unusual yokes in front and back of the waist. The skirt is gored. Ruth made a hat and bag of luggage tan wool and lined them with aqua satin to match the dress. Luggage tan shoes and gloves complete her costume. Total cost of costume, including accessories, was $24.75.

Joe Vinyard, 15, of Albertville, is the state's selection to compete for a sectional award of an all-expense trip to the Chicago Club Congress in the National 4-H Dairy Production Activity. During six years in club work the boy received $984.81 from products sold from two registered Jersey cows. He introduced improved methods of dairy feeding and management on his father's farm. Seven state co-winners in two classes also each receive a $25 Savings Bond from the Kraft Foods Company.

Alabama's winners in the 1945 National 4-H Dairy Foods Demonstrations are (individual) Emily Whatley, of Opelika, and (team) Josephine Smith, 18, and Adelle Atchison, 17, of Plantersville. Each receives a $50 U. S. Savings Bond from the Kraft Foods Co. Emily demonstrated "Victorialde Milk Bar Drinks" and the team's demonstration was titled "Cottage Cheese and Its Uses." The purpose of the demonstration was to show others good methods of preparing dairy products for all occasions, gain experience in public speaking, and develop teamwork and sportsmanship.

HOW FUNDS OBTAINED WITH GUARANTEED FARM LOANS MAY BE USED

Veterans of World War II who obtain loans under the guaranty provisions of the G.I. Bill of Kights must use the funds for the purposes specified in the Act, according to J. H. Yates, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bibb-Chilton National Farm Loan Association.

Under the terms of the G.I. Bill, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, says Mr. Yates, may guarantee a loan if the funds are to be used to purchase land, buildings, livestock, equipment machinery, or implements or to repair alter, or improve any buildings or equipment to be used in farming operations conducted by the veteran. He must find that:

(1) The funds are to be used for the above purposes and in bona fide farming operations conducted by the veteran;

(2) The property will be useful in and reasonably necessary for efficiently conducting such operations;

(3) The ability and experience of the veteran, and the nature of the proposed farming operations to be conducted by him, are such that he is likely to succeed; and,

(4) The purchase price paid or to be paid by the veteran is not more than the reasonable normal value of the property as determined by proper appraisal.

If the farm is used as the veteran's home, a guaranty may also be obtained if the loan is for the purpose of paying delinquent indebtedness, taxes, or special assessments.

World cotton stocks are the largest on record, amounting to 26.5 million bales (of 478 pounds) at the end of last July. This total compares with 26.1 million bales in 1944, 24.1 million in 1943 and 22 million in 1939.

PRICE CONTROLS REMAIN ON POULTRY

Pressures on poultry prices will not permit removal of price controls at this time, the OPA District Director in Montgomery said today.

A thorough investigation of the poultry situation revealed that prices paid to producers for live poultry of all kinds are still pressing ceilings in many areas, Mr. Jones pointed out As for wholesale prices, light turkeys and heavy fowls press on ceilings in the greatest number of areas, he added.

Although recent prices have shown some weakness, as they always do at this time of the year, Mr. Jones explained, a study of seasonal trends on poultry prices shows that the low point comes in October and rises to a high point in May.

On Alabama farms there should be more cows freshening in the fall. This means more cows should be bred during December and early January.

A delicious way to sweeten breakfast grapefruit is to fill the hole in the half, left by cutting out the white center, with strained honey. Then set the fruit in the refrigerator overnight. By breakfast time the honey will have penetrated all sections of the fruit, giving it even sweetening and a delicate honey flavor.

Brushing with a medium-stiff brush is better than rubbing those extra-soiled places on delicate fabrics, when washing by hand, say extension service specialists

XMAS. PROGRAM AT MT. PISGAH

A Christmas program, entitled "Candles of Christmas" will be presented at Mt. Pisgah church on Sunday night December 23rd, beginning at 6:00 o'clock. The program is being presented by the M.Y.F. of that church. A Christmas tree is also in the offering just following the program. The public is cordially invited to attend.

ALPHA BETA OF DELTA KAPPA GAMMA HAD MEETING

The Alpha Beta chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma had its December meeting with Mrs. Jessie Ekblad of Thorsby, who was assisted by Miss Miriam Harvey and Miss Mary Clements. Mrs. Edna Kinney, the president, presided over the business session. A delightful Christmas program had been planned by Mrs. Verta Laugston. Miss Alyce Mayfield, who is a speech major at Alabama College, read "Francie's Christmas," an excerpt from Betty Smith's "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn." The entire group joined in carol singing led by Mrs Lois Mims after which each one present discovered her stocking on the Christmas tree and participated in a contest on Yuletide customs and conventions.

A delicious salad plate was served to the group.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM AT PINEDALE CHURCH

There will be a Christmas program at Pinedale church, 3 miles northeast of Clanton on Monday night, December 24th.

The program is being sponsored by the G. A. Class. The program will be followed by a play, entitled, "Make Room or The King."

There will be a fellowship meeting Sunday, December 23, and continuing each night throughout the following week. All churches are invited to take part.

Bro. Sam Connell, the pastor, will be present for the sermons. All are cordially invited to attend.

PRICE OF AUTO TAGS MAY BE REDUCED

A release from Revenue Commissioner H. G. Dowling points out the possibility that the price of automobile tags may be reduced this coming year.

Mr. Dowling pointed out that Alabama tag revenue is pledged to retire the state's original $25,000,000 road bond issue. This original issue has been reduced to $11,531,000 with future payments ranging around a million dollars a year. At present revenue can be counted on to bring in around four million a year.

RATION STAMP NO. 38 TO EXPIRE DECEMBER 31st

The OPA has announced that sugar ration stamp No. 38 will expire on December 31st.

In making the announcement the OPA stated that tires are still being rationed dut to limited supply. OPA also said that Rent Enforcement is to receive more emphasis.

COUNTY RECEIVES SHARE IN STATE GASOLINE TAX

Each Alabama county is receiving $12,466.25 as its share of November gasoline tax collections, warrants having been mailed out December 10 as provided by law. This compares with $9,976.57 received by each county in November, 1944, collections, indicating a substantial boost in gasoline consumption with the end of war and gasoline rationing. Gasoline tax collections, November, 1945, were $1,679,078.74, a gain of $341,134.25 over the same month a year ago.

BETTY SUE ELLISON DOING NICELY

Mr. Lee Ellison, father of Betty Sue Ellison, who was recently wounded by shotgun fire, was in the News office this week and stated that Betty Sue was doing nicely in Birmingham.

Mr. Ellison said that he, his wife and Betty Sue, all wished to express their thanks and appreciation to the Chilton County High School and everyone for the donations that were given. Mr. Ellison said the money $37.50, was given to Betty Sue, who certainly appreciated the thoughtfulness of her many friends.

A FATHER'S GIFT TO ALL CHILDREN

(By KIETH MONROE)

Your son is dying," the doctor told the college professor. "Technically it's a case of shock plus loss of blood. But actually, the boy just doesn't want to live. If you can think of something that will cheer him up, even temporarily, he may rally."

The professor's son was only seven years old. That day he had been galloping his pony along a windinf pathway. The pony had slipped and fallen hard, slamming the little boy tc the ground.

When they found the boy, he lay in a pool of blood, with the prostrate pony thrashing feebly beside him. The animal's leg was broken. So they shot the pony and carried the boy home to his father.

The lad had seen his beloved pony die—and he had lost the desire to live.

That was the terrible problem that faced Professor. Clement C. Moore one dark afternoon shortly before Christmas of 1822. Cheer the boy up, the doctor had said. But what did Moore know about cheering up little boys? He had devoted most of his life to producing a monumental work entitled, "A Compendious Lexicon of the Hebrew Language: in Two Volumes." As professor of Biblical Learning and Interpretation of Scripture at the Diocesan Seminary, his style of writing and speaking was dignified almost pompous. He had just finished writing an essay expressing his alarm because "more of the well-disposed among my young countrymen do not devote their leisure hours to the attainment of useful learning, rather than to frivolous amusements."

But now Professor Moore knew he must devise a "frivolous amusement" to keep his son alive.

So the father turned away and went to the desk in his own study. He thought awhile, then began to write again. For two hours his quill pen raced over sheet after sheet of foolscap. At last he rose and hurried into his son's bedroom.

The boy looked up at him again, his face white and streaked with tears. Dr. Moore began to read—to read, in a gay and rollicking voice, what he had just written:

'Twas the night before Christmas,
when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse. . .

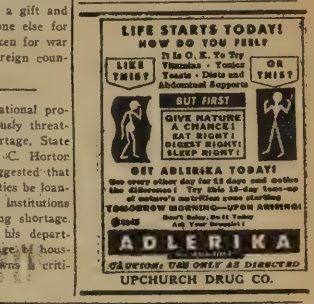
The long poem was totally unlike anything Clement C. Moore ever wrote before or afterward. But millions of children have been enchanted by it for generations without end. And the one child for whom it was written? He liked it, too—liked it so well that he kept on living for Christmas, and for sixty years thereafter! — CORONET.

Prices for Southern Pine produced by mills generally are being increased 4.7 percent or an average of $1.25 per 1,000 board feet, he pointed out. For small mills that produce rough lumber $5 per 1,000 board feet is authorized.

ARCHERS CHAPEL

The Christmas Service will be held Saturday evening, December 22nd, at 6:30 o'clock. Every one in the community is invited to take part. The plan is for every one to bring a gift and then draw the name of some one else for the gift. An offering will be taken for the starving people of other lands.



There will be a Christmas tree and service at the home of Mrs. Moore near the church on Sunday afternoon December 23rd, at 2:30 o'clock. Every one is asked to bring a gift and draw the name of some one else for it. An offering will be taken for war victims and services in foreign countries.

Success of the GI educational program in Alabama is seriously threatened by the housing shortage, State Service Commissioner C. C. Horton declared recently. He suggested that "abandoned" military facilities be loaned or given to educational institutions to help relieve the housing shortage. A survey undertaken by his department indicates that shortage of housing facilities in college towns is critical, Horton said.

MISS JERRY McGEE ALRED BECOMES THE BRIDE OF HOWARD LOSEY, JR.

Surrounded by attendants wearing all white dresses, Miss Jerry McGee Alred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hance Alred, became the bride of Howard Losey, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Losey, Sr., of Miami Fla., at a ceremony at 5:30 Sunday at the Clanton First Baptist Church with the Rev. Roswell Owens officiating.

The nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Jack Hagan, organist, and Milton Barth, soloist.

Against a background of green and white southern smilax was a cascade arrangement of white gladioli, snapdragon and chrysanthamus interspersed by white tapers in branched candalabra.

The bride entered on the arm of her father wearing a gown of white slipper satin featuring an illusion yoke trimmed with seed pearls, long sleeves pointed over the hands, and a full skirt with circular train. The double veil of illusion was attached to a coronet of orange blossoms and the bride's bouquet was of white camelias centered with a purple throated orchid.

Mrs. Randall Laffre, Jr., was matron of honor and Mrs. Harold Lawrence honor matron. Misses Ann Callen cousin of the bride, Ruth Losey, sister of the groom, and Mary Alice Shows were bridesmaids. Mesdames Lawrence Bodden Jefferson Miller and Maehugh Duncan were bridesmatrons. Their white net dresses were made with sequin peplums and they were matching net tiaras in their hair. Red carnations and silver leaves tied with red velvet ribbons formed their bouquets.

Edward Cobb, of Auburn, was best man, ushers were Callen Alred, brother of the bride, George O'Neal, Carl Dawson, Cpl. Lawrence Bodden, Harold Lawrence and Dick Hayes.

Immediately after the ceremony the reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The tiered, embossed cake centered the lace-covered table which was further appointed with white tapers in silver candelabra. The cake was cut by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Frank Callen and Mrs. John Page.

After a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., the bride and groom will be at home in Auburn, where both are students at Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The bride is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority and the groom is president of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity and a member of Tau Beta Pi Fraternity.

For traveling the bride wore a black dressmaker suit with ermine hat and black accessories. Her corsage was a purple throated white orchid.

The out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Howard Losey, Sr., of Miami, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Suttle, of Selma, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Neighbors and Jake Neighbors of Goodwater, Ala.; Mr. Randall Laffre Mrs. Ruth Courtney, Mr. Benito Alvarez of Mobile, Ala.; Mrs. V. J. Elmore and Jack, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Cassidy of Birmingham, Ala.

PILOT CLUB HOLDS BUSINESS MEETING

On Tuesday, December 11th, Laura Little was hostess to the Pilot Club for a very interesting business meeting.

International and local affairs were discussed, some voted on. At the suggestion of Escharles Johnson, the Club decided to sponsor the Infantile Paralysis Drive beginning January 15.

Upon the arrival of the Club members, they were invited into the dining room and served a delicious chicken supper, coffee and fruit cake.

A very appropriate invocation was given by Mae Vinson. Place cards and table decorations were suggestive of the holiday season. There were fun and merriment when each person read their fortune found at their plates.

Twenty club members enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Little. Just before leaving, Christmas carols were sung.

The Club will have their annual Christmas party at the home of Olive Fiquette.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

One day I was going through an art gallery and stopped before a picture that had written beneath the painting these words, "The Great Judge." On the canvass before me was a picture of Christ, and before Him was playing many children. The idea of the picture was that Christ is the Judge even of children at play. He is the Judge of all people, it matters not as to age, or class. He is our Judge when we are in business, or in pleasure. Our Judge is standing by to show us the wrong way and the right way to live. It is His voice that speaks out against all wrong ways of life, and it is His finger what points out the path that leads up to justice and truth.

In Mexico there is a statue of Christ called, "The Christ of the Padlocked Lips." The carver of this statue left a padlock holding the lips of Christ together. A sign on the statue says, "Tell Him anything and He will tell it to no one." That thought may be good, but there is another thought that come out as the traveler looks upon the padlocked lips of the Lord. We are willing for Christ to speak on certain things but there are many things today that we want Him never to say a word. Many slap a padlock on His lips as He would speak on Sabbath observance, the purity of life, the love of money, race relations and the loving of our enemies. A traveler stood looking at that statue and with tears in his eyes he shouted, "Take that padlock off and let Him speak."

Dr. Vankirk tells of seeing a little girl standing by her mother on a street curb, and seeing a puddle of water before her on which a few drops of oil had fallen, she observed that many colors were before her eyes. Then she said to her mother, "Look, mother, there is another rainbow gone to smash." All along the way of life we have looked out into the future and we have seen beautiful, hopeful rainbows spanning the future of our pathway, but something happened and a rainbow went smash. Today we see a beautiful rainbow of a warless world. May God grant that this rainbow may never go smash.

GI "JOE" TO HAVE PLENTY OF TURKEY XMAS.

If that GI of yours—husband, son, brother or friend — is in any Army post, camp or station in the southeastern states on Christmas, he's going to eat turkey and plenty of it.

That's the word from Colonel Matthew H. Jones, Quartermaster, Fourth Service Command, who points to the master menu compiled as a guide for mess sergeantsin all Army mess halls, which specifies 100 pounds of turkey for every 100 men.

That soldier may be newly inducted and in the process of training. He may he assigned to a post or he may be at a separation center sweating out his discharge. But, if he's there on Christmas Day for dinner he'll get an opportunity to stuff himself with turkey with all the trimmin's.

Tuberculosis Seal Idea Originated In Copenhagen

Sale in America Resulted in Big Life Saving.

It was a busy afternoon just before Christmas in 1903 and piles upon piles of holiday letters and packages were pouring through the post office in Copenhagen. A postal clerk, Einar Holboell, expertly handled the letters and packages, and as he did so, he pondered an idea which was to have great effect upon the destiny of millions of people in the world.

This idea of Holboell's was to mark the beginning of one of the strangest wars ever fought—a war in which human lives were to be saved, not sacrificed; in which homes have been saved, not bombed; one in which there can be no armistice, no peace treaty. For the world-wide war against tuberculosis is a total war and final victory will come only with the complete eradication of the ancient enemy which for centuries has been the cause of more deaths than any conflict or pestilence in history.

By 1907 the Danish Christmas Seals were appearing on letters to people in America. Jacob Riis, whom Theodore Roosevelt once called "America's most useful citizen," published an article "The Christmas Stamp," which set people in this country to thinking about what they could do with the idea. They thought the story good, but they pondered that the problem was too great for a penny stamp.

Late in the autumn of 1907, Emily Bissell, a young public health worker in Wilmington, Del., became concerned about the fate of a little sanatorium on the Brandywine river. She asked for assistance, but those that could give always replied in the negative with the postscript that she should not waste the money.

In her blackest moment, Emily Bissell recalled the article written by Jacob Riis, and sat down to design the first Christmas seal for America. With new design in hand, Miss Bissell set out to get help in putting her plan across. She encountered trouble from those that could afford to help. Finally she took her design to a small printer who agreed to wait for his pay. She talked with the postal clerks and they said that they would assist if the people would be advised that the penny stamp would not carry anything—that it was purely ornamental.

The printer turned out 50,000 of the stamps—the people of Delaware had begun to hear about tuberculosis—and a Christmas Seal table was set up in the Wilmington post office, and the first Christmas Seal sale in America was under way.

Reprobatus Becomes St. Christopher— Answers Christ's Call

Reprobatus was a young giant whose heathen philosophies prompted him to desert one master after another whenever he found a master stronger than the one he then served.

Noticing that the mighty Pharaoh feared Satan, Reprobatus deserted Pharaoh to serve Satan; perceiving that the Devil himself was startled by the cross, he left the services of Satan and went in search of Christ.

When he refused to pray, he was commanded to do penance and given the task of carrying travelers across a deep river.

On Christmas Eve a voice called for Reprobatus and, answering the summons, he found a very small child waiting to be carried across the river. When he had placed the little one upon his shoulder, the burden of his weight nearly bowed Reprobatus to the ground.

"You are, indeed, as heavy as the world," declared Reprobatus.

"I created the world," replied the child, "I redeemed the world and I bear the sins of the world."

Reprobatus was no longer a heathen giant: he was Christofera, the bearer of Christ: as St. Christopher, he is the Goliath of the Saints, patron saint of all travelers: his emblem is a palm stem which Christ bade him thrust into the soil —wherefore the date palm is said to blossom and bear fruit at Christmas time.

Farmers relying on poultry to be a definite source of cash income should have at least 100 hens, or a flock increased in multiples of one hundred. But if the flock is to be merely a source of meat and eggs for the family, the farmer should not have over 15 to 25 hens.

During the first quarter of 1946—January through March — the sugar supply allocated in the U. S. will be 1,183,854 tons. Though slightly below the 1,222,610 tons allocated in the October-December 1945 period, it is enough to maintain civilian rationing at present levels.

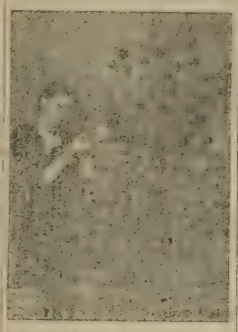
SENATE TO BE BUSY WITH RABBIT AND WATERMELON LEGISLATION

According to an Associated Press dispatch from the nation's capitol the U. S. Senate is looking forward to some very important legislation—that of increased chinchilla rabbit raising and who got Rastus Davis's 300 watermelons.

According to the report the Agricultural Commitee has recommended that the raising of chinchilla rabbits, fox, mink and muskrat be classed as an agricultural occupation.

Rastus Davis has filed a $100 claim against the government for 300 watermelons he missed from his melon patch near Camp Franklin, Texas. He based his claim on circumstantial evidence.

Nutritionists say that cranberries add considerable vitamin C to the diet when served in generous portions. Vitamin C, according to scientists tends to be destroyed by heat and exposure to air. Most of the vitamin C is retained when the raw berries are used as in freshly made relish or salad. Some vitamin C is lost in making cranberry sauce, and even more when the sauce is strained or the juice made into jelly.



Office or Lodge Decorated With Little Effort

Have you been chosen to arrange your office or lodge Christmas party this year?

Don't look at it as a chore, or something that can be done in the last few days before the actual holiday. Make preparations for it ahead of time—and you will see how much more enjoyment everyone will get out of it.

Christmas is the season for parties when people spend much of their time indoors either entertaining or being entertained. It is during this season that everyone is looking for new ideas for decorating homes, offices, recreation centers or gathering places.

Christmas greens are the favorite decoration and most universally used in all countries. In America, the pines, holly and mistletoe are displayed in wreaths or hung about the room to give a holiday atmosphere.

Other natural materials may be added, such as pine cones, shells, seed pods, ground pine or fruits.

If color is to be added, paint the gourds or pine cones with poster paints and fasten them on the pine boughs with wire or string. Pine cones painted in white and edged with red or blue are especially striking when hung against a dark green background.

Three dimensional posters make effective decorations, and are easily made from cloth, stiff paper or other material. This type of decoration is particularly effective made up in the traditional Christmas scenes such as the bringing in the Yule log, Nativity scenes, or caroling.

Christmas cards are a good source to go to for suggestions if you need a design for a poster or bulletin board as a central piece.

Syria Camel of Jesus Blessed by Child Christ

In Syria, water and wheat await the Gentle Camel of Jesus who travels over the desert on Epiphany Eve bringing presents to good children.

Legend says the youngest of the camels which bore the Wise Men to Bethlehem was exhausted by the pressing journey and, as it lay moaning before the Stable, the Christ Child blessed it with immortality.

HERE'S HOW TO SELECT A TREE

"How can we select a Christmas tree that holds its needles?" is a question fathers and mothers ask year after year.

The answer depends on the type of tree you buy and the care you give it once you set it up.

All trees tend to drop their leaves after they are cut and stored in a dry room. But some kinds naturally hold their needles longer than others. Trees used most commonly on Christmas are the spruces, fir, hemlock, pine and red cedars.

Spruce are the first to shed their needles. A spruce can be identified by grasping a branch tightly. Its sharp needles will prick your hand.

The ideal Christmas tree is the fir. It resembles the spruce except that its needles are not sharp. The needles stay on the tree for a long time, and become a golden brown before they finally drop off. Needles of the Douglas fir are flat and soft to the touch. This popular tree can be easily identified by examining the cones which have small appendages on each side.

Pines have never been very popular as Christmas trees, in spite of the fact that they do not shed their needles easily. This is most likely due to their unsymmetrical appearance which does not closely resemble the traditional Christmas tree.

No matter what kind of Christmas tree you select, it will hold its needles longer if it is standing in water. Place a little water in the base of your tree stand and you will be bothered less with falling needles than you were last year.

WATCH YOUR DRIVING DURING XMAS. HOLIDAYS

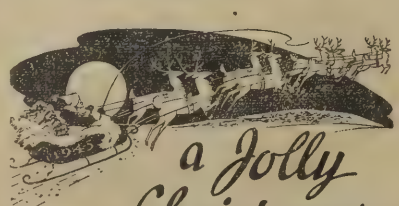
Cautioning motorists to drive carefully during the holiday season, Van B. Gilbert, director of the Department of Public Safety, revealed that in the past, more Alabama traffic accidents have happened in December than any other month.

In recognition of the increased danger during the holidays, Clyde C. Sellers, newly appointed Chief of the Alabama Highway Patrol, stated that every effort would be made by patrolmen to hold traffic accidents to a minimum.

"Added to the winter traffic danger of wet or icy roadways, crowds of holiday motorists and shoppers will make driving even more hazardous," he stated.

"An increase in traffic accidents is expected," he continued, "because of the greater number of vehicles traveling on streets and highways during the holiday season. Worn tires found on most vehicles today make driving on crowded, slippery roadways especially dangerous. Patrolmen have been instructed to keep a close watch on all highways in order to prevent as many accidents as possible."

The Chief cautioned motorists that the Highway Patrol would make an intensive effort to apprehend all drivers who violate traffic regulations. Special attention will be given to reckless driving and improperly lighted vehicles.



Today's grownups are only yesterday's children who once stood before a fireplace on the Christmas Eves of the past, or who, just before Christmas, were as good as they could be.

The heart of the Christmas season is friendship and eternal youth, and we could not ask for finer friends than ours. It makes us happy to greet all our friends this Christmas season of 1945 with the best of Yuletide wishes.

Jangle Nerves, Jangle Nerves—that's the way Christmas week always leaves us. No matter how you plan your advertising and, Christmas Edition you end up with jangle nerves.

Morgan Reynolds, who is visiting his parents this holiday season certainly has the bearing of a Naval Officer—which he is. In our opinion he looks exactly like a Naval Officer should look.

A nice visit from Lt. Governor Handy Ellis this week leaves us with the notion there must be an election coming up in the near future—around the first of May. However, we did enjoy the call very much and want him to know the latch-string is always on the outside to him.

About these motorists failing to stop for children to get on and off school busses. There is no earthly reason for anyone ignoring the law in this case. We have no greater possession than our children. The law says to stop while a school bus is taking on or putting off children. It matters not whether you are travelling in the same direction as the bus or whether you are going in the opposite direction. The law is the same. You are supposed to STOP. The next time you are driving and meet, or overtake, a school bus remember this.

C. E. Woodfin came in to see us this week. He had moved and wanted his address changed. Formerly we had sent his paper to Verbena Route 1. Now he wants it to come to Clanton Route 2. He says he just moved from one hill top to another but it happened to be where the routes end and thus the change in address.

The other day when the Hayes Chevrolet Company was burglarized, Dick was sick in bed with the flu. Upon learning of the burglary Dick said to his wife, "Good gracious, Bessie, give me my clothes, somebody is after my money. That's the closest thing to my heart." The incident completely cured Dick anyway. He hasn't been back to bed yet—that is, except to sleep.

Speaking of Dick Hayes reminds us of what happened to the doctor this week. That is Dr. Hayes. Somebody left the water running in their hotel room just over Dr. Hayes office and the next morning when Dr. Hayes went into his office water had spoiled a lot of his papers and books and 'stuff like that there.'

Somebody got the wrong telephone number the other afternoon. They asked, "Can you come up here right away and unstop our sink?" Well, not being accustomed to unstopping sinks we had to refer them to Gene Gore (who they thought they were talking to all the time) and he would probably oblige. We guess as a sink unstopper we are probably the worst in the land.

Just as a parting thought let us say we wish for you a merry, merry Christmas. The whole Chilton County News force wishes you a merry merry Christmas. Our wives and our 'chillan' wish you a merry, merry Christmas. Mrs. Mark L. (that's the big boss) Tucker wishes you a merry, merry Christmas. Our sincere wish is that you enjoy every minute of the holiday season. If that boy or girl who has been in service for the past several Christmases is home again then you have your Christmas and nothing we could say could possibly make it more complete. Anyway, MERRY CHRISTMAS from 'Ben' and the Force.

CHAPTER XXIII

"With you?" Margaret did not understand. "You want me to stay with you?"

"Yes, we want you to come to us today. Right now. Wouldn't you like to have me be your mother?"

"You're not my mother," Margaret answered hopelessly. "My mother is dead."

"I'm not your mother, but I'd like to be. I love you, don't you know that? And I've wanted another little girl. My daughter is so big now, she's nearly grown, and I've wished so often I had a little girl to play with. Don't you want to come with me, and let me be your mother?"

Margaret considered. She scrubbed her eyes with the back of her hand. "You mean," she asked incredulously, "you want me to come live with you?"

"Yes, that's what I mean."

"For how long?"

"For always."

"And be just like yours? Like other girls and their mothers?"

"Just like that."

"What will Mr. Herlong do?"

"He'll be your father."

Margaret began to smile a little bit. "Does he like little girls?"

"Oh yes. And he likes you especially."

"And I'll live with you—in that big house with the swimming pool?"

Elizabeth nodded.

"Will Brian let me go swimming?"

"Why of course. Whenever you please."

"Would he show me his bugs and things, do you think?"

"I'm sure he would."

Margaret smiled again, shyly but more happily this time. "That would be nice, living at your house, Mrs. Herlong."

"You needn't call me Mrs. Herlong any more, if I'm going to be your mother."

"What do I call you, then?"

"If I'm your mother, don't you want to call me that?"

But Margaret shook her head, with a frightened look. "Oh no, do I have to? My mother died, and my father died, and I called Mr. Kessler father, and he died. If I called you mother, you—" She stopped, appalled by the enormity of it.

Elizabeth did not insist. "All right, you don't have to. My name is Elizabeth, would you like to call me that?"

"Elizabeth," Margaret repeated. "It seems funny." She paused a moment to think, and asked "When do I go over to your house?"

"Right now. I'll drive you there, and I can come back to get your things. Unless you'd rather show me now where they are."

"I'll show you." Margaret scrambled down from the chair. She stood in the middle of the floor, still confused by this second re-orientation of her world. "It's funny," she said slowly. "It's all funny. Yesterday he was here, and now he's dead. And now I'm going to live with you. Can I bring the microscope?"

"You can bring anything you want." Elizabeth took her hand and they started for Margaret's room. "I'm going to like having you with me," Elizabeth assured her.

"I'll like it too," said Margaret. She stopped and looked up seriously. "Mrs. Herlong—Elizabeth," she said, "I'll be good."

"Come here with me, Margaret." Elizabeth led her back to the big chair. She sat down, and took Margaret to sit on her lap. "Darling, I told you I wanted you for my little girl. No matter what you want to call us, I'm going to be your mother and my husband is going to be your father. We're Americans, and we're going to take you into an American court and get some papers that will make you just as American as we are, and just as much our daughter as Cherry is. Then nobody can ever, ever send you back to Germany."

"You can do that?" Margaret exclaimed.

"You bet we can. Refugees can be as American as anybody else. Why Margaret, my people were refugees."

"Were they, honestly?" Margaret cried in the delight of a burden shared. "Where did they come from?"

"Oh, Scotland, France, Holland, lots of places, and one of my great-great grandmothers came from Germany, just like you. They all came here for the same reason you came here, because they weren't happy in the places where they lived and they wanted to be in a new free country where everybody could be friends."

When she brought Margaret home with her, Elizabeth gave her a little room next to Cherry's, which Cherry had been accustomed to using as a sort of private refuge where she and her schoolmates could rather to eat fudge and do their lessons together. It had a single bed which, covered with an Indian blanket and some bright pillows, had served the girls as a couch. By bringing in Margaret's possessions, and adding some little-girl furnishings Cherry had given up, Elizabeth turned it into a welcoming little bedroom.

She was glad of the occupation. It kept her from thinking of Kessler too much.

Margaret was afraid. Fear went through her whole personality and gave her foster-parents a problem for which their experience had not prepared them. Elizabeth and Spratt knew how to cope with childish faults, but their children had not known the meaning of insecurity. Margaret knew that better than she knew anything else.

Living in their home, she made very little trouble for anybody, for she was a good-tempered child and a very bright one. She picked up her playthings, studied her lessons and asked permission to do what she wanted—she was a good little girl, but she had not lived with them two weeks before Spratt and Elizabeth were saying to each other that her goodness, rather than any lack of it, gave them concern. A child who tried so hard to please everybody was not natural. But Margaret had spoken a simple truth when she said to Elizabeth that everybody who had belonged to her had died. In spite of all the reassurance Elizabeth was trying to give her, both in words and in a general attitude of affection, Margaret was still not at ease. She was happy with them, but happiness threatened her with its own loss. It was as though she felt herself in paradise on probation, and thought that by being very good she could make a pact with destiny.

Before long such excellence of behavior had won unqualified approval from Brian and Cherry. She was much easier to have around than they had expected, they said. Brian showed her his collections and Cherry let Margaret come in and look at all her clothes, for it was fun to display their treasures for a spectator who was so delighted at receiving attention and who never touched anything out of turn. But their parents found Margaret's attitude ominous.

"I don't know how to deal with it!" Elizabeth said to Spratt. "Impertinence or bad manners I could handle. But this is new to me. Our children were perfectly unacquainted with fear."

Spratt spoke through his teeth in a low angry voice. "This is what 'mental cruelty' means, not a convenient phrase to get divorced with. Margaret got out of there with a whole body, but what they did to her mind!"

"And there are millions like her," Elizabeth said savagely. "I go cold and sick thinking of them."

"Thinking of millions won't help Margaret," said Spratt, who customarily moved from the general to the particular with all possible speed. "Let her see you love her and like having her around. Don't pet her, just make her feel wanted. Don't ask her about Germany, or Kessler either. If she ever talks just let her do it, as you said Kessler did when you were prettying up her Christmas tree. She'll get it out of her eventually—it may take years, but she'll talk if she knows you want to listen."

"Make her feel wanted," Elizabeth repeated. "Yes, I believe I can do that."

The next day she said, "I have a problem, Margaret, and I need you to help me."

"Me? Help you?" Margaret came and sat down by her. "Have you got some trouble, Elizabeth?"

She was still afraid to use a title that would have suggested to fate that Elizabeth was her mother. By this time she called Spratt "boss" as the other children did, for that title had no threatening connotation for her, as "father" had, but she continued to address Elizabeth by her first name. Knowing how Margaret felt about it, Elizabeth did not suggest a change.

"Oh no, not trouble," she answered, "it's just this. I knitted Dick a pair of socks and he's crazy about them, he says they are ten times as comfortable as the ready-made socks they get in the Marines and he wants a lot more. But with taking care of the house and watching for planes at the observation post, I really haven't time to make so many. Would you make some socks for Dick if I taught you how?"

"Oh yes!" cried Margaret. Then, uncertainly, "Do you think I could learn? Could I make socks good enough for a Marine to wear?"

"Of course you can. The first one seems complicated, but after that they're easy, so easy you can learn to knit without even looking at it."

"Ah," Margaret sighed eagerly. "Would he wear them, do you think?"

"Why Margaret, if you knew how much he wanted them! Will you really make them? I'd be so grateful, and so would Dick."

"Oh yes, yes! When can I learn?"

"Right now. I have some needles and yarn in my room."

The idea of doing something important was a stimulant for Margaret's wounded soul. Elizabeth could have knitted a dozen socks with the effort it took to teach Margaret to turn a heel, but Margaret needed a place in the universe more than Dick needed socks. In her next letter to Dick, Elizabeth asked him to send a word of encouragement. Dick had no literary gifts, but he had an understanding spirit, so he scribbled back.

"Dear Margaret, I hear you are making me some socks. That's swell of you. I sure do need them. Yours as ever, Dick."

Margaret was not used to receiving letters addressed to herself. She was thrilled, and thought it enormously polite of him to have scrawled in tiny letters on the corner where civilians would have had to put a stamp, "Free. Thank you, Congress."

She spent some time studying her name as he had written it on the envelope. That night when Elizabeth came to tuck her in bed, Margaret detained her. "I've got something to ask you," she said bashfully.

"Go ahead." Elizabeth sat on the edge of the bed.

"You won't be mad with me?"

"Not a bit."

"Well, I was thinking—it would be nice—you said I was going to be American—" She hesitated.

"Indeed you are," Elizabeth encouraged her.

"—and your little girl just like I was born to you—" Margaret paused again for confirmation.

"You are my little girl."

"Well—my father—Mr. Kessler, he is dead and I belong to you now, and I thought it would seem more like I really belonged to you if—if—" She stopped again.

Elizabeth spoke gently. "If you had the same name as the rest of us?"

Margaret nodded vehemently. "How did you know? Do you mind? Can I?"

"I know because I was going to ask you what you wanted your name to be. You remember I told you we would get you some papers making you our little girl and an American. We are getting them, so you can be Margaret Herlong from this minute if you want to be."

"Can I? Oh, thank you, Elizabeth!" Margaret put her arms around Elizabeth's neck and hugged her. "Will you tell them at school I've changed my name?"

"Suppose I go to school with you in the morning, and see your teacher."

"All right. All right. Then—Elizabeth."

"Yes?"

"Then nobody can ever make me go back to Germany, can they?"

"Never, never, never. Why Margaret, we couldn't let you go back now! We'd miss you so."

The spring that year was late and chilly. Every night a fog rolled in from the sea, and for half the day it made a thick gray cloud over the sky. In the cool weather the winter flowers continued to open, but even the calla lilies were smaller than they had been, as though they knew their time should be over and they were as tired of blooming as everybody was of looking at them.

Elizabeth smiled, a happy little secret smile. You never did tell everything. Not everything. She never would tell Spratt she had rubbed out a thumb-print because she had believed it would assure her that Kessler and Arthur were the same, and she did not want to be sure. It was enough for her to know that in rubbing it out she had rubbed Arthur out of her life, and left herself and Spratt free to go forward into the future together with no shadow of yesterday between them.

Spratt called, "Do you want to come in here and listen to the news? It goes on in five minutes."

"Why yes," Elizabeth answered. "I'll be right in." From outside she heard the wind, blowing down from the mountains where there were still ridges of winter snow. "I'll be there in a minute, Spratt," she called. "But first I'd better get you an extra blanket. It's going to be a chilly night."

She brought the blanket from the hall closet. "Thanks," Spratt said when she entered. He grinned at her appreciatively. "You think of everything, don't you?"

"I like taking care of my family," said Elizabeth. She came to sit on the arm of his chair. As Spratt leaned back to look up at her she bent over impulsively and kissed him. He slipped his arm around her waist, and she rested against him while they listened to the voice of

"Let not one heart be sad today,
May every child be glad and gay,
God bless thy children, great and small,
In lowly hut or castle hall,
And may each soul keep festival
At Christmastime."

We wish all of our friends a celebrated Christmas sometimes under the greatest of difficulties, to say nothing of danger. Today, in warm, lighted homes we welcome the arrival of Yuletide, without thought of those early hardships. It might make our Christmas a little happier, our hearts a little more thankful, to take thought of these things.

In the reverent spirit of this glorious season we now wish each and every one of you the deep joys which only Christmas can bring.

Clanton Girl Missing Since November

Hundred Dollar Reward Posted For Information

Miss Thelma Tisdale, a 13-year old girl of the Cotton Mill Village, Clanton, has been missing since November 30th.

It is believed that the last time anyone saw the girl it was on the morning of November 30 in the bus station in Montgomery. It is reported the Tisdale girl had been to Montgomery on a party and became missing while there. No word has been received from her nor has any information been given as to her whereabouts since that time, according to Sheriff Nivens and the Alabama Highway Patrol.

Sheriff Nivens stated that his office is now holding a hundred dollar reward for anyone giving information leading to her whereabouts.

Highway Patrolman Kitchens, in Montgomery, is making a state-wide search for the girl. Announcements have also been made over the radio in an effort to locate Miss Tisdale.

REA HAS REDUCED RATES FROM $1.95 TO $1.00

Mr. W. C. Wingard, manager of the Central Alabama Electric Cooperative in Prattville, announces that during the month of September this year 644 members used less than 20 kwh. The Board of Trustees has therefore deemed it advisable to reduce the minimum rate from $1.95 to $1.00.

Wingard wishes for everyone served through the REA to notify him immediately if they see anything that would in any way damage a line, that is, such things as trees, damaged wires, etc. He says that a dollar can be saved by this and in the long run will save the consumers money.

J. P. Thomas, Age 80, Passes

James Payton Thomas, age 80, died at his home near the old County Farm on Monday, December 24th.

Funeral services were held at Cedar Grove, conducted by Rev. T. R. Greenwood.

Pallbearers were: Wallace Watkins, E. A. Shirley, Carl Muncher, Calvin Todd, Walter Robinson and Roy Helton.

He is survived by three daughters—Miss Louise and Pearl Thomas and Mrs. Nettie Dennis, all of Clanton; two sons, Lee A. and B. Cleve of Clanton; 14 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren; four half-brothers—Mose of Cooper, Henry of Selma, Oscar of Birmingham and Robert of Pickens County; two half-sisters—Mrs. Nancy Yates Varden, Verbena Route 2 and Mrs. Jadie Hollingsworth of Birmingham.

CHRISTMAS WAS BIG EVENT FOR MRS DEASON

This Christmas was indeed a happy one for Mrs. Charity Deason of Clanton. Mrs. Deason, Alabama's No. 1 World War II mother, had four of her eigth sons home for the holidays.

Van, Leo, Coy and Harold Deason all were home for the holidays with their mother making the first time since the war started that more than one of her sons were home at Christmas time.

Dan and Frank Deason are still overseas in the Pacific. James is in New Orleans. One son, Warren was killed in the Pacific.

Complete Farm Plans Made On County Farms

Complete farm plans have been made on the farms of B. E. Wilkins, J. L. Messer, J. Douglas Robinson, C. C. Rasberry and Charles L. Apperson. These plans included complete water disposal systems, crop rotations, permanent hay, pasture, temporary summer and winter grazing and woodland management.

Sericea and kudzu were worked into these plans to be used for erosion control, temporary grazing, and hay. Mr. Messer is going to use three acres of kudzu for temporary summer grazing for hogs. He is planning to keep about three brood sows, and the kudzu will furnish the needed temporary grazing.

All of the above plans included plans for proper management of woodland Fires will be kept out of the woodland, and a system of selective cutting will be used. Rough and undesirable trees will be used for fuel and fence posts, while the more desirable trees will be left for lumber until they reach merchantable size.

Mr. A. V. Bice of New Cedron Community has been employed by the Soil Conservation Service to assist the cooperators of the North Central Soil Conservation District in establishing practices that are included in their farm plans. Mr. Bice will work in his community and some of the near by communities.

ISABELLA BOY ASSIGNED TO NAVY V-5 UNIT

Lewisburg, Pa. — Apprentice Seaman Jesse A. Culp, of Clanton, Ala., has been assigned to the Navy V-5 Unit at Bucknell University, Lt. O. E. Dunckel, commanding officer, announced recently.

Three hundred and fifty-one trainees are studying at Bucknell this term under the Navy college training program, established at the University in July, 1943. The trainees stationed with the unit are for the most part aviation candidates.

Culp, who is a graduate of Isabella High School, entered the service in October, 1944. He had been stationed with the Navy unit at Berea College, Ky., prior to his transfer to Bucknell. As a civilian, Culp attended Alabama Polytechnic Institute for one term.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Culp, Clanton Route 3.

HOME OF LLOYD POPWELL DESTROYED BY FIRE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Popwell, located near Thomas Junior School, was completely destroyed by fire on Wednesday afternoon, December 19th, about four o'clock.

The origin of the fire is unknown Mrs. Popwell had just left the home for town to pick up some groceries when the alarm went in.

Rifle Bullet Ends Life Of Lady

Charlie Mims is being held in the Chilton County jail after the fatal shooting of his wife early Sunday morning, December 23rd, with a .22 automatic rifle at their home four miles south of Clanton.

Sheriff Nivens' office issued a warrant for Mims charging him with first-degree murder. Mims was arrested about an hour after the shooting that proved fatal.

According to Sheriff Nivens who made the arrest, the couple had been quarreling. Mrs. Mims got into their car, a Ford Coupe, and started to drive off. When she did Mims fired at her five times, one bullet striking her on the left side near the heart. She drove the car into a ditch then got out and walked 190 feet before falling dead in the road. Her body was found there an hour later by the sheriff.

When arrested by Sheriff Nivens, Mims admitted firing the shots. It is said he had been drinking. A preliminary hearing for Mims will be held before Inferior Court Judge V. J. Heard in the near future.

Undertaker Leroy Martin went with Sheriff Nivens to the Mims home.

Mrs. Mims is survived by her husband, Charlie Mims; two daughters, Mrs. James C. Martin of Clanton, and Mrs. Henry Blackwell, Jr., of Montgomery; two grandchildren; her father, Mr. Newt A. Vinson, of Clanton; and one brother, Julian C. Vinson, of Montgomery.

Funeral services were held for the deceased at Maple Springs Church Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock with the Rev. Cecil Little officiating.

Pallbearers were: John Sorrell, John Cagle, John Driver, Bernie Price, Herman Patterson and Billy Frank Speer.

NO TRAFFIC FATALITIES IN COUNTY OVER HOLIDAYS

There were no traffic fatalities in Chilton County during the Christmas holidays just passed which speaks well for the automobile drivers of the County.

Over the state there was one death, that of Carl Joiner of Ashford, who was killed near Atmore when his automobile hit a bus head-on.

Over the nation there were 350 who met violent deaths. The heaviest single toll was that of a hospital fire in Hartford, Conn., where 17 persons perished. In traffic accidents California led the nation with 35 deaths, followed by New York with 21.

Mrs. W. K. Owen and daughter, Earline, from Pulaski, Tenn., visited Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Williams and other relatives here during the holidays. Mrs. Williams also had as her holiday guests her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Samuel, of Wilsonville, Ala.

County Celebrates First Peacetime Christmas Since 1940

By CLARK HEADLEY

Cold, rain, muck . . . people going places and people coming . . . people busy buying, buying, buying . . . celebrations with loved ones home . . . Christmas programs . . . That was Christmas, 1945—Chilton County's first peace-time Christmas since Christmas 1940.

For days before Christmas the citizenry of Chilton County went on a buying spree that seemed unprecedented in the county's history. Stores with scanty shelves were crowded to capacity. Streets were jammed and merchants pulled their hair as the throngs of Christmas shoppers entered, viewed their wares and passed on. The streets of Clanton were crammed. It was a major task to move along the streets. One merchant declared: "I've spent a lot of Christmas seasons in Clanton. This is the maddest of them all." Christmas presents that many wanted couldn't be found. Substitutes had to be found. Suites, white shirts, electrical appliances and many of the traditionary Yuletide gifts were missing.

It was a rainy, muddy, nasty Christ-Especially so Christmas Eve when it rained for hours. Roads got almost untraveled. Automobiles were dug out of the mud and muck. Christmas travelling was heavy and treacherous on the highways. Busses were filled above capacity and lines formed at the bus stations as people nervously waited for transportation. Taxis were continuously on the move and couldn't begin to accommodate the traffic. One taxi owner declared, "I've got one taxi. If I had ten tonight I could easily keep them all busy."

Many, many of the soldiers, sailors and marines who were overseas last Christmas beating the enemy to his knees celebrated this Christmas home—in good old Chilton County. They celebrated it with big Christmas dinners of chicken, turkey, fresh pork, cakes . . . delicacies that a year ago they would have given anything for and delicacies that then was only a dream. Many veterans just squeezed in in time for Christmas. Many didn't get here. Some lay in the clogged ports of the U. S. while many more were on their way as their wives, mothers and loved ones anxiously and nervously awaited their return with their Christmas all prepared.

Althought the citizens of Chilton County went all out for Christmas in the good old American way they didn't forget. They didn't forget those who so gallantly gave their lives that we at home might celebrate this Christmas in the American way. They didn't forget the atomic bomb, Hitler, the slant-eyed Japs, the atrocities of the enemy and the horrors of war. They proved this by going overboard in the last bond drive and they proved it by saying so.

The churches throughout the county presented inspiring Christmas programs as Chilton celebrated it's first peace-time Christmas. At the Baptist and Methodist churches in Clanton inspiring Christmas programs were presented. Also at Thorsby, the town went all-out. At Pinedale, Mt. Pisgah and surrounding churches in the rural sections Christmas programs were in the offering.

That was Christmas, 1945, in Chilton County.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE COLLECTS $9,915,556

Montgomery, Ala. — In the first two months of the current fiscal year, October and November, the State Department of Revenue has collected and turned over to the State Treasurer $9,915,556, or $1,162,537 more than for the same period of 1944-45. Tax experts declared that they are astonished and attribute the continued rise partly to better collection methods and partly to a rather wild public spending of war-time savings.

Sales and gasoline taxes show the biggest jump. Several smaller levies such as severance taxes on coal and iron have decreased with the slowing-down in war construction. License and business taxation show slightly increased returns, as new establishments open for postwar trade.

TERMS OF GUARANTEED FARM LOANS EXPLAINED

Discussing conditions and terms of loans to World War II veterans under provisions No. 6 of the G. I. Bill of Rights, J. H. Yates, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bibb-Chilton National Farm Loan Associations explains that mortgages will be required on all guaranteed loans over $500. Smaller loans may be guaranteed if they meet all other requirements of the act even though the lender does not require a mortgage.

Loans for purchasing a farm or constructing a residence thereon shall be secured by a first lien on the property except as provided in section 505 of the Act. This section permits the guaranty of loans secured by second mortgages where the first mortgage is held, guaranteed or insured by a Federal agency.

The loan must meet certain other conditions in order to qualify for a guaranty. Among these are:

(1) The interest rate may not exceed 4 percent on unpaid principal balances and on any advances made by the lender to the borrower's account for taxes, assessments, premiums, or emergency repairs needed to protect the property.

(2) Charges in line with local custom which have been paid or incurred by the lender, such as appraisals, surveys, abstracts, attorney's and recording fees, insurance premiums, revenue stamp, etc., bay be withheld from the gross amount of the loan.

(3) The loan may all come due at one time if: (a) the maturity date is not more than 5 years from the date of the note; and, (b) the amount of the loan plus all prior debts secured by the property is not more than two-thirds its "reasonable normal value."

(4) All other loans must be amortized. On real property the lender may agree with the borrower not to require principal payments for three years or less. From then on, payments must be large enough to repay the debt in not more than 20 years from date of the loan.

(5) With the consent of the borrowers, the payments may include sums to cover taxes, special assessments and insurance premiums.

(6) On mortized loans the note or mortgage must contain a provision granting any person liable for the debt the right to pay at any time any amount on the debt with no premium charged for the payment. Term loans must provide the same right of prepayment subject to 30 days' notice.

(7) Buildings must ordinarily be insured against fire and other hazards in accordance with usual community practices.

That popular winter vegetable—the collard—has twice as much Vitamin C as oranges, according to chemists and nutrionists. It also contains important riboflavin and carotene. Nutritionists say, however, that the fresher the collard, the greater its vitamin content. Collards should be cooked quickly and not too long.

Observe Holiday In Many Ways

The name January is derived from the two-faced god, Janus. He was originally the god of light and day, however, he gradually became the god of the beginning of things.

The beginning of the year was sacred to Janus and a festival in his honor called Agonia was celebrated. At the beginning of any important undertaking his aid and advice was sought.

He was worshipped as the guardian of trade and shipping and he was the inventor of agriculture.

In addition to secular celebrations, many religious denominations hold special services on New Year's Eve from 9 or 10 to 12 o'clock.

tom and they are called "watch-night services."

In 1944, St. George's Methodist Episcopal church in Philadelphia held its 175th watch night service. The church was founded in 1769 and in 1770 held what has been called the first such services in America. Many other churches are holding such services today.

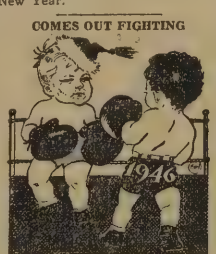
January 1 is a legal holiday in all of the states and the District of Columbia. It was not until after 1918, however, that the date became a legal holiday in Massachusetts.

With the exception of war time, the date is a legal reason for liberty for the sailor and soldier. Yes, army and navy regulations specifically state this fact.

To quote from the navy regulations: "The first of January—and such other days as may be designated by the President, including the day of national thanksgiving, shall be designated as holidays on board ships of the navy and all naval stations.

New Year's Mummers Parade Big Event

The Mummers' Parade on New Year's Eve is to Philadelphia what the Tournament of Roses is to Pasadena—only the Mummers have a priority on tradition.



The earliest settlers in the vicinity of present-day Philadelphia were English and Swedes. The English cherished the traditional Mummer play "St. George and the Dragon," while the Swedes were fond of masquerading informally on New Year's Eve. The two customs had merged long before the Revolution and it was customary—even among the Quakers—to extend hospitality to the masqueraders or give them a dole for refreshments.

After the Revolution, George Washington replaced St. George as the central figure of the festivities which continued along the path of spontaneity until 1886 when the parade was sponsored by the Silver Crown New Year's association.

The Municipal administration officially recognized the parade in 1901, and representative citizenry began turning out to watch and participate in the festivities.

The number of organizations sponsoring the parade, the divisions and elaborateness thereof increased through the years. On New Year's Eve in 1930, 12,000 participated in the line of march down Bond street and 300,000 spectators watched the parade which lasted from early evening through the wee hours of the New Year.

New Year's Compliments

Danish families save their broken crockery — to toss against their friends' doors on New Year's Eve. The crockery tossed, the tossers run; but not too far; they expect to be invited in for doughnuts.

The most popular household in the community is so designated on New Year's morning by the debris around the doorstep.

CLANTON WAVE DISCHARGED FROM U. S. NAVY

Elizabeth Lawrence Wenzel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lawrence, has been discharged from the Navy through the U. S. Naval Separation Center, Washington, D.C.

Elizabeth, who was recently married to Charles Frederick Wenzel, served eleven months as a WAVE. She was a Storekeeper Third Class and her last duty was in Miami, Fla.

Farmers relying on poultry to be a definite source of cash income should have at least 100 hens, or a flock increased in multiples of one hundred. But if the flock is to be merely a source of meat and eggs for the family, the farmer should not have over 15 to 25 hens.

CONSERVING AMERICAN SOIL

Conserving America's farm soil is a big challenge these days, because depleted farm lands are less poductive and the crops have less nutritive value. The first step in combating soil depletion is restoring soil fertility by spreading solid and fluid manure on the fields by means of the fluid manure spreader. The importance of this process was recognized at International Harvester Company's field demonstration of postwar machines at Hinsdale, Illinois, recently. In this picture the McCormick-Deering fluid manure spreader is being drawn by the Farmall-M tractor.

FROM the joy and happiness of the Yule season we gain strength and fortitude to meet the problems of tomorrow. Our hope for you is that the New Year will bring no problems you cannot readily solve, and that all will be smooth sailing.

Change Made in Celebrating Day

New Year's became a holiday long after the American custom of New Year's calls, which justify its observance, had gone the way of the hoop skirt and the polka. There is nothing American about the carnival-like merrymaking which nowadays welcomes the New Year. Or can it be that even this is a metamorphosis of the watchnight meeting of 40 years or more ago? To deacons and elders, to all anxious heads of families, it used to seem fitting to spend the last three hours of the year in singing lugubrious hymns and giving thanks that they had been singled out for preservation when so many had been removed by an equally discerning providence.

But to the young the watchnight meeting was always a dreary service, only to be endured in view of the joys of the morrow. And when the life and color were taken out of the observance of New Year's itself there seemed little sense in ushering in a day of gloom with a still gloomier New Year's eve. So they left the watchmeeting to those who found no more pleasure in their days and for themselves introduced the practice now generally prevalent of indulging in a last fling in preparation for the morrow's disagreeable business of turning over a new leaf.

They have revived the old pagan ceremony except that no miniature skeletons are passed around at the feast to remind them that they are mortal. Nothing in this modern New Year's eve abandon, however, commends it as a substitute for the old gracious custom of paying and receiving calls, a custom for which desuetude was hastened by the prodigious growth of the large cities in the 25 years following the Civil war.

A 'SHORT-SHORT' NEW YEAR'S STORY

"Gee, it's funny how that habit which the folks instill in us during childhood helps when stranded in a big city of strangers where I know no one in particular," Netta Carson reflected as she mused over the evening newspaper.

That habit which had become so much to the Carson family was to do—or resolve to do—a good deed for someone during New Year's day.

In recalling her life at home she came on an idea and then jumped to the practical application. Netta Carson sat down at her desk and took a fountain pen in hand. She wrote to the owner of the office building in which she worked. Her purpose was to tell him about the wonderful service Jed, the diminutive elevator boy, was giving, though none of the other building tenants took the time to appreciate it. It was almost a month later when Jed stopped and thanked her and informed her that he had received a two dollar raise on the strength of her praise and appreciation of him.

New Year—New World

Another letter written to the chief of police, which praised the officer on the beat near where her rooming house was located, she discovered, was responsible for the officer receiving a promotion.

A note to the head of the department store where she bought her stockings and other fineries of life, praising the timid little sales girl at the glove counter resulted in the girl being moved to a better counter—not to mention a raise in pay.

During the course of that New Year's day she wrote and mailed about two dozen such thank-you letters to firms, officers and other employers. Thanking them for folks that other folks appreciate, too, but never seem to find time to thank.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens, affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Where they are and How they are

Six Clanton, Ala., veterans left Saipan November 30, headed for home aboard the USS CELENO with more than 1,000 other high-point Army veterans. The ship was scheduled to arrive in San Pedro about December 21.

The CELENO is one of more than 250 carriers, battleships, cruisers and attack transports in the Navy's "Magic Carpet" fleet, which is carrying Pacific veterans home.

Passengers on the CELENO were to go directly to separation centers nearest their homes to obtain discharges.

The Clanton veterans are: T-5 John W. Owens; T-5 Harvey R. Mims; Cpl. Eddie C. Henley; T-5 James D Darby; Pfc. James O. Meates and Pfc. R. C. Hensel.

William H. Cherry, Jemison Route 1, husband of Glacie Cherry, has been honorably discharged from the army after 35 months service. Cherry served 22 months overseas where he was a switchboard operator and linesman with the 480th AAA, AW Bn. He has two battle stars, the American Theatre and Victory awards.

Friends of Cpl. William K. Jones will be pleased to learn that he is being discharged from the army. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Jones of Route 5, Clanton, and the husband of Mabel E. Jones also of Clanton. Jones served with the U. S. Army Engineers and entered the army in February, 1942.

Cpl. Leonard Bryant, son of Mrs. Mary Bryant of Mt. Creek is on his way home. Bryant is coming home on the USS Windsor.

Pfc. Ray B. Watson, son of Mr. Earl A. aWtson, of Lawley, is coming home aboard the USS Windsor.

Word has been received that Cecil P. Ellison, husband of Mrs. Florine W. Ellison of Clanton, is on his way home. Cecil, formerly a mechanic in Clanton and member of the voluntary fire department, is aboard the USS Drake.

Word has been received that Hollis Earl Calfee MM second class, husband of Jessie Mae of Clanton, has been discharged from the U. S. Navy. Calfee served 18 months with the Navy and spent sixteen months in the Pacific. He was in three invasions. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Calfee, of Clanton Route 3.

A nice Xmas. present for Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Staggs, of Route 1 came to them Xmas. morning at about five o'clock — their son, Frank, who has been in the U. S. Army and serving in the South Pacific for the past three years, was discharged and sent home.

Ottis Ellison, husband of Lurnill Ellison of Route 5, Clanton, has been discharged from the army after serving 36 months. Ottis was in the ETO where he was awarded four Bronze Stars. He served with the 258 FA Bn. as a truck driver.

NEW YEAR GREETINGS 1946

It is our earnest hope that its arrival will mean for you much that was unexpected in both material and spiritual blessings.

WE'VE SEEN a great many changes in our day . . . changes in styles, changes in customs, and changes in transportation. But one thing has remained unchanged during all these years—our determination to lead the way at all times in value-giving. We enter 1946 fully pledged to stand by our time-honored custom.

Happy New Year, friends!

In this land of free men the merry tumult of new Year's is a traditional part of our national life. It does us all good to give the New Year a rousing welcome.

More power to New Year's and the principles of freedom upon which it rests. And more power to you, dear friends, every day of 1946! It has been a pleasure and a privilege to have served you, and we stand pledged to serve you still better in the year to come.

Dear Joe . . .

(By CLARK HEADLEY)

All you GIs and sailors who have always had a yearning to tell the brass where to get off—and who hasn't—just listen to the field day a Cleveland Private had recently giving the brass a verbal tongue lashing.

Pvt. George L. Marks, of Cleveland, was called before the Pearl Harbor inquiry to testify. Assured by the House Military affairs committee that no displicinary actions could be taken against him Pvt. Marks started telling the board off about the brass hats who run the army. In the group sat squirming Maj. Generals and Colonels. He called them "Pentagon Boy Scouts," "bemandaled flour-flushers" and "aristocratic phonies." He ended his lambasting by declaring, "they want a large army to retain their ranks. These brass hats don't like work. If they did they wouldn't be in the army." A Major General declared, "we are not going to waste any time getting this man out of the army". Pvt. Marks was honorably discharged from the army the next day.

Brother, it has been cold in Clanton the past week. The old theromcters pushed the bottom all week. One night the mercury went down to the middle teens which you will agree is getting plenty cold for old Clanton down deep in the Sunny South. Old Lizzies came to town with their radiators smoking like a loaded freight. Radiators popped going and coming while the mechanics of town, as usual, were crowded to death. Road froze over and the ground spewed Water pipes busted and the plumbers had a job keeping out of work. Scantie-clothed Clanton really had a shivering cold time last week.

The talk of the town for the past couple of weeks has been that of a Clanton girl who is missing. She is Thelma Tisdale, 13 years old, who is supposed to have went to Montgomery and didn't come back. She was last seen in the Bus Station in Montgomery at 4 a.m. on the night of November 30th. The state has out a hundred dollar reward for any information leading to her whereabouts.

IS YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY ACCOUNT CORRECT?

(By M. C. Folmar, Manager Birmingham Field Office).

This is important for you to know. How much you will receive in benefits under the OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS INSURANCE program wil depend on the amount of wages credited to your social security account.

Here's how you can check your account. Ask your local Social Security field office for the postal-card form already prepared for this purpose. Fill it out, put on a one-cent stamp and drop it in the nearest mail box.

If you prefer, you can write your own letter to the Social Security Board, Candler Building, Baltimore Maryland, asking for a statement of your wage record under old-age and survivors insurance. Be sure to include your social security account number and your signature for purposes of identification.

Check the wage statement you receive from the Social Security Board with the record which your employer has given you in your pay envelope. He is required by law to furnish you with a statement of the wages he paid you and the social security taxes he withheld. He must do this at least once a year (most employers do it every payday) and also when you stop working for him.

If you should find a mistake in your social security account, be sure and visit your Social Security Board Field Office located at 1825-1st Avenue N., Chamber of Commerce Building (Ground Floor), Birmingham, Ala.

MAJOR ESSENTIALS OF SOUND FARM PROGRAM

Three major essentials in a sound and profitable farm program are outlined by P. O. Davis, API extension director, as follows:

(1) A production program based upon efficient use of labor, land, livestock, and equipment throughout the year. Such a program requires diversification of crops with livestock and poultry in adequate numbers and produced primarily on home-grown feed.

(2) A fair price for all farm products sold. Realizing that the term "fair price" is indefinite I'd base it upon parity because parity is the only explicit basis now available as a farm price structure.

(3) Utilization of this production and income for the best possible living of farm people.

There are three major production aims of the individual farmer. They are (1) Production for farm needs of people, of livestock, and of soil; (2) Production for sale in the U. S. markets; (3) production for sale abroad.

Each farmer should aspire to produce at a low cost per unit produced sell what he sells at prices in keeping with the American standard of living, and buy at prices in line with his selling prices.

You can talk to one man. Want Ads talk to thousands.

My Daily Prayer

Author Unknown

"This coming year I'd like to be a friend to everyone;
I'd like to feel each day well spent at setting of the sun;
I'd like to know that I have done at least one kindly deed.
Before I lay me down to sleep that I have given heed—
To some one's cry for sympathy, or friendship or that I
Have made the day seem brighter to some chance passer-by,
And that the world is better still in just some little way,
Because I've tried to live the very best I could each day.

"I'd like to be a ray of light when skies are overcast,
I'd like to help some one who failed to blot out all the past,
To start again despite the storms, and find the skies are blue.
To know that in this good old world there's lots that's fine and true.
I'd like to be the kind of person everyone will love,
And make the world seem just a little more like heaven above;
I'd like in all my dealings to be true and just and fair,
That God will help me do these things shall be my daily prayer."

Superstitions Told About New Year's In Many Lands

Good Luck Offered in Many Ways to 'Believers.'

New Year's Day affords everyone the opportunity to bring himself good luck throughout the year. At least that is supposed to be true according to several old superstitions concerning the beginning of a new year.

The "First Foot"—the first person to enter the house on New Year's morning — plays a significant role in the family's future fortunes. He must be a dark man to bring good luck, but if he also brings a gift and "carries in" more than he "takes out," then the house is assured peace and plenty for a whole year. The most auspicious gifts as luck-bringers are a lump of coal and a red herring.

Unmarried persons are advised to look out of the window on New Year's morning. If you see a man, it is a sign that you will be wed before the year is out. Should you see a horse, you can have a wish, and it will be realized within the year. To see a dog is lucky, but a cat foretells worry.

A little care will make it possible to bring oneself good luck for the entire year. Wear something new, if possible, on New Year's Day, but the garment must be put on when you first dress in the morning. Receipt of a gift is certain to carry luck. Wish everyone you meet "A Happy New Year," but remember when the greeting is given to cross your fingers for luck. Be sure to say "rabbits" as the first word when you wake before anyone has had a chance to speak to you.

Love's progress will be aided on New Year's Day if you are careful to put on the left stocking before the right. The potency of this charm is supposed to be increased if you do all things as far as possible left-handedly during the day.

To open a bank account on New Year's Day was considered lucky in Old England, the custom growing probably from the belief of many centuries that whatever you do on the first day of the year will be an indication of what will happen during the months that will follow.

In some parts of England and Scotland it is supposed to be unlucky to leave a house until some outsider has first entered it.

New Year's Blessings an Ancient Swiss Legend

According to Swiss legend, the Holy Family is abroad during the hour of midnight mass on Christmas Eve.

Therefore, a bowl of fresh milk is placed upon the dining table and each member of the household carefully lays his spoon upon the table cloth.

The person who, returning from church, finds his spoon has been moved may anticipate special blessings during the coming year: for surely Mary and Joseph have rested within the abode during their Flight into Egypt and the Virgin used that spoon to feed the Infant Jesus.

Miracle Plays Still Held

Among more tradition - observing communities of the world, old-time miracle plays are still performed, often in the form of elaborate dances, in solemn, but lavish, settings against the colorful background of tropical foliage.

Prices for Southern Pine produced by mills generally are being increased 4.7 percent or an average of $1.25 per 1,000 board feet, he pointed out. For small mills that produce rough lumber $5 per 1,000 board feet is authorized.

Now that dark weather is here, your house probably looks dim and gloomy A little extra polishing of light centers—lamp bulbs and shades, mirrors and windows will prove worthwhile.

FOOD INDUSTRY MUST MAINTAIN IT'S WAR PACE IN 1946

The food industry must maintain its war-accelerated pace in 1946 in order to meet increased domestic demands and fill its export obligations.

With adequate production of most foods indicated for the new year, industry-wide teamwork is needed to improve the quality and freshness of agricultural products and to reduce to a minimum the waste and spoilage involved in moving these products from farm to kitchen.

A hopeful development in recent years, has been the cooperation of farmers, government and state college experts and leading farm organizations with progressive distributors and retailers in working for these objectives. It will be helpful in the new year if the cooperating agencies can concentrate their talents and facilities on the following objectives:

1. Producing the quality, quantities and varieties suited to national and local requirements;

2. Providing better marketing coordination to avoid surpluses and waste in some areas when markets are available elsewhere;

3. Improving and standardizing grade and pack, shipping containers and consumer packages;

4. Developing better transportation methods, and routing produce more directly from field to store;

5. Improving retail merchandising through better display, less handling and more informative advertising and selling.

SOY BEANS AND FLAX

Iowa's big contribution to national funds guaranteeing Victory Bonds will be enhanced in future years through its expanding production of soy beans and flax. It produced 39,312,000 bushels of soy beans and 2,820,000 bushels of flax seed in 1943 to aid the war. With increased demand for both products, farmers will be encouraged to expand their production. Iowa is first in output of red clover and timothy seed.

The high yield of 321 pounds was made possible only by following the recommendations of the one-variety plan of production, namely: Use of adopted varieties, high rate of fertilization per acre, carefully handling and picking. "The future of cotton in Alabama is a challenge to our leaders of agriculture," concludes Mr. Belue.

Ninety-seven per cent of all organized troop movements within the United States, and more than ninety per cent of all war freight has been made by rail.

When wondering whether or not to invest in more Victory Bonds, think of PFC Albert H. Rohrmann, 25, Brooklyn, N. Y., a parachute infantryman, who must be under medical care for a long while. Wounded first in New Guinea and then when caught in ambush advancing on Manila, he is in a body cast at Holloran Hospital, N. Y., for a bone injury and shock to his nervous system. Bond purchases will help many more like him in hospitals all over the nation, help them to re-establish themselves in both the social and economic American way of life. U. S. Treasury Department he spent most of a Saturday going to town and back in a buggy. We can pretty nearly span the continent in that time now.

The horse and buggy are gone; the rail fence is gone, but human nature is still much the same. In these days, as in those, friendships count in business.

We are proud of our long list of friends on this New Year of 1946—a list that has been growing steadily with the years—and want to express this word of thanks as we send you our New Year greetings.

FARMING OPERATIONS ON STATE PRISON FARMS

Montgomery, Ala. — Evidence of the wide scope of farming operations at State prison farms is furnished by figures on 1945 production released by Director E. P. Russell of the Department of Corrections and Institutions. The figures show also the growing importance of Atmore prison farm, in Escambia county, in the State prison system.

Total 1945 cotton production was 692 bales, of which 501 bales were produced at Atmore, on 500 acres of land; 107 bales at Draper Prison, and 84 bales at Kilby. Corn harvest has not been completed, but is expected to total around 60,000 bushels, 40,000 of this from Atmore prison, which will also produce about 50,000 gallons of syrup, out of a total prison yield of 58,000 gallons. The Irish potato crop yielded 56,460 one-hundred pound sacks, 30,948 of these from Atmore and 14,382 bushels of sweet potatoes, of which Atmore produced 11,159 bushels. A total of 36,549 bushels of oats were produced, 7,354 from Atmore, 7885, Draper Prison, 9,000 bushels from Kilby Prison, 12,000 bushels at the cattle ranch in Hale County, and 310 bushels at Julia Tutwiler Prison for Women, near Wetumpka.

Other yields included 67,340 pounds of dry field peas, with Draper Prison in the lead on this crop; 3,840 pounds of lima beans; 916 tons of hay; more than a million pounds of fresh vegetables; 238 crates of strawberries, of which 191 were produced at Julia Tutwiler and 47 at Atmore; 6,343 bushels of peaches, all produced at Atmore and 10,883 pounds of pecans, all from Kilby.

Hundreds of acres at State prisons are green this winter, through planting of oats and winter legumes. A total of 1,783 acres have been planted to oats, and 975 acres to Austrian peas and vetch, with an additional 75 acres in oats at Kilby for hog grazing, and 100 acres in Caley peas at the same priso nfor winter pasture.

Homemade modeling clay for the young would-be artist can be made as follows: One cup of flour, one half cup of salt, three teaspoons of alum, and vegetable coloring. Mix the flour salt and alum with enough water to hold them together. Knead until you have the consistency of clay, then divide into small batches and add the gegetable coloring. Mold each separate color into an oblong block, wrap in oiled paper or cellophane, and pack neatly in a box. You'll find you have a very attractive Christmas package.

Continuance Of Parity Urged For Ala. Farmers

P. O. Davis, extension director, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, advises American farmers to "support with courage and vigor" the present parity price policy "unless and until a better price is presented, which is not now anticipated."

Speaking to over 300 state and county extension service workers attending their annual meeting in Auburn Director Davis declared that "if parity were destroyed our farm price structure would soon collapse."

Relative to price supports for industry, labor and agriculture, Director Davis summarized the present situation as follows:

For more than a century American industry has controlled prices by the equivalent of an organization combined with production control and supported by tariff laws.

For half a century organized labor fought for a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours. Both of these came in the Wages Hour Act. Other federal laws, with the help of this gave collective bargaining legal status and power.

I am certain that neither industry nor labor will give up its price supports and protection. I am equally certain that farmers should hold fast to what they have, with such improvements as can be made from time to time. This parity policy, as I see it, has three major objectives. They are: (1) Greater economic stability, (2) Growth of the total real income of the U. S., and (3) A rising standard of living for all groups, especially at the bottom.

I know that the condition of agriculture has been better with the parity policy than it was before. So, it has caused progress. In the future it should contribute to further progress and more improvement. It is clear, therefore, that we should support it.

The advance enrollment for 1946 of the Indiana Department of The American Legion on December 3, 1945 was 60,114, an all-time high; of which 26,729, or 44 percent, represented World War II membership.

Plans are being formulated for the organization of an American Legion Symphony Orchestra in Illinois, according to Department Commander Omar J. McMackin, who has directed a canvass of the entire state for both World War I and II Legion musicians.

ALABAMA GREW ANOTHER EXCELLENT COTTON CROP

Alabama's cotton crop this year is estimated at 935,000 bales with a lint yield per acre of 321 pounds, 18 pounds less than the record yield of 1944 but is 85 pounds per acre above the 10-year average 1934-1943.

The acreage of cotton for 1945 was estimated at 1,406,000. This acreage is 1.6 per cent below the acreage planted in 1944, but 32.4 per cent below the 10-year average 1934-43.

The percent of the crop that graded middling and above was 54 per cent while that of Georgia was only 24 per cent.

Staple length running 15-16 and longer was 97.8 per cent, compared to 2.5 per cent in 1929. Alabama is producing a higher percentage of cotton ranging in staple length from 15-16 to 1-1-32 inches than any other state. This is the staple length that is in greatest demand by the mills.

Farmers who continue to produce cotton in the post war period must produce a high yield per acre of quality cotton, says J. T. Belue, API extension cotton specialist. "This is the only means to compete with foreign countries, and synthetic fibers," he says.

Two-hundred fifty-two one-variety communities cooperated in the cotton improvement program during the year The high yield of 321 pounds was made possible only by following the recommendations of the one-variety plan of production, namely: Use of adopted varieties, high rate of fertilization per acre, carefully handling and picking. "The future of cotton in Alabama is a challenge to our leaders of agriculture," concludes Mr Belue.

Ninety-seven per cent of all organized troop movements within the United States, and more than ninety per cent of all war freight has been made by rail.

COUNTY WELFARE DEPARTMENTS ADD 2,524 MORE FAMILIES

Montgomery, Ala. — During October and November, 2,524 families were added to public assistance rolls by county departments of public welfare, and assistance discontinued to 1,343 families during the same period, according to figures released by Miss Loula Dunn, State Commissioner of Public Welfare. The total number of families receiving aid at end of November was 43,951, of which 33,818 were families of the aged, 782 blind 5,579 families of dependent children in their own homes, 278 children in foster care, 3,356 handicapped and 138 families facing temporary emergencies. Payments for the month averaged $16.74 per family. Miss Dunn pointed out that funds are inadequate to grant assistance to all applicants. At the end of November, 2,478 families described as "in critical need and eligible for aid" could receive no help because of insufficent funds.

QUALITY PRINTING SERVICE

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Thank goodness, the world is free and we can still do as our wife tells us.

Melba Studdard is cute. Last Saturday she worked at the Johnson Fashion Shop. It happened that when Melba got off from work and got home the hot water faucet was broken in the bath room. It also happened that supper was a little late, what with Christmas shopping and 'fixin' to do. Melba had a date and like all others of her age, that was the thing of prime importance at the time. Melba walked into the kitchen where her mother and father were—threw her money on the table, and stated: "Here I have been working all day to make money and feed the family and take care of expenses and come home and there is no hot water, no supper, no nothing." Incidentally it was the first day in her life that she had ever worked.

Tragedy entered the home of Elaine Mims Martin this week end. We know that Elaine thinks that she is having more than her share of trouble—and we think that she is too. She certainly doesn't deserve so much. But knowing that the Almighty "works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform," who can say whether or not we humans have more than our share of trouble on this earth. Our deepest sympathy goes out to she and her family in this hour of sorrow and trouble.

Jack Jones, our ex-service man in the back-shop, was about thirty minutes late to work the other morning. When asked the why of it, Jack answered, "Well, can I help it if the alarm clock that I haven't got failed to go off this morning?"

We had a wedding at Durwood Broadhead's Grocery the other night. A young fellow rushed in the store to see if Mr. Broadhead knew where he could find a Justice of the Peace. After a few questions it was learned that the boy was acting for a couple parked outside in an automobile. Mr. Broadhead told them to come on in and he would fix it up. While the lad was informing the 'wedding party' Mr. Broadhead called M. D. Foshee and had him come down to the store and there among the beautiful groceries the ceremony was performed. Mrs. Broadhead and Mrs. Moore, the witnesses got a big kick out of 'attending.'

We're not doing bad. Last Friday a resident of Jemison drove all the way from Birmingham to Clanton to get us to print him some syrup labels. He had taken a load of syrup up there, but couldn't sell it until it was labeled. So instead of having them printed in a city shop he brought them back home. Now that fellow is a booster and what we need in Chilton County is more like him. Chilton County money spent in Jefferson County doesn't help Chilton County at all.

We got a letter just today
That didn't have so much to say
But what it said sure meant a lot
To all the folks that Buck has got.

He reached the States on Christmas Day
Just how he did he didn't say
It didn't matter so he came
To be with folks who're just the same.

They've waited long for such a day
For heart to laugh, and love and play.
But somehow life has stood 'at ease'
Since Uncle shipped Buck overseas

But now the glory and the dust
Has settled round the German lust
To kill and main their fellowman—
The same is true in far Japan.

May war's grim shadow never come
To our shores, and may the sun
Shine peacefully on sea and foam
We're happy now, 'cause Buck is home.

ENGAGEMENT OF MYRA JOHNSON ANNOUNCED

Mrs. Napoleon S. Johnson announces the engagement of her daughter, Myra, to William Crawford Young, of Livingston, Ala. The wedding will take place January 18th, at Clanton.

MR. CHAS. W. BURGESS

Mr. Charles Wesley Burgess, age 64, of Clanton Route 1, died Thursday at 4:35 a.m. December 20. The remains were carried by Spigener Funeral Home to Ridouts Funeral Home in Birmingham, where the funeral was held at 2:00 p.m. Friday; interment was made in Elmwood Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife; one son, H. B. Burgess of Clanton Route One; four brothers—Luther Burgess of Birmingham, Sidney Burgess of Ohio, Ed urgess of Cullman, Ala., Riley Burgess of Florence, Ala.; one sister, Mrs Dora Shoemaker of Cullman, Ala.; three grandchildren.

STAGGS - LOWERY

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Staggs of Clanton Route 1, announce the marriage of their son, Edward Calvin Staggs, to Miss Johnnie Mae Lowery of Birmingham, Ala. Rev. J. L. Thomas of Birmingham performed the ceremony.

The groom was recently honorably discharged from the U. S. Navy after serving some three years in the South Pacific.

The couple will make their home in Birmingham.

PRICE CONTROLS REMAIN ON POULTRY

Pressures on poultry prices will not permit removal of price controls at this time, the OPA District Director in Montgomery said today.

A thorough investigation of the poultry situation revealed that prices paid to producers for live poultry of all kinds are still pressing ceilings in many areas, Mr. Jones pointed out. As for wholesale prices, light turkeys and heavy fowls press on ceilings in the greatest number of areas, he added.

Although recent prices have shown some weakness, as they always do at this time of the year, Mr. Jones explained, a study of seasonal trends on poultry prices shows that the low point comes in October and rises to a high point in May.

On Alabama farms there should be more cows freshening in the fall. This means more cows should be bred during December and early January.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Electricians met a problem in the Vinery Building at Norfolk, Va., in getting a wire through a crooked pipe that was 197 feet long. They tried blow-pipes and other schemes but all failed. Finally one man walked up with a large mouse in his hand, and tying a thread to the hind leg of the mouse he shoved him into the pipe head foremost. The mouse went scurrying through the pipe and was soon at liberty at the other end, dragging the thread behind him. A twine was tied to the thread and pulled through. Then the electric wire was tied to the twine, and it was pulled through. It takes thinking to solve problems and that is why some men succeed while others fail. Try thinking before you say, "It can't be done."

A seamstress was engaged to do some sewing in the home of a wealthy woman, and she worked faithfully at her job. For a week she was served milk and crackers at the noon hour. Then one morning she heard the lady of the house ordering half a chicken for her pet dog for its dinner, and the seamstress arose, folded up her sewing and walked indignantly out of the house never to return. If she had to eat milk and crackers while she worked for the lady and the filthy little pup did nothing and was fed chicken, it was time for her to quit and she did. We do not have to go very far before we can find people who are more thoughtful of a pup than they are of folks.

I knew a man who had a boy and a dog at his home. All day this man was busy in his office, and when his duties were over, he would go home and say "Hello" to his boy, and then dress to carry his dog out for an outing. He had a line that he snapped to his dog's collar, and together they went for exercise and fun. On his return home the boy would meet his dad and the dog and inquire if they had a good time. That made me indignant. It was all right for that man to think well of his dog, but it was not all right for him to let the pup supplant his own son in his time and companionship. Many a mother is seen to be nursing a dog and petting a pup, when their duty calls for them to be loving and training their own child. Shame on mother or dad when the pup of the place is preferred above the child of the home.

FEDERAL SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Montgomery, Ala. — Pending amendments to the Federal Social Security Act, and need for a Federal Department of Welfare, were among matters emphasized at the recent meeting of public welfare officials in Chicago, according to Miss Loula Dunn, Alabama Commissioner of Public Welfare. Miss Dunn was re-elected president of the American Public Welfare Association, composed of State and local public welfare administrators at this season.

"Pending Federal amendments," Miss Dunn said, "would change the basis for Federal grants in aid to states for public assistance from the present dollar for dollar matching to matching on the basis of the State's economic capacity. As a low income state, Alabama, therefore, would receive a larger share of Federal funds. These amendments also would provide Federal funds for all needy groups and Federal aid for medical care to the needy, among other things, thus again benefitting Alabama. Though these are but some of the trends toward strengthening welfare programs and preventing increased need, they are indicative of the outlook which lies ahead."

Considered also at the session was the prowing wave of juvenile delinquency and means of combatting it, as well as the needs for providing medical care for the indigent, and more adequate facilities for nursing care of aged and handicapped people.

Food specialists recommend starting all vegetables in salted water. Salt improves the flavor, and when you add salt at the beginning, it helps green vegetable keep their color.

World cotton stocks are the largest on record, amounting to 26.5 million bales (of 478 pounds) at the end of last July. This total compares with 26.1 million bales in 1944, 24.1 million in 1943 and 22 million in 1939.

RATION CALENDAR

Sugar Shortage

Immediate validation of the next sugar stamp in time for holiday meals would probably result in a severe shortage later, OPA said today.

Replying to stories of warehouses reputedly "bulging with sugar," OPA revealed that a survey of December 1 showed that present sugar supplies in the Southeast, rather than being plentiful, are in fact 16 percent less than at the same time last year. Additional receipts for the next two months are expected to be considerably below those for the corresponding period a year ago, which indicates the critical shortage will continue.

"The turn of the year will find only 300,000 tons of sugar available from Cuba and Puerto Rico in 'carry-over' stocks from the preceding crop," it was explained. This is a 70 percent drop from the 1,000,000 tons available last January 1, and the Department of Agriculture, which allocates sugar to OPA for civilian rationing has not indicated any expected increase in the near future.

The validation of the next sugar stamp at any time prior to January 1 would be "deliberately inviting a disastrous shortage later on," OPA stressed.

Citrus Products Free From Control

Beginning this week, processed citrus products wil lbe suspended from price control for an indefinite period Irby A. Jones, OPA District Director said today.

This action was taken, since the abundant supply of citrus fruits available from this year's crop will enable processors to put up the largest pack of processed citrus in history, Mr. Jones explained. Compulsory government set asides have been discontinued and government requirements from this year's marketings represent only a small percentage of the amount taken in recent years.

OPA therefore does not expect the average prices of processed citrus to increase, he pointed out, although the conditions surrounding the marketing of perishable fresh citrus did increase after price suspension. Mr. Jones added that conditions surrounding the marketing of processed citrus are not affected by weather, seasonal demand and transportation shortages.

Mr. Jones said taht a close check will be kept on the level of prices which result from this action and that price control on these items may be reinstated if prices rise above the level of ceilings.

"Token" Round-Up-Last Call

Announcing the extension of the period for the return of red tokens until January 5, the District Director urged retailors, wholesaler, and primary distributors to turn in promptly all the red tokens in their possession.

"The return of tokens since the meats and fats rationing program ended November 24, has been slow," Mr. Jones said. "We are extending the time limit, originally set for December 12, to give all members of the trade ample time to comply with the requirement. Because consumers hold only a few tokens, they are required to return them."

Tokens need not be counted and may be placed in regular token boxes, envelopes, or any type container for return to the ration bank, he added. Their surrender is necessary before OPA and the trade can wind up all matters pertaining to the terminated program.

RECKLESS DRIVING SHOWS INCREASE IN STATE

In carrying out their intensive drive against improper lights, the Alabama Highway Patrol reported 109 arrests for that offense during November. Van B. Gilbert, director of the Department of Public Safety, announced today.

A total of 1,006 arrests were made by the patrol last month, representing an increase of six per cent over the 944 apprehensions reported during October.

Clyde C. Sellers, Chief of the Highway Patrol, pointed out that arrests for improper lights had climbed 38 per cent since the beginning in November of the patrol's drive to curb this traffic hazard. "Patrolmen will continue the drive as long as improperly lighted vehicles endanger the safety of Alabama motorists during hours of darkness," he said.

Reflecting a rise of 23 per cent, reckless driving figured in 206 apprehensions during November. Other violations that showed an increase were no flags or flares and hit-and-run drivers, listing 12 each, and driving while intoxicated, accounting for 191 arrests.

Eight arrests were made for improper parking and 71 for violation of carrier laws, also reflecting an increase. Passing a vehicle on the crest of a hill and on a curve were two traffic violations that listed four arrests each.

Driving without a license remained highest on the violation list, with 253 arrests.

A delicious way to sweeten breakfast grapefruit is to fill the hole in the half, left by cutting out the white center, with strained honey. Then set the fruit in the refrigerator overnight. By breakfast time the honey will have penetrated all sections of the fruit, giving it even sweetening and a delicate honey flavor

he spent most of a Saturday going to town and back in a buggy. We can pretty nearly span the continent in that time now.

The horse and buggy are gone; the rail fence is gone, but human nature is still much the same. In these days, as in those, friendships count in business.

We are proud of our long list of friends on this New Year of 1946—a list that has been growing steadily with the years—and want to express this word of thanks as we send you our New Year greetings.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Our Wish for You

EVERYONE

is included in our wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year —wishes which are drawn from the deep, pure wells of hope.

You have helped make the past year a most pleasant one for us. Mindful of this, we have but one thought as we enter 1946 ... to be fully worthy of the confidence you have reposed in us.

CITY GRILL

"Home of Good Food"

JOE MADDOX AWARDED BRONZE STAR

T-Sgt. Joseph W. Maddox, Clanton, Ala., has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal, it has been announced by Brig. Gen. Charles W. Lawrence, commanding general of the India China Division, Air Transport Command.

The India China Division is completing, by homeward movements of freight and personnel, its war mission of trans-India, India-China and intra-China transport. It has made air history by flying cargo and passengers in regularly scheduled day-and-night transit over routes once virtually unuseable, primarily the famed Hump. Its war contribution, say aviation leaders, has provided far-reaching portents for the future of air transport on a world-wide scale. July, 1945, saw 71,000 tons cross the Hump, while at the moment of Jap surrender the rate was nearly two tons a minute.

YES, I REMEMBER-- YOU THREW THEM DOWN THE STAIRS FOR ME TO PRESS
BLONDIE, WILL YOU PLEASE PRESS THESE PANTS FOR ME, WHILE I SHAVE?
WELL, WHERE ARE THE PANTS YOU WANT ME TO PRESS?
I THREW THEM DOWNSTAIRS-- DIDN'T YOU GET THEM?
I SAW YOUR PUPPIES RUNNING UP THE STREET, WITH A PAIR OF PANTS
OH, MY GOODNESS!
YOU GO THAT WAY AND YOU GO THAT WAY AND I'LL GO THIS WAY
YES, I FOUND A PAIR OF PANTS IN FRONT OF MY HOUSE, AS I WAS LEAVING-- I THREW THEM IN TO MY WIFE
THEY HAD HIS NAME AND ADDRESS IN THE WAIST BAND
JUST AS MY HUSBAND THREW THEM IN, THE MAN CAME BY, COLLECTING CLOTHES FOR THE EUROPEAN OLD-CLOTHES DRIVE AND I THREW THEM IN WITH MY DONATION
YOU KNOW WE HAVE LAWS, DONTCHA?

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

LOOK INTO this 2-way help*

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.
